Nebraska would benefit

(c) New York Times

Washington — Calculations based on government figures indicate that the industrial states of the Eastern Seaboard and the Middle West would not fare as well under the Carter administration's proposed revision of the welfare law as would the rural states of the South and West, including Nebraska.

The calculations were made by The New York Times on the basis of computerized data supplied by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

Beer down the drain

Rochester, N.Y. (AP) — More than 6.2 million cans of Genesee beer and ale were opened up and their contents were dumped into the Monroe County sewer system earlier this year because the cans were defective, it was disclosed Tuesday.

The 584,400 gallons of beer and lager had a retail value of more than $1.5 million.

Hijacker gives up

Mendoza, Argentina (AP) — A jobless Chilean bought a toy gun with the last of his money and seized a jet with 78 persons aboard Tuesday, forced the plane over the snow-capped Andes to this Argentine border city, then abandoned plans to fly to Algeria and surrendered, official reports said.

Radio stations in Santiago, Chile, said the pilot of the Lan-Chile plane convinced the hijacker to surrender. No passengers were harmed.

Mondale's 1040 accepted

Washington (UPI) — The Internal Revenue Service has accepted Vice President Walter Mondale's 1976 income tax return as filed, his office said Tuesday.

Cash rejected

Washington (UPI) — The House Agriculture Committee, moving toward a final vote on a bill overhauling the $5.6 billion a year food stamp program, Tuesday rejected a proposal to give eligible needy people cash payments instead of stamps.

The cash-instead-of-stamps plan by Rep. Dawson Mathis, D-Ga., was defeated by a 32-13 vote after critics led by Committee Chairman Thomas Foley, D-Wash., said it might balloon program costs up to $8 billion a year.

Bias against age seen

Washington (AP) — The U.S. Civil Rights Commission said Tuesday it has evidence that federally funded social programs often discriminate against the elderly and that public jobs programs frown on applicants 45 and older.

The commission said a preliminary investigation turned up the evidence of age discrimination in the federal programs.

Alien hoods at work in U.S.

(c) Chicago Daily News

Chicago — A branch of an international crime family composed of aliens smuggled into this country from southern Italy has been operating here with the approval of crime syndicate bosses.

The branch has from 40 to 50 members and has been most heavily involved in narcotics traffic — a racket that the mob's aging rulers have found distasteful.

Existence of the international crime family, headed by Carlo Archino, has been confirmed by the Justice Department and Canadian law enforcement officials, who have exchanged information.

The U.S. immigration and Naturalization Service has turned over documents on the alien hoodlums to federal prosecutors.

In addition to Chicago, the new family has branches in New York City, Detroit, Miami and Albany, N.Y. The New York City branch has about 150 hoodlum "soldiers."

The hoodlum aliens call their family "the Honored Society," investigators said.

The aliens used phony identification papers to emigrate from Italy to Canada and then to Chicago and other cities, investigators say.

The Chicago mob is believed to have used the aliens as hit men from time to time because the aliens have no qualms about carrying out contract murders and "nobody knows who they are," a top federal investigator said.

The crime family is based in Salerno, Italy, where Archino has his headquarters.

Archino has a good working relationship with New York City crime bosses, including Carmino Galante, and the New York chieftains cleared the way for the aliens to come to Chicago, investigators said.

"Galante probably just asked (Chicago mob chieftian) Tony Accardo to leave them alone," the top investigator said. "The aliens coexist with the Chicago mob."

The aliens have become entrenched in the Near West Side where many Italian-speaking persons still reside and have opened a number of pizza parlors, officials said.

The pizza parlors have been used as front for the aliens' highly profitable narcotics traffic, investigators added.

Galante, who has emerged as the new godfather of the New York mob, has specialized in narcotics traffic for years. Galante held secret meetings with Jack (The Lackey) Cerone, a top lieutenant of Accardo, in Chicago and Miami recently.

Investigators said they suspect that stepped up mob involvement in narcotics traffic here was discussed. Cerone and Accardo have told mob associates for years that they found narcotics a distasteful business and may elect to let the alien branch handle and increase in mob narcotics, investigators added.

Investigators said they had suspected that for some time aliens in a number of cities were part of an organized crime group, but really didn't get details until one of the alien "soldiers" in Canada agreed recently to cooperate with authorities there.

In a 27-page handwritten document, the alien spelled out the international crime family's organization and its regulations. The Justice Department was then informed of the new development.

Investigators said Archino's family has a major role in the flow of heroin from France to the United States.

SCC quits bidding battle

By Nancy Hicks
Star Staff Writer

Southeast Community College (SCC) has decided to give up the battle to build a new school in Lincoln using a controversial bidding procedure.

But the college hasn't necessarily abandoned its dream of a Lincoln campus at 86th and O Sts.

The SCC board will not appeal a Lancaster County District Court decision rejecting the design-build bidding system. Under this system construction companies teamed up with architectural firms to submit both plans and cost figures for the $5 million building.

By a 9-2 vote Tuesday, the board agreed not to pursue the legal battle unless one of the four individuals who filed the suit decides to appeal the case to the Nebraska Supreme Court.

"It would not be in the best interest of the college to incur the expense of the appeal," said SCC attorney Doug Curry, who pointed out that the first to file an appeal to the State Supreme Court pays the cost of the district court trial transcript.

Only board members Betty Schlaphoff and G. Alan Dunlap voted against the no-appeal decision.

"I would like to see it go to the Supreme Court. I think we are depriving the people of Nebraska a means of building a building which has proved to be very economical," said Mrs. Schlaphoff.

The court decision does not bar construction of the new $5 million facility but only the bidding method used by SCC last spring, said Curry.

But Curry and board members refused to discuss any plans for constructing that building, originally planned for use in 1978.

"It would be very inappropriate to say anything at this point," said Robert Wekesser, board chairman, after a closed executive session on the lawsuit.

The board also passed a conflict of interest policy during its meeting. The policy goes beyond state law for community college board members and is intended to cover "substantial conflicts," said Curry.

For example, if a board member owns some shares of IBM stock, he would not have to declare a conflict and abstain from voting on payment of a claim for IBM typewriters. However, if he were an IBM salesman, he should declare a conflict and abstain from the discussion and vote, Curry explained.

The board also renewed the three-year contract for area President Robert Eicher and named the women's dorm in Milford Pioneer Hall.

Contract negotiations with the school's teaching faculty has delayed the 1977-78 budget proposal, normally approved at the June meeting. Salaries make up about 75% of the college's annual budget.

Ms. Brauer, SCC board member for north Lincoln district, resigns

Southeast Community College board member Katherine Brauer has resigned from the SCC board after two years of representing the north Lincoln district.

Ms. Brauer, 27, who will be teaching eighth grade English at Millard next year, plans to move to the Omaha area this summer. She won her four-year seat on the SCC board in 1974.

The board vacancy, effective July 1, will be filled through a majority board vote, according to SCC attorney Doug Curry. Procedural details for the replacement have not been worked out, but Ms. Brauer encouraged community groups to submit names of possible candidates to the SCC board.

The fourth district in Lincoln includes most of northern Lincoln and part of the near south side neighborhood, she said.

U.S., Britain avert crisis in aviation at last minute

Washington (AP) — The United States and Great Britain approved a new air transportation agreement early Wednesday, avoiding an interruption of scheduled air service between the two nations, a Department of Transportation official said.

Failure of the two nations to reach a new commercial agreement to replace an expiring 31-year-old pact could have disrupted vacation and business plans of thousands of air travelers.

"We're delighted that we were able to reach an agreement with the British and were able to avoid a cessation of service," said Chester Davenport, the department spokesman.

He said details of the agreement would be made public later Wednesday.

Davenport said U.S. officials received word of the agreement, negotiated in London, about midnight when the old pact was scheduled to expire.

Announcement of the agreement followed an optimistic prediction that chances were "extremely good" for a new pact. The prediction, made by the chief American negotiator at the talks, came only hours after Transportation Secretary Brock Adams said he expected scheduled airline service between the two countries to cease Wednesday morning.

A shutdown would have affected the scheduled flights of Pan American World Airways, Trans World Airlines, National Airlines and British Airways. It would not have involved chartered airline flights or the scheduled flights of other airlines that fly between the two countries, such as Air India, Iranair and El Al.

The supersonic Concorde flights operated by British Airways between London and Washington under a U.S.-approved test program would not have been affected because the flights are involved in a test and are not considered scheduled flights.

The four affected airlines had announced that if there were a shutdown they would reroute their U.S.-London flights to airports outside the two countries. Under that plan, passengers would have been taken to their destinations on other airlines or by charter shuttle flights — a situation that could add hours to flight times.

Before Boyd announced the breakthrough, Adams told reporters in Washington: "Despite more than nine months of negotiations it appears more likely each hour that scheduled air service between the United States and Great Britain will end at midnight tonight.

"The responsibility for this unfortunate action, if it occurs, rests with the British government."

He said it was his "responsibility to advise American travelers of the possible interruption of scheduled air service to London and Hong Kong (a British colony) and to be certain that contingency arrangements are being made by the scheduled carriers and the federal government."

Safety urged as Nebraska enters legal fireworks period

By J. L. Schmidt
Star Staff Writer

America's gala bicentennial celebrations last year apparently took some of the bang out of fireworks — 32 states now restrict their use — but Nebraska skies will start popping Friday.

That's the first legal day for fireworks sales outside of Lincoln, according to Chief Fire Inspector Dale Boettcher of the Lincoln Fire Department. Sales and use of fireworks won't be legal inside city limits until Tuesday, June 28, he added.

Nebraska is one of five states which allows Class C fireworks as approved by enforcing authorities. Sparklers, spray and Vesuvius (from the volcano of the same name) fountains, torches, fire cones, star and comet aerial shells and lady fingers of ⅞" length, ⅛" diameter and containing no more than 50 milligrams of powder, are legal in the city and state. California, Kansas, New Mexico and Washington have similar restrictions.

The smaller lady fingers (firecrackers) are the result of Consumer Product Safety Commission (CPSC) regulations passed in December 1976, Boettcher explained. The decision to make the popular firework less potent probably is the result of one of the bicentennial's least popular statistics — the number of fireworks-related injuries.

For 1976, CPSC said that about 9,000 people suffered fireworks-related injuries. During the bicentennial celebration, June 23 to July 20, 5,600 people were treated in hospital emergency rooms throughout the country.

Lincoln recorded 15 such injuries between June 28 and July 4, the legal dates. The youngest was a four-year-old who "somehow lit some fireworks in his pocket," Boettcher said. The oldest was a 77-year-old who "thought the particular firework was a dud and bent over to pick it up when it exploded," he added.

Burns to the face, eyes and hands were the most common injury. Lincoln hasn't recorded a fireworks fatality since the late 1960s and that was a suicide, Boettcher said. But, numerous grass and brush fires, several small building fires, and a "lot of nuisance calls" have resulted.

Gone are the 130 milligram firecrackers of the past, although some are "probably available, illegally," he added. Retailers caught selling illegal fireworks are subject to a $100 fine and/or 10 to 30 days in jail, according to Nebraska law. Users are subject to a fine of $25, Boettcher said.

"Prevention is the best medicine" for eliminating the fireworks hazards, he added. Adult supervision is high on the list of precautions, with a "bucket of water" ranked second. That water should be used for the wires of dead sparklers, as well as "the final word" for suspected duds.

With skyrocketing fireworks prices, everybody wants to get their money's worth, but Boettcher strongly warns against "bending over or picking up duds." Dousing them with water is preferred.

Boettcher also advises that the hours for fireworks use in Lincoln are enforced. They are legal from 8 a.m. until 11 p.m., and until midnight on the Fourth of July.

Lincoln's fireworks stands must also pass a rigid inspection by the fire department. The tents or stands must be treated with a fire retardant material, and owners and operators are advised to have a fire extinguisher on hand.

Lincoln hasn't had a fireworks stand fire for a few years, Boettcher said. "They are rare, but when they do happen, they don't last very long," he added.

Boettcher suggests the following checklist for fireworks safety:

— Always read the directions.

— Always have adult supervision.

— Never experiment, take fireworks apart, mix anything with fireworks contents of attempt to make own fireworks.

— Always light fireworks outdoors in a clear area away from houses and flammable materials.

— Light one device at a time.

— Keep a bucket of water nearby for emergencies.

— Keep at a safe distance after lighting.

— Dispose of fireworks properly, soak the duds.

— Never allow small children to handle fireworks.

— Always store fireworks in a cool, dry place and avoid rough handling that might damage fuses.

— Always allow enough room for proper function, never ignite in metal or glass containers.

Brezhnev: Arms race most-burning problem

Paris (UPI) — Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev Tuesday said "there is no more burning problem" than stopping the arms race and warned that President Carter's human rights advocacy could renew the cold war.

Brezhnev game a somber toast at a state dinner given by French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing on the second night of the Soviet leader's three-day state visit.

"Peace in Europe," he said, "is threatened with numerous dangers . . . the arms race, which instead of stopping is speeding up, is the principal danger."

"There is no more burning problem," Brezhnev said, "no task more important than the cessation of the arms race . . . the prospect of the dissemination of nuclear weapons throughout the planet, as well as the creation of new systems of mass destruction, constitutes an especially grave danger."

In reply, Giscard said, "Detente does not claim to remove differences and it would be vain to pretend it can. But, with understanding and cooperation, detente offers the means of surmounting these differences and the hope, one day, of passing them by."

Earlier in the day Brezhnev, as quoted by a Soviet spokesman, warned that the Carter administration's statements on Soviet observance of human rights "do not help detente and contradict the Helsinki agreement."

While Brezhnev and Giscard exchanged toasts at the dinner, about 500 Jewish demonstrators chanted "Brezhnev assassin" outside the Soviet Intourist office near the Paris Opera.

Members of the right-wing "New Forces" Party roamed up and down the Champs-Elysees in small groups burning Soviet flags.

Police easily dispersed both demonstrations and no serious injuries were reported, a police spokesman said.

Soviet stubbornness brings conference to complete stop

Belgrade, Yugoslavia (UPI) — The Belgrade conference reviewing the 1975 Helsinki accords came to a "complete stop" Tuesday when Soviet and U.S. delegates deadlocked over rival agenda proposals.

U.S. and Western European delegates to the 35-nation conference blamed the Soviets for the impasse.

"The Russians aren't moving an inch," said Spencer Oliver, a member of the American delegation.

The nations at the preliminary conference are trying to set the agenda for a full meeting this fall to review enforcement of the accords' human rights provisions.

The United States and Western European nations favor an agenda specifically calling for a review of human rights.

Moscow, which wants to keep human rights from becoming the top issue, wants the agenda to call for a review of all Helsinki provisions, including plans for increased East-West cultural and commercial exchanges.

Diplomats who attended the closed-door talks Tuesday said neutral countries were working on a compromise between the Soviet and Western proposals.

But Soviet delegate Yuly Vorontsov reportedly told the conference the Russians saw no reason to change their outline.

Finland suggested the meeting move onto other subjects and return to the agenda later. But the Russians and their allies objected strongly.

"That brought things to a complete stop," one Western delegate said.

Amin murder try sparks killings

Nairobi, Kenya (UPI) — Ugandan troops loyal to President Idi Amin have gone on a "rampage of killings" following an assassination attempt against Amin in which the mercurial dictator was wounded, the Kenya news agency reported.

The agency reported that Amin was wounded during an ambush attack against his car last weekend and quoted sources close to Amin as saying he had been hospitalized in Uganda, thus explaining his mysterious disappearance.

It said hundreds of Ugandans were fleeing to Kenya to escape "certain death" at the hands of Amin's troops.

In Luxembourg, British Foreign Secretary David Owen said Amin "is alive and well" but would not elaborate or give the source of his information.

Uganda radio mentioned Amin for the first time in three days Tuesday night, saying he had received last Saturday the Uganda delegation to an organization for African Unity meeting and thanked them for its work.

Grand Rapids, Mich. (AP) — Lee M. Woodruff, editor of the Grand Rapids Press for nearly 32 years, died Monday. He was 77.

Funeral bandits merit 'special place in hell'

Minneapolis (UPI) — To Corrine Nagovsky and Dexter Shultz, burglars who prey on empty homes during funerals are scum and deserve a special place in hell.

"To the person who broke into and robbed my mother's apartment during by dad's funeral, I'd like to say congratulations!" Mrs. Nagovsky wrote in a letter to the editor. "You go to the head of the class of scum."

Schultz saw the letter to the editor but didn't think much about it. His father died the same day. He had funeral arrangements to make.

Burglars saw the obit, too.

During the funeral of George Schultz, two young men kicked in a door at his mother's one-bedroom house and took a television set.

"There should be a special place in hell for people like that," Schultz said.

"Mother came through the funeral in good shape. We took her home. The door was open. Kicked in. She turned white as a sheet. I grabbed her. She almost collapsed. Drawers, clothes, everything was thrown on the floor. Her color TV — the only thing she had left — was stolen."

"We called the police. Then I remembered the letter to the editor."

Schultz then drove about five blocks to his house.

"Sure enough," he said, "they hit me too. Stole four shotguns, a .22 automatic rifle, some jewelery and an old gold pocket watch belonging to my grandfather. That was worth $500."

For Schultz, the break-in was the second in a week. Burglars took his boat, motor tools, and a couple of old guns from his fishing cabin on Mille Lacs Lake.

One neighbor saw two young men carry a tennis racket to a red pickup truck, but thought it was just friends of Schultz' son. He'd forgotten that the young man joined the Army two weeks ago.

"Going through a funeral is bad enough," Mrs. Nagovsky said. "Then go home and find your house ransacked. That's more that you can stand."

Both Schultz and Mrs. Nagovsky asked the mortuary operators to warn other people.

"But when you get ready for a funeral, a burglary is about the farthest thing from your mind," she said. "What a dirty thing to do."

Next time Dr. Barnard may use chimp's heart

Cape Town, South Africa (AP) — Surgeon Christiaan Barnard said Tuesday the baboon's heart he implanted Monday in a young Italian woman was too small to save her life and he may try a chimpanzee's heart in a future transplant.

The woman's husband collapsed after learning of her death at Cape Town's Groote Schuur Hospital. He was later released, but hospital sources said he was still "very shocked."

Hospital officials refused to identify the couple, citing a South African law prohibiting publication of names of persons involved in transplant surgery without family consent.

Barnard said that, in the absence of a human donor, he attempted the world's first implant of a baboon's heart into a human as a "last resort" to save the 26-year-old woman's life.

She regained consciousness but died 2½ hours after the 10-hour operation. Barnard said the baboon's heart proved too small to carry her circulation when her own heart failed completely.

"I think this is the last baboon transplant I am going to use. I think I will use chimpanzees next time," the 54-year-old South African transplant pioneer told reporters Tuesday.

Coach says Lisa Thomas 'best I've got'

Indianapolis (AP) — Coach Leonard Jeffers has nothing but praise for second baseman Lisa Thomas on his Little League girls' softball team.

"She's not just another player, she's the best I've got," he said.

Lisa, 13, lost her right hand in an accident eight years ago. It has been replaced with a hook.

"I'll try anything," said Lisa, who also swims, skateboards and bowls a 124 average. "I can do anything anybody else can do — at least I'll try my best."

"She's so smooth, it's difficult to tell she's operating with just one arm," said Jeffers.

Haldeman goes to California jail

Associated Press

H.R. Haldeman, the second most powerful man in Richard Nixon's White House, went to prison in California Tuesday, surrendering nearly a day earlier than scheduled to be punished for his Watergate crimes.

John N. Mitchell, also ordered to report to prison Wednesday, stuck to the schedule and planned to surrender at the Maxwell AFB federal prison facility in Alabama by the noon deadline.

Haldeman walked into the prison at Lompoc, Calif., at 3:55 p.m. CDT, donned a gray prison uniform and was placed in a dormitory with 30 other prisoners.

But first, the man who once was gatekeeper to the Oval Office, was assigned a prison number, fingerprinted and photographed.

"He will be routinely processed through the prison camp's receiving unit during the next couple of weeks," said Gary Aldinger, a prison spokesman. "He will receive a physical examination and be classified to determine his work assignment program."

Prisoners at Lompoc, as at Maxwell, are assigned to landscaping and grounds maintenance, a farm, or to a furniture factory.

Both Haldeman and Mitchell are under 2½-to-8-year sentences for their parts in the cover-up of White House involvement in the Watergate affair.

Never before have men who held such great national political power gone to prison: Haldeman, the man who ran the Nixon White House, a convicted perjurer; Mitchell, the first attorney general in history to be convicted of criminal acts.

By reporting early, Haldeman apparently tried to avoid reporters, but newsmen were on the scene.

Haldeman was the 24th man caught in the Watergate web to enter prison. Mitchell will be the 25th and probably the last.

For Haldeman, it was exactly 28 months from the day he, Mitchell and domestic aide John D. Ehrlichman were sentenced by U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica.

He and Mitchell carried their appeals all the way to the Supreme Court, where they were denied a hearing. They have asked the court to reconsider, but chances of that are slim. No one was closer to Nixon, the fallen president, than these two men. Mitchell had been Nixon's law partner and the director of his two successful presidential campaigns. Haldeman had worked in Nixon campaigns since 1956, devoting himself to the task so completely that people said if Nixon hadn't had a Haldeman, he would have had to invent one.

Moon's church not Christian

New York (AP) — A new study by top Roman Catholic and Protestant theologians says the Rev. Sun Myung Moon's Unification Church has a right to exist but cannot be considered a Christian church.

The study, released by the National Council of Churches, was begun a year ago "to clarify the claims to Christian identity made by the Unification Church," it says.

Although the 11-page report concludes that Unification beliefs depart from the basics of Christianity in many ways, it also said the church has a constitutional right to exist and warned against using the report "for arbitrary or punitive purposes."

The study said it found these differences between the Unification Church and traditional Christian doctrine:

— While Christians believe redemption is possible for everyone, the Unification Church teaches that individuals and nations can be classified as "heavenly" or "satanic."

— Christians believe the Bible is supreme, but the Unification Church believes Moon's revelations supersede the Bible.

— Members of the Unification Church believe that Jesus Christ failed as a savior because he died on the cross and that "The Lord of the Second Advent," who many believe is Moon, supplants Christ.

The study committee was composed of members of religious faiths ranging from Roman Catholic to Southern Baptist. The conclusions in the report were based on a study of Moon's book, "Divine Principle," which expresses his church's doctrines.

$28 rebate approved by tax committee

Washington (AP) — The House Ways and Means Committee voted Tuesday for special $28 federal payments to most adult Americans to be financed by President Carter's new tax on crude oil.

As approved by the committee, the "rebates" are likely to be extended through 1981 at amounts ranging up to $80 per adult. A couple would receive $440 over the four-year period.

The rebate scheme was approved, 19 to 17, over solid Republican opposition as part of Carter's energy-tax program.

The vote authorized the special payments only for 1978 to adult taxpayers and Social Security and welfare recipients. But the tax that will pay for the payments already has been voted for 1978, 1979 and 1980 as well as the first nine months of 1981.

By voting the rebate for only one year, the panel would allow Congress to repeat the process again next year, an election year. An administration official said he would be shocked if the rebates were not approved ultimately for the entire life of the crude-oil tax.

The tax would bring in $4.6 billion for the special payments in 1978, and $37.3 billion over the 3¾ years. The payments would be $28 per adult in 1978, $54 in 1979, $81 in 1980 and $57 in 1981.

The "rebate" idea was proposed by Carter to prevent any severe effect on the economy as a result of the stiff tax he wants imposed on domestic crude oil. The tax, starting next Jan. 1, would be used to raise U.S. oil prices to the world market level.

F18 alive; O'Neill uses pressure

Washington (AP) — Defense Secretary Harold Brown has tentatively approved a Navy recommendation to keep alive the F18 fighter plane program, a Pentagon spokesman said Tuesday.

"The secretary made the decision on the technical merits of the case," spokesman Thomas Ross said when asked about a report that House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill had exerted strong pressure to prevent the Navy from scrapping the planes in favor of another fighter, the F14.

The F18's engine is produced at a General Electric Co. plant in O'Neill's home state of Massachusetts. The F14 is produced by the Grumman Arrowspace Corp. of Bethpage, Long Island.

Senate committee votes to let U.S. pay for some abortions

Washington (UPI) — The Senate Appropriations Committee voted Tuesday to allow use of federal funds for abortions where the life of the mother is in danger and in certain other cases.

Other instances where funds could be used would be:

— Where the mother has multiple sclerosis or renal disease "or other diseases which would seriously deform or debilitate the fetus."

— For the termination of ectopic pregnancy, an abnormality which is fatal to the mother.

— for victims of rape or incest.

In all other cases the government would be prohibited from using federal funds for performance of abortions.

By a vote of 16 to 8 the committee attached these provisions to a $60.7 billion appropriation bill for the Departments of Labor and Health, Education and Welfare, which is expected to come up on the Senate floor later this week.

The House, in passing its version of the bill, included a flat ban on use of federal funds for abortions under any circumstances.

House opposes saccharin ban

Washington (UPI) — The House voted Tuesday to block for at least one year the Food and Drug Administration's proposed ban on saccharin.

Rejecting arguments the move was unwise because of new evidence linking the artificial sweetener with cancer, the House approved by standing vote an amendment which would forbid the FDA from using federal money to promulgate or enforce the ban through Sept. 30, 1978.

The provision was attached to a measure carrying $21.7 billion to fund the Agriculture Department and related agencies for the new fiscal year starting Oct. 1.

The House then approved the overall bill, 380 to 35, and sent it to the Senate.

Senate favors tougher safety laws for miners

Washington (UPI) — The Senate voted Tuesday to toughen federal health and safety laws for coal and hard rock mines in a move proponents considered critical because of President Carter's plan to double coal production.

Final passage of the legislation came on a 78-18 roll call vote after the Senate rejected several Republican-sponsored weakening amendments.

The legislation, which has yet to pass the house, would also transfer enforcement of federal mine safety laws from the Interior Department to the Labor Department July 1, 1978, and bring hard rock mines under stronger standards for coal mines.

The administration and organized labor strongly supported the bill, which would affect an estimated 212,000 coal miners and 274,500 hard rock miners.

Nebraska GOP no different: status quo hurts at polls

Former Nebraska Governor Norbert Tiemann, one of the better heads of the state in recent years, concluded on a visit in Lincoln that his old Republican party here is in a shambles. One might conclude from that that something has happened to the GOP to cause it to change, to run down at the heels.

Not much, really, has changed with the GOP and that is why it is in a shambles, if it is. We are not willing to concede the shambles bit but it is unusual that anyone would use such a term for Nebraska Republicans, as the party was king of the state for so long.

But it is a party that, in its leadership, has clung to the things and principles of the past. Maybe they were good things and good principles in their day but they have had it and will not be returning.

The GOP has suffered its recent defeats at the polls not because it has disintegrated, as Tiemann suggests, but because it has failed to change. It has been a party of old ideas, for one thing.

More importantly, it has been a party of intolerance. It has always been that, failing to welcome into its ranks any but those who swallowed its doctrinaire conservatism hook, line and sinker.

There was a time the GOP could win almost at will at the polls, despite its shortcomings. That was because it held such a wide margin of registered voters over the Democrats and because its principles were more in tune with more people than they are today.

The Democratic party, however, has narrowed the voter edge and the times have changed. The vast majority of state and national problems that exist today did not exist even 10 years ago but the Republicans have generally failed to address themselves to those problems.

It will be interesting to see the positions taken in coming months by GOP gubernatorial candidates in such areas as higher education, water conservation, environmental preservation, energy utilization, land use control, health care and others. And then it will be interesting to watch the GOP gubernatorial primary results.

Perhaps this is what Tiemann meant when he talked of the GOP as being in "a total shambles." Perhaps it is exactly what he meant — that the party is in a shambles as a result of its failure to address the times.

The 'bickering' goes on

Precious little leadership has been exerted recently by anyone on the Lincoln City Council toward the end of more harmonious relations between council members and the mayor.

Veteran council member Bob Sikyta, who prior to the recent city elections was one of those who decried "bickering" in city government, remains one of the chief mischief-makers.

As an example, Sikyta badgered Mayor Helen Boosalis Monday for allegedly failing to defend council members against critics and he told the mayor to replace her nominee for a City Personnel Board slot with his own choice. Apparently Sikyta's idea of harmonious relations in city government is for the mayor to take abuse with a smile, no matter the acrimonious provocations from some council members.

With regard to the personnel board vacancy, the council will vote to confirm or reject the mayor's choices — but it should be remembered that the mayor does have the power to propose appointments. And it is a general rule in civilized legislative-executive relationships that barring an obvious lack of qualifications or an objective finding of moral unfitness, executive appointments are confirmed.

If Sikyta wants to dictate his choices for membership on city boards and commissions, he should run for mayor.

For one of the two vacancies on the personnel board, Mrs. Boosalis has nominated Betty Wilhelm, who works for the University of Nebraska. The mayor thinks it is important to have a woman on the board "since large numbers of our work force are women."

Sikyta is joined in his opposition to Ms. Wilhelm's nomination by new council member Leo Scherer, who thinks all members of the personnel board should come from private industry. Scherer, who in a post-election statement last month said he could work with the mayor, has opposed her recommendation to extend Personnel Director Walt Mitchell's employment by a year, and now is crossing swords with her on the personnel board appointment for what do not appear to be valid reasons. These are not striking demonstrations of "togetherness."

We see nothing in Ms. Wilhelm's gender or place of employment which would disqualify her from serving on the city personnel board.

What we do see in the latest flap is disturbing evidence that some council members do not intend to let up in their attacks on Mrs. Boosalis, not for a minute. The heralded end of bickering will not come, it appears, before the next city elections.

Fatigue plagues truck industry

Jack Anderson

Washington — Those thundering, 18-wheel trucks you encounter on the highways may be driven by men who are physically fatigued from too many hours on the road.

A pounding tractor-trailer, with an exhausted man at the wheel, is a menace to the other traffic. The grim statistics indicate that the accidents he may cause will kill 30 auto passengers for every trucker who dies.

Yet the trucking companies, plagued by higher gas prices and lower speed limits, are driving their semi-trailers slower and their men harder. We have been bombarded with complaints from truck drivers who claim they're working 15-hour days and 70-hour weeks.

This is permitted, incredibly, by antiquated government regulations. Some companies push their drivers to the exhaustion point, a practice known in trucking circles as "maximum utilization."

"They wring every ounce of work from you," a North Carolina driver told our reporter, Tony Capaccio. "For every 70-hour week you log in, it might have actually taken 100 hours to accumulate."

Complained another veteran of the road: "They don't give you a chance to be rested. I was in the Korean War and had more time to myself than now."

Spokesmen for the trucking industry said the economic impact would be "ruinous" if the government should limit the work week of truck drivers. There is no evidence, they contend, that the long hauls pose a safety threat. They cite studies indicating that most trucking accidents occur in the first three hours of a shift.

This, however, is questioned by Transportation Dept. experts, who are worried about weariness on the highways.

Some 165 postal supervisors, with nothing better to do, have been shadowing postmen on their routes. The supervisors have been instructed to walk behind the postmen, presumably at a discreet distance, to evaluate the length of postal routes.

Thus, on some selected routes, householders have been getting two postal employees for the price of one. This has not, unfortunately, improved mail services. But it has given 165 supervisors, who had been declared surplus, something to do.

First, the excess supervisors were hustled off to Norman, Okla., for training in route examination. Then they were flown to scattered towns to follow postmen around.

To the best of our calculations, these supervisory walkathons have been costing the taxpayers about $50,000 a week. One supervisor provided us with his itemized expense account. Each week, he drew over $100 to pay his hotel bill, another $90 for a weekend flight home, still another $90 per diem. This was paid, of course, on top of his $18,000 annual salary.

A spokesman acknowledged that the Postal Service has been shadowing postmen — the better to learn about their problems, he said. He would not confirm our $50,000-a-week figure but agreed our calculations appeared close to the mark. He insisted, however, there were not always 165 supervisors in the field. At this writing, he said, only 60 men are involved in the project. As for its value, he said: "It's better than having them sitting around in their post offices and doing nothing."

Congressmen are grumbling privately over the Federal Communications Commission's (FCC) failure to crack down on televised sports.

Both ABC and CBS have been implicated in alleged payoffs to athletes. A Baltimore grand jury is inquiring into the alleged rigging of a recent boxing tourney, promoted by entrepreneur Don King and televised by ABC. CBS has been charged with paying the losing players in a tennis tournament billed as "winner-take-all" matches.

Both networks maintain complete innocence; any illegalities, they say, were not their doing.

But behind the scenes, the House Communications subcommittee is critical of the FCC's handling of the investigation. The subcommittee has been informed that the FCC has left it up to the network executives to conduct their own internal investigations. The commission won't intervene, according to government sources, unless it is dissatisfied with the network's results.

"We won't accept any investigation like that," snorted a House staff member. The subcommittee, therefore, will conduct its own intensive probe.

Key posts affect lives of people

Tom Wicker

New York — President Carter is now confronted with two decisions, each of which is about as important as any he will make. He has to choose a new director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, presumably from a list of five names submitted to him by a special commission; and he has to decide whether to appoint a single director for all the various agencies loosely known as "the intelligence community."

Probably no two officials — should Carter decide to name an "intelligence czar" — would have more power over the lives of individual Americans. And at that, their power often would be invisible or unrealized at the time by those affected, and not subject to political check by the voters — unless at one remove upon the man who appointed such powerful officials. And at least the FBI chief, with his 10-year term, would serve more than one administration.

Of the two choices Carter must make, picking the FBI director is simple by comparison, though scarcely less important.

Obviously, for the FBI, Carter needs a man whose performance will restore public confidence in an agency once ranked with Mother and the flag, but in recent years wracked by charges of illegal procedures, improper political surveillances and invasions of citizens' rights. Just as obviously, the new director will need to rebuild agent morale and restore the bureau's effectiveness as an investigative agency. For many years, owing mostly to the rigidities and political obsessions of J. Edgar Hoover, the FBI simply has not been as good at its basic mission as it ought to be, or as it has pictured itself.

Both tasks will be complicated by the forthcoming trial of a former agent — and perhaps others — on charges of having broken the law while supposedly enforcing it. Yet, that seems necessary to the third major task of a new director — bringing bureau operations under the rule of law, while keeping them out of partisan or ideological political control.

While it was in some ways disappointing, there is one good thing to be said for the rather surprising anonomity, outside their own communities, of the five men the commission suggested to Carter. None of them appears likely within a 10-year term to build himself into the kind of public monument Hoover became, with bureaucratic and political power that made him virtually unchallengable even by presidents.

Very much the same considerations apply to the proposal of Stansfield Turner, the director of the CIA, that the intelligence community — including the National Security Agency and the defense and state department intelligence units — should have a single chief unaffiliated with any of the component agencies. The difference is that Admiral Turner presumably would get the post; Carter has to decide on the organizational principle rather than pick the man.

Disclosures of CIA misdeeds and illegal operations, plus some by the NSA, have given the whole intelligence community a bad name, and no doubt produced morale problems; so this, too, is a rebuilding job, both internally and externally. And as in the case of the FBI, the CIA and the other intelligence agencies must be brought within the rule of law but not the control of politicians.

Both the FBI and the intelligence agencies, not incidentally, may be facing much closer congressional oversight than in the past. Sen. Daniel Inouye has set a good example by announcing that he will resign after this year as chairman of the new Intelligence Committee; a rotating chairmanship will help guard against co-option of the committee, which is engaged in writing new charters for the FBI and the intelligence community.

Two objections to Turner's "czar" proposal are obvious. One is that such a prestigious and powerful position might produce another unchallengeable ikon in the Hoover and Allan Dulles mold; the other is that such a "czar" might suppress dissent and unorthodox views within the intelligence community, thus limiting the advice and information reaching the President.

But Sen. Gary Hart, for one, believes from his work on the Intelligence Committee that the community probably has been speaking with too many voices, through too many channels. And the single-director concept does offer the possibility of more efficiency, greater control, less duplication and a more useful synthesis of all available intelligence information.

Carter should beware, however, of relying too much on his apparently high regard for Turner. There will be other directors in administrations to come; so important a job, if it is created, should not be tailored to one man but to the intelligence needs of the nation.

Disturbing news on inflation front

By Leonard Silk

New York — Geoffrey H. Moore, director of business-cycle research at the National Bureau of Economic Research and former U.S. commissioner of labor statistics, thinks most economists are being too optimistic about the trend of inflation. The common view, inside and outside government, is that the current trend of inflation is about 6 per cent; and the standard forecast is that, prices will rise somewhere between 5½ per cent and 6½ per cent in 1978.

But Moore estimates that consumer prices are now trending upward at an annual rate of 8 per cent. And, on the basis of his analysis of past business cycles, he believes that the rate will rise further — until the economy slides into its next recession.

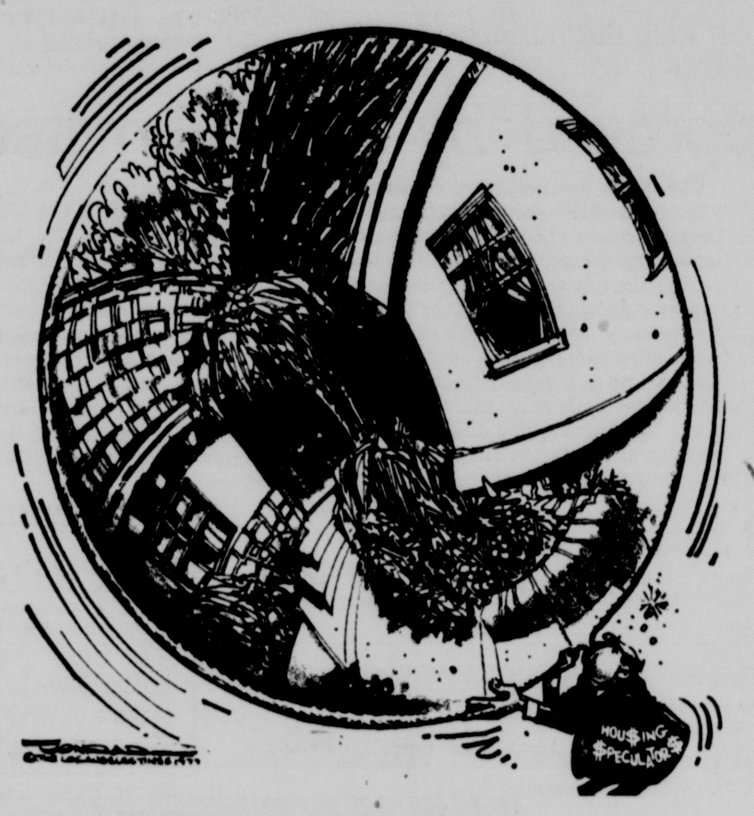
Consumer prices tend to lag behind the business cycle. The current business-cycle expansion is now in its 27th month. But inflation has been rising for only 14 months — an unusually long lag — and presumably has a way to go yet.

Moore uses as his basic measure of the rate of inflation a six-month moving average of consumer prices, centered on the third month.

By this measure, the rate of inflation of consumer prices reached a double-digit peak of 12.6 per cent in July, 1974. The inflation rate then dropped to a trough of 4.7 per cent for the six-month period centered on April, 1976. It has since climbed back to 8 per cent for the six month period centered on January, 1977.

"We've come a long way from the bottom," says Moore. "In fact, we've covered more than a third of the distance back up the downhill road that we traveled from July 1974 to March 1976."

This does not mean, he adds, that the current upswing must move the inflation rate all the way back to the "unseemly" double-digit levels of 1974. "It may or may not," says Moore.



But most of the eight upswings in the inflation cycle since 1948 have lasted two or three years, so this one may have a year or two to go.

Skeptics about Moore's 8 per cent and moving up estimate question whether he has not overestimated inflation in the past six months because of the unusually severe winter and the run-up of food prices. He doesn't think so. He asserts that, in the upswing of a business cycle, rising demand lifts highly sensitive food prices. He sees no early downturn in prices of food at the retail level.

United States Department of Agriculture forecasters agree. They expect food prices, which rose by 5 per cent from December 1976 through April of this year, to increase by 8 to 10 per cent in 1977, measuring from last December to next December.

Of that rise, they predict, about half will be due to higher costs for imported foods and fish; one-fourth to increased marketing charges, rising costs of labor and petroleum, and one-fourth to higher prices for domestically produced foodstuffs.

Harold Hjort, an economist at the Department of Agriculture, says it's really too early to predict how much food prices will go up in 1978. Much depends on the weather.

If the weather in 1978 is good, Hjort said, food prices might go up only 5 to 6 per cent; if the weather is bad, food prices could soar at double-digit rates.

Moore's anxiety about the economy is intensified when he looks at the relationship between total unit costs of production (including labor costs) and industrial prices.

That cost-price relation was one of the key tools developed by the late Wesley C. Mitchell, the founding father of the National Bureau, to explain upturns and downturns in the business cycle. When prices were rising faster than costs, he found, the economy expanded; and when costs rose faster than prices, profits fell and expansion turned into recession.

Moore's calculations show that the prices charged by nonfinancial corporations rose faster than their total unit costs through 1975 and the first three quarters of 1976, as profits and output received. But total unit costs have been rising faster than prices since late 1976. Measured against the same quarters a year ago, units costs rose at an annual rate of 6 per cent in the first quarter of 1977, while prices of nonfinancial corporations rose by only 5 per cent.

When these cost-price relations are measured as changes from the preceding quarter, the results are even more discouraging. In the fourth quarter of 1975, unit costs rose at an annual rate of 9.3 per per cent, while prices went up only 5.4 per cent. In the first quarter of 1977, costs outclimbed prices by 7.1 per cent to 5.6 per cent.

Double standard strikes raw nerve

Ellen Goodman

Boston — This is not one of those issues I've been dying to jump right into. Like any other World War I buff, I get nervous around people who are sure that God is on their side. I'm always afraid that somehow or other they'll send me to the trenches.

In any case, there were some advantages to having been an observer while the argument over gay rights rotted away in the Florida sun. When the vote was in, I remembered why the founding fathers never held a referendum on the Bill of Rights. Since then it's become clear that Anita Bryant's main victory has been to single-handedly coax the bigots out of the closet.

As an observer, it's also been fascinating to compare the attitude of the homophile electorate of Dade County, Florida with that of the sexist judge of Dane County, Wisconsin.

In Florida, a civil rights question — did homosexuals have equal rights to work and housing? — deteriorated in public to a sexual pervert question: Should homosexuals be allowed to convert or seduce small boys? Having so redefined the question, it's no wonder that the voters came up with such a definite answer.

But wrapped inside the hysteria were some odd assumptions, not the least of them being that all homosexuals were male. (At issue was clearly the vision of a flamboyant, promiscuous, and dangerous gay male. The children to be saved were boy children.)

The Save Our Childrenettes seemed to have accepted the idea that sexuality is a matter of choice. This is an idea pushed, curiously, only by the most ardent gay activists. They feared that heterosexual boys could be converted by the mere presence of a gay coach of the high school football team. Their attitude suggested that sexuality, one of the most deeply rooted aspects of personality, was as trendy, as open to chance and change, as taste in clothes.

The facts, of course, are to the contrary. Dr. Mary Calderone, the president of the Sex Information and Education Council of the United States, says that "no one who was programmed by five years of age to be heterosexual can be seduced to be homosexual any more than the reverse. Think of the efforts that have been made through the ages by heterosexuals to seduce homosexuals."

But the second gut fear promoted in Florida was that the average male homosexual was at least a potential child molester if not a downright rapist. In fact, child molesters and rapists are pariahs to the gay community, just as they are to the "straight" community.

Moreover, the homosexual child abusers just don't hold a chance against the heterosexual competition. Statistically speaking, child molesting begins at home. But even outside the family, the victims are, by a vast majority, girls, abused by men.

I would have been a great deal more impressed with the sincerity of the Save Our Childrenettes if they had been more concerned with the major sexual crime in the country: heterosexual rape.

Which brings us back to Dane County, and the courtroom operated by Judge Archie Simonson. While the referendum beat went on in Florida, in Madison, Wisconsin, this purveyor of blind justice let off a 15-year-old rapist who had joined with two others in assaulting a 16-year-old girl.

His reasoning, if you may call it such, was that the misguided young fellow had merely been reacting "normally" to the provacative, scanty clothed lasses frolicking about these days. As he told People magazine: "My gosh, even in court they appear in see-through blouses without bras. You can see their nipples!"

In short, the judge ruled that girls are asking for it. Now, close your eyes for a moment and imagine him still on the bench if the victim had been a 15-year-old boy well known for wearing his jeans too tight.

The comparison between the northern and southern counties tells us something. In Dade County, a homosexual is considered a pervert in the act of looking for a job and he's a potential rapist if he wants housing. In Dane County, a heterosexual is considered normal even if he's a rapist.

This double standard is explained most appropriately by our friendly neighborhood judge, who is, of course, convinced that God is on his side. "I've struck a raw nerve," he admitted. "But women are sex objects. God did that; I didn't."

I guess it's back to the trenches.

IRS challenge: millions would applaud

Ralph De Toledano

Washington — There has been some less-than-kind talk in this gossipy city about the audit being made by the Internal Revenue Service of President Carter's tax returns and those of his mother and brother.

The assumption is that IRS would not be poking its long and insensitive nose into the affairs of the President of the United States unless there were something pretty obviously wrong with his return.

I do not know — and neither does any other Washington reporter — what prompted IRS to act. But I am not particularly impressed by the mere fact that the President is undergoing an ordeal which so many of us have been subjected to — sometimes merely to satisfy the bureaucratic ambitions of an IRS staffer who feels that the way to rise is to make the life of as many taxpayers as possible unhappy.

The last time I was audited — and I devoutly hope that it will be the last time — an unpleasant young man presented himself at my office, questioning one item in my return. This could have been disposed of in perhaps a couple of hours. But he proceeded to rummage through all of my records, attempted to determine my net worth, and at one point asked me how much money I usually carried around in my pocket.

He also wanted to know how much I spent for food and other expenses which are of no concern to the Internal Revenue Service. I told him politely that none of this was any of his business, whereupon he presented me with a questionnaire, prepared by IRS but highly improper.

At the present time, I am watching with some interest IRS shenanigans involving a woman who has been deprived of her tax refund. It is the position of IRS that it will not budge until she gives them facts she does not have about the tax return of her ex-husband.

Unless the ex-wife is in some way involved in how he filed his return — and IRS knows that she is not — she cannot in any way be penalized for her former spouse's alleged improprieties.

But since IRS takes the position that it is above the law, very little can be done.

It is basic to American law that an individual is innocent until he is proved guilty. But when IRS moves against a taxpayer, he is presumed guilty until he has demonstrated his innocence — and the courts have justified this on the basis of a unique and intolerable concept that the burden of proof rests on thee and me because otherwise the tax system would not work.

If IRS jumps on your back, you cannot point to the due process clause of the Constitution. And if IRS challenges you and then takes two or three years before it gets around to your return, you pay interest on the money it claims.

If, however, IRS proves to be wrong, it pays you no interest on the money it has withheld.

So I am not impressed by the audit of Jimmy Carter's 1975 return. And I hope that if he proves to be right, he will knock some heads together. But, of course, he won't. Should he do so, there would be outcries that he is using the power of the presidency against our tax inquisitors. His advisers will tell him that to act against IRS is bad public relations, but they are wrong. Millions of Americans would applaud.

Dr. Omniscient answers the mail

Russell Baker

Dear Doctor: What has become of the generation gap? I haven't seen it for years and suddenly discover that I miss it.

(signed) Over 40.

Dear Over 40: The generation gap died ignored and heartbroken in the poverty of an East St. Louis flop house four years ago. An autopsy ascribed death to an onset of 30th birthdays on the gap's younger side, which drastically reduced the vital flow of contempt juices necessary to keep the over-30 population inflamed. As the younger side of the gap begain finding it increasingly ludicrous never to trust anybody over 30, the gap became languid and idle, lost its sense of purpose and started drinking.

Simultaneously, the gap's older side developed a violent seizure of Watergate syndrome, characterized by an insatiable craving for titillation about government corruption. In alarmingly brief time, the gap lost all interest in itself and expired of acute pointlessness.

Fortunately, it was saved from a Potter's field burial and has been removed to the Smithsonian Institution in Washington for stuffing and mounting. It will eventually be displayed between two other distinguished relics of the American past, the incredibly boring leisure-time crisis of the early 1960s and the Metrecal-for-lunch bunch.

Dear Dr. Omniscient: Is the sexual revolution now over, and if so, who won?

(signed) Really Out Of It.

Dear Really Out of It: Despite a few mopping up actions still in progress, such as Mayor Beam's campaign to bottle up massage parlors at Yorktown, the sexual revolution is now history. There were two important results.

One, if you are a girl and insist that the boy marry you, you are now a counterrevolutionary. From this point of view, the boys won.

Two, the birth rate has dropped considerably, indicating that sex is becoming a social time-killer like television. From this point of view, both sex and television lost.

Dear Doctor: After 30 years of not reading the comic strips, I have recently resumed and am appalled to see that Dick Tracy seems to be wearing somebody else's mustache. Is it Mutt's or Jeff's. And what does it mean? Has Tracy sold out to the hippies?

(signed) American.

Dear American: The mustache Tracy is wearing used to belong to Major Hoople. It is composed of fabric taken from the tassel of Major Hoople's fez.

Dear Dr. Omniscient: I see where Ramses II, the well-known mummy, has had his fungus infection cured by doctors in Paris and has been sent back to Egypt with a clean bill of health. What kind of a society is this that can cure fungus in a 3,000-year-old mummy but can't even cure the common cold?

(signed) Disgusted.

Dear Disgusted: The answer to your question is quite simple. The mummy didn't have the common cold. It had fungus. If it had been suffering from a cold, how do you know society couldn't have cured it? Vintage mummies may not be as resistant to cures as you are.

If my reply seems curt, it is because your phrasing of this query shows a profound ignorance of the proper way to ask disgusted questions. The only approved form for asking questions of this variety is as follows:

"How come a country that can go to the moon can't even cure the common cold?" There are millions of variations. "How come a country that can go to the moon can't even keep the streets clean?" for example. Or, "How come a country that can go to the moon can't even get the mail cross town in less than three days?" Et cetera.

The answer to all these questions is that there is absolutely no correlation between skills required to go to the moon and those required to clean streets or deliver mail, just as there is none between the skills required to cure a mummy's fungus and your runny nose. If all Dr. Omniscient's correspondents asked questions as dumb as yours, the march of knowledge would soon become a sore limp.

(signed) Dr. Omniscient.

Arms race at the local pub

Mike Royko

Chicago — This was the scene a few nights ago in the Glenshesk Tavern, a place that sometimes features Irish singers, and is popular among off-duty policemen.

Four men were sitting together and talking at the bend in the U-shaped bar.

Sheldon Waxman, lawyer and former federal prosecutor, was having a drink with a friend a few stools away from the four men.

A few other lone drinkers were scattered down both sides of the bar.

The place was quiet. Waxman recalls what happened next.

The door opened and a little guy walked in, took a seat, and ordered a drink.

A few minutes passed. Then one of the group of four men got up and walked over to the little guy. He was much bigger. He bellowed:

"What are you staring at me for?"

The little guy looked surprised and said: "Huh?"

The bigger guy said: 'What in the f - - - are you staring at me for?"

The little guy, obviously flustered, got off his stool. Suddenly they were pushing and shoving and wrestling around, although no punches were being thrown.

The little guy, clearly being out-tussled, pulled away and headed for the door. As he went out to the street, he turned and shouted:

"I'll be back you mother - - -. Who the hell are you to bother me, you - - -?"

And out the door he went.

Sure enough, he was back in a few minutes. But this time he wasn't alone. He was accompanied by a pistol, clasped in his right hand.

He burst in, waving the pistol, in the direction of the four men, and said:

"You mother - - -, I'm going to kill you."

The four men obviously believed he was sincere. They scrambled off their stools and almost knocked each other down in their rush to get out a back door.

A couple of other customers who weren't even involved hot-footed out the front door.

Waxman said he, too, would have left, but he was too scared to move. So he just sat there and hoped the angry little man would forget about shooting someone.

The little guy shoved the pistol in his hip pocket and said:

"That - - -. Who does he think he's shoving around?"

Then he apologized to the bartender and the other customers for the disturbance, sat down, and resumed having his drink.

Waxman slowly began to relax.

Then the door opened again. This time it was one of the men who had rushed out when the little guy came in with his gun. Not one of the four men who started the whole thing. This was one of the bystanders who had ducked out.

And now he had a big black pistol in his hand. Waxman says it was the most massive pistol he ever saw in his life.

He walked over to the little guy, pointed the gun at the little guy's forehead, and yelled:

"This is a REAL gun. This is a 357 Magnum. That's a REAL f - - - gun!"

The little guy stared at the huge gun and said: "Who the f - - - are you?"

The other guy said: "I'm a cop."

The little guy said: "I'm a cop, too."

The other guy said: "From where?"

The little guy said: "I'm from the 20th District. Where are you from?"

The other guy said: "I'm from Lincolnwood."

The little guy said: "Lincolnwood! Then you don't have any f - - - jurisdiction here. Get your ass out of here."

So the other guy shoved his 357 Magnum into his belt and left.

When Waxman was satisfied that nobody else was going to pull a gun, he got up and quietly left.

Before he did, he noticed one other thing.

"Nobody phoned for the police."

I don't blame them. It might have touched off World War III.

Long-time Malone resident worried

Today's Mail

Wants to stay

Lincoln, Neb.

We are Malone area homeowners. Homeowners should be allowed to keep their homes.

About 10% of the homeowners in the Malone area are close to retirement age or have already retired. Most of our homes are paid for and are tax exempt. We absolutely cannot start over buying another home on Social Security income. Some of us get a small retirement income, but it is still impossible to start over again.

My wife is ill with chronic bronchitis and sinus. If every precaution is not taken she will develop emphysema. She must live in an air-conditioned, humidity-controlled, electronic air filtered home. I am sure that there are other people in the Malone area who have their homes prepared, remodeled and maintained for a special purpose as our home is.

We selected and bought this home 31 years ago because it was close to schools, church, grocery store and walking distance from the main part of town.

Careless carriers?

Lincoln, Neb.

Why doesn't the circulation department watch their newspaper carriers?

I have been in several parts of Lincoln and the paper carriers leave the paper wrappers or the wire laying on the sidewalk. The wire could hurt someone. Some wrappers and wires are stuffed in the storm sewers. There are trash cans. Why don't the carriers take their trash to them?

Let's keep Lincoln beautiful.

L.N.

Editor's note: The circulation department has a regular and ongoing program of instruction for carriers in the proper disposition of wrappers and wires. Additionally, route supervisors make routine checks of all routes in an effort to encourage such proper disposition of waste material.

With 980 carriers, explained the department, it is difficult to guarantee that none of them will ever improperly handle this material.

Fine Heart teams

Lincoln, Neb.

Many cities cheer about their "911" mobile heart teams, but none can be finer than the crews we have here in Lincoln.

It is time that everyone stood up and gave our teams the recognition they deserve — especially our professional, dedicated firemen.

Thank you, one and all.

Service slips

Lincoln, Neb.

I am disgusted by the declining level of service in Lincoln.

Retail service is lousy — clerks are inattentive, thoughtless or sometimes just plain rude.

Repair services — take TV or cars for example — are just as bad. Nothing is ever done correctly or on time.

Whatever happened to pride?

Warrant needed to open luggage seized in arrest

Washington (UPI) — The Supreme Court ruled 7 to 2 Tuesday that law enforcement officers must get a search warrant before opening luggage seized during an arrest.

Chief Justice Warren Burger, speaking for the majority in a Boston case, said once narcotics agents had seized a double-locked footlocker, it was "unreasonable to undertake the additional and greater intrusion of a search without a warrant."

"No less than one who locks the doors of his home against intruders, one who safeguards his personal possessions in this manner is due the protection of the Fourth Amendment warrant clause," Burger wrote.

Justice Harry Blackmun, in a dissent joined by William Rehnquist, charged that such rulings "make criminal law a trap for the unwary policemen and detract from the important activities of detecting criminal activity and protecting the public safety."

Blackmun said the court should stop making "hairline distinctions" that are litterally impossible for officers to apply in the field, and adopt instead "a clear-cut rule permitting property seized in conjunction with a valid arrest in a public place to be searched without a warrant."

Amtrak officials in San Diego who watched Gregory Machado and Bridget Leary load a 200-pound, double-locked footlocker on a train May 8, 1973, told federal narcotics agents it was leaking talcum powder, often used to mask the odor of marijuana.

When the train reached Boston, a police dog detected marijuana inside the footlocker.

After Joseph A. Chadwick joined Machado and Miss Leary, and they placed the footlocker in the truck of a waiting car, agents arrested all three and seized the footlocker. Without obtaining a search warrant, they opened it 90 minutes later and found marijuana inside.

The three suspects were indicted, but a U.S. District Court and the 1st U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled evidence against them had been obtained improperly and could not be used at trial.

Prices rise, but no so fast

Washington (AP) — Consumer prices went up last month at a slower pace than in April, and the Carter administration said Tuesday it expects further improvements in the pace of inflation in the coming months.

The Labor Department reported prices rose 0.6% in May, down from April's 0.8% pace, as the rise in food prices moderated.

"We consider that improvement to be good," said White House Press Secretary Jody Powell. "We expect to see further improvement in the coming months."

Powell called the May figures "a significant decline" from the first four months of the year, and said it shows the administration's projection of a 6.7% inflation rate this year will be pretty much on the mark.

But the Republicans saw it differently, with GOP Chairman Bill Brock calling the price report "more devastating news" and said the figures showed "galloping inflation again in the month of May."

Prices increased 4.8% in all of 1976, but surged at an annual rate of nearly 10% during the first quarter of this year. Prices rose at a 8.4% annual rate in the latest three months.

In January, consumer prices rose 0.8%, followed by a 1% jump in February, a March rise of 3.6% and 0.8% in April.

The administration had said the earlier acceleration of inflation was only temporary, resulting mainly from the effects of the severe winter weather on food and energy prices.

Food prices rose 0.7% in May, about half the 1.5% rise in April. The Labor Department said this was largely due to a 13.5% drop in fresh vegetable prices last month.

Analysts predict a further slowdown in food price increases as summer crops come in, provided farmers have favorable weather.

Coffee prices have begun declining in recent weeks at the retail level, but the drop came too late to be reflected in the May reports. Instead, the figures showed ground coffee jumped another 10.3% in May while instant coffee rose 7%.

In a separate report, the government said real spendable earnings — that is, take-home pay adjusted for taxes and inflation — increased 0.1% last month. Over the year, however, real earnings were down 0.4% because of higher taxes.

Drugs sold as daytime sedatives to be banned; you risk drowsiness

Washington (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration announced Tuesday it intends to ban the sale of drugs packaged as non-prescription daytime sedatives because they cause dangerous drowsiness.

However, an FDA spokesman said consumers would be able to buy the same ingredients under different labels, such as nighttime sleep aids.

"Users of these products run the risk of being drowsy during the day, when they may be operating automobiles or other dangerous machines and need to be alert," said FDA Commissioner Donald Kennedy.

"Given this risk and the absence of any demonstrated medical benefit, there seems to be no justification for the continued marketing of these products," he told a Senate subcommittee investigating non-prescription daytime sedatives.

An FDA spokesman, Wayne Pines, said, "We're not removing the ingredients, we're removing the claim from the labels."

Pines said the brand names of the products could still be used, if they were relabeled as nighttime sleep aids.

Kennedy said he knows of no evidence that the non-prescription daytime sedatives lessen anxiety or otherwise provide sedation other than drowsiness.

There are several hundred daytime sedatives sold over the counter. Among the major sellers are Compoz, Cope, Miles Nervine, Tranquium and Quiet World.

Labeling and advertising for daytime sedatives usually describe them as a "calmative," for the relief of "simple nervous tension," or a "sedative."

An FDA spokesman said daytime sedatives are similar chemically to nonprescription sleeping aids. "The difference is the way they're promoted," he said.

Twins get sentence

Flint, Mich. (AP) — Harold and Darold Burton, who look alike and like to do things together, have matching problems.

Both have served prison terms for burglary and their police arrest records are nearly identical.

Now a judge has sentenced them almost identically.

The Burtons, 24, are identical twins.

Urban sprawl target

Sacramento, Calif. (AP) — A California phenomenon almost as famous as the state's freeways and smog — its suburban sprawl — is drawing fire from state planners.

In a report one official calls a "blueprint for saving California cities," they are recommending controls on suburban-oriented building that has caused the state's metropolitan areas to mushroom since World War II.

The report is the most recent criticism of urban spawl, which has been a prime target of environmentalists who see suburbs posing an increasing threat to California's prime agricultural land.

Critics also say that it's more costly and energy wasteful to provide services for suburbs, which in California often creep out over deserts and mountain areas far from the center of cities.

Prepared by Gov. Edmund Brown Jr.'s Office of Planning and Research, the draft "Urban Development Strategy" contends that continued population growth is inevitable in the Golden State.

But it says much can be done to save open space and farm lands and avoid the severe decay that has hit some older Eastern cities.

"This is a managed growth report, not a no-growth report," said Bill Press, OPR's director. "We do not say stop it, but better manage it."

The plan cites estimates that the state's 21 million population will jump by four million to eight million by the year 2000, with much of that growth in urban areas.

Without controls, the San Francisco Bay urban area is expected to be three times as big in 1990 as it was in 1970. During the same period, the size of the Los Angeles metropolitan area is expected to double.

Both urban areas were five times as big in 1970 as they were in 1945.

In an attempt to slow that expansion, the plan recommends three priorities: Maintaining existing neighborhoods, developing vacant urban land and then developing land immediately adjacent to urban areas.

To carry out its priorities, the plan recommends 46 steps, about half of which require legislative action. The others could be done with an order from the governor or a department head, Press said.

Probably the most important of those is one that would require cities and counties to direct construction to vacant land within urban areas and contiguous to it in an effort to avoid "leap-frog development."

Local government can do that, Press said, "just by the way they exercise their building permits and secondly by which areas they are willing to provide public service — streets and sewer hookups."

Press says he thinks enforcement of such a law should be left to citizens and environmental groups instead of requiring the state to monitor local actions.

"I don't see the role of the state as being the policeman for every local planning decision," he said. He added that cities and counties that did not follow the law would be "open season for citizen or environmental groups who want to take them to court."

Other recommendations include:

— Giving top priority to transportation needs in already urbanized areas.

— Allowing a five-year moratorium on property tax increases for housing rehabilitation.

— Requiring cities, counties and special districts to put greater emphasis on maintenance and rehabilitation of their facilities.

— Boosting taxes on profits made from the quick resale of housing, a step designed to discourage speculation which many officials blame for much of the sharp increase in housing prices.

— Encouraging industry to develop in designated areas and studying the possibility of pooling part of the property tax revenues from such new development among surrounding local governments.

Such industry centers could also help slow urban spawl by discouraging industry from joining the flight to suburbs along with urban workers, Press said.

If boss likes golf, don't play tennis

Minneapolis (AP) — If the boss plays golf, don't take up tennis.

If you're a woman, look feminine but not provocative in most organizations.

In an ad agency, dress far out but expensive.

If you're a bank employe, wear traditional, conservative clothing.

Those are some of the tips given by Blaine Cooke, professor of management at the University of Minnesota, on how to make the most of office politics.

He and a colleague, Prof. Bruce Erickson, have designed an experimental night course for masters of business administration students and may offer it to day students later.

Cooke, a former vice president for marketing with Trans World Airlines, says that sometimes the infighting can cost a person a job. For instance, he said, one executive for a major national corporation was credited with much of the firm's success.

Cooke said the richest, largest companies often are more political because there is more money and power tied to advancement. He also gave these views:

—Companies involved in reorganization and those regulated by government are apt to be intensively political.

—Universities, hospitals, schools and government agencies usually have more politics than businesses.

—Highly competitive businesses are less political.

Swiss general dies

Bern, Switzerland (AP) — Lt. Gen. Eugen Studer, former chief of the Swiss air force who resigned when the government dropped plans to buy U.S. fighter-bombers, died of a heart attack at his home in nearby Muri. He was 64.

Burglars intent on target

Burglars apparently knew what they wanted when they broke into Quality Petroleum Company, 951 W. O St., sometime during the weekend.

Police said they broke into the building and stole $450 in currency and receipts from the main file cabinet.

Yet, $200 in a nearby desk was not taken, police said.

Reaction favorable

Tokyo (AP) — Tom Quinn, special assistant to California Gov. Edmund Brown Jr., said the reaction from Nissan and Honda, two of Japan's leading automobile manufacturers, to opening an assembly plant in California was very encouraging.

Sagan sure somebody's out there

Ithaca, N.Y. (AP) — Carl Sagan is a pioneer in the search for life beyond Earth. He's pretty sure somebody is out there; he has even written messages to residents of other worlds.

Sagan is no fanatic who believes flying saucers are about to land. The Cornell University astronomer is probably the world's best known exobiologist, or expert in the study of extraterrestrial life.

The articulate, long-haired professor in a turtleneck is familiar to millions of television viewers as a commentator on space efforts. In a recent interview, he said:

—The first discovery of life in other worlds probably will be made by radio.

—The most likely places to find life in the Solar System are Mars, Jupiter and one of Saturn's moons. But we may have to explore one million stars by radio to locate other life.

—He is worried about a "dreadful gap" in the space program in the 1980s, because no efforts were planned in the '70s.

Even though no extraterrestrial beings have been found, Sagan said this is the most exciting time for an explorer like himself.

"This is by far the best time to be alive," he said. "Two centuries from now it will all be discovered. It will all be dull. In two centuries we will know everyhting about the Solar System. Except for a few out of the way places, it will all really be discovered.

"Now we don't know. We are the only generation in hisotry to start out not knowing to wind up knowing?"

It's important to know if there's life elsewhere in the universe, Sagan said, insisting it's not farfetched to expect to find thousands of advanced civilizations in the Milky Way alone.

Associated Press

Carl Sagan

. . . he's no fanatic.

But no matter how many civilizations might exist, discovery of life elsewhere should not lower its value here, he said. "The reverence we are taught as children to have for all life has a very good basis. The best way to drive that home is to find life elsewhere."

Intelligent creatures from other planets probably would not look much like Earthlings, but they might think the way we do, Sagan said. "To survive, you have to come to grips with the universe as it is."

At 42, Sagan is widely recognized in scientific circles Although best known as an astronomer, he recently completed a book on the evolution of human intelligence, "The Dragons of Eden."

A Brooklyn native, Sagan holds four degrees from the University of Chicago. He was awarded the Medal for Exceptional Scientific Achievement by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

Recently, he headed NASA's team that analyzed data from the Viking landing on Mars. He also helped select the landing sites. And it was Sagan who convinced NASA to include messages in its space probes in case they were recovered by intelligent beings on planets of other stars.

Sagan helped design the messages, using mathematical and scientific symbols he hoped would be universally understood.

But Sagan said now he is worried about the slowdown in the nation's space program. "At the end of this decade and the beginning of the next decade, we're just not going to be going anywhere," he said. "The Soviets have been pretty much alone in exploring the moon since Apollo."

The cost of sending men into space may be too expensive to justify and may not be efficient, Sagan said.

"Manned exploration of the moon was a tremendous technological achievement, a credit to the heroism of the astronauts, and, I am sure, a political victory. But it is not, in my mind, the most cost-effective way to find out what the moon is about.

"Ever since I was a little kid, I wanted to go to Mars and see what it was like. Nobody knew. I would dearly love to visit Mars and lots of other places. But it is not socially conscionable to spend one Vietnam War's worth of money to do it," Saga said.

"It's the next best hing to send an intelligent, capable and obedient machine to do your exploring for you, and it's a hundred times cheaper."

An even cheaper way to search the stars for life is the radio waves, he said. "We have perfectly adequate technology to receive messages from thousands of light years away. That is a distance which encompasses hundreds of millions of stars. It is far and away the most effective method we have of detecting advanced civilizations.

"But they have to wish to communicate with us," he went on. "They have to be sending messages our way, and those are big ifs. But the point is that only one has to have that motivation."

So far, scientists have radio-explored about 1,000 stars, Sagan said, explaining that a million stars should be radio-explored before an adequate sample is considered.

Meanwhile, Earth has been sending radio waves into space since the beginning of the television era, Sagan said. Broadcasts of "Howdy Doody" reached the nearest star years ago, he said.

Sagan has become a popular spokesman for the scientific community in its dealings with the public on complex space issues. He says it is important that the public understand scientific issues.

"There are a lot of borderline, pop, pseudosciences around — I think in part due to the unsatisfied curiosity and a need to understand things, which I think science provides, if only it were taught better.

"Astrology. I've looked at it. It doesn't make any sense. It is simply wrong. There is no data for it. My feeling is that the survival of the species depends on a tough-minded acceptance of the world as it really is," Sagan said.

Carter says he may use veto

Washington (UPI) — President Carter advised congressional leaders Tuesday that he may well have to veto some bills this year, and expressed displeasure over a Senate move to add $880 million to the money bill for the Labor and Health, Education and Welfare Departments.

"He said he hoped he didn't have to veto anything this session, but he doubted" he would be able to avoid it, Senate Republican leader Howard Baker told reporters after congressional leaders conferred with Carter.

Praising the President for "sort of singing our song" on reduced federal spending, the COP leader said Carter asked Congress "to use restraint" in passing legislation that exceeds administration spending goals.

Clean burning of coal possible

Des Moines (UPI) — Pollutant-free coal burning is a real possibility, says Dr. V. Stephen Krajcovic-Ilok.

Krajcovic-Ilok, Washington, said he has developed a process with which he can produce a coal which will burn residue-free.

"Under my grinding process, it is possible to remove most of the pollutants from coal including much of the organic sulfur. It would make it a form of super-fuel," he said.

This "super-fuel" is obtainable by crushing coal down to 4 microns in size, he said.

Administrative, interim appointments at UNL are recommended

By Nancy Hicks
Star Staff Writer

Lovitt

Schwendiman

Andrews

The University of Nebraska Board of Regents will consider a series of interim and new administrative appointments for the University of Nebraska-Lincoln at the Saturday meeting in Scottsbluff.

Douglas S. Zatechka of East Lansing, Mich., is being nominated as UNL director of housing effective August. 1.

Zatechka, who has been serving as associate director of residence hall programs at Michigan State University, holds a Ph.D. in higher education administration from Michigan State.

Zatechka, 34, began his career in student housing as a residence hall advisor at Wisconsin State University in Oshkosh. He has served three summers as head counselor for a National Science Foundation residential program for 135 gifted students in natural and social sciences.

The author of numerous articles on residence hall operation, he taught a course on the fundamentals of student leadership and leadership management at Michigan State.

Robert L. Lovitt, UNL comptroller since 1974, will be recommended for an appointment as assistant vice chancellor for business and finance as a part of a reorganization plan.

Under Dr. Miles Tommeraasen, vice chancellor for business and finance, Lovitt will work in the areas of fiscal and business operations management, including physical plant, personnel-risk management, business management, comptroller, budget operations and analysis and auxiliary enterprises.

The regents will also be asked to name Dr. Gary Schwendiman as the interim dean of the College of Business Administration and Dr. Ned S. Hedges as interim vice chancellor for academic affairs.

Schwendiman, now assistant dean, earned his Ph.D. in social psychology and M.S. in experimental psychology at Brigham Young University.

Current Dean, Ron L. Smith, has been named dean of the School of Business Administration at Georgetown University in Washington, D.C.

Hedges, assistant vice chancellor for academic affairs since 1972, joined the UNL staff in 1959 as a graduate assistant in English. He holds a B.A. degree from Nebraska Wesleyan and an M.A. and Ph.D. from Nebraska.

Vice Chancellor Adam C. Breckenridge, announced his intention last fall to return to teaching and research in the political science department.

Larry Andrews, currently associate dean of the NU graduate college is being considered as acting assistant vice chancellor for academic affairs in place of Dr. Hedges.

And Russell C. Nelson, professor of mechanical engineering, will succeed Dr. Andrews as acting associate dean of graduate students. Dr. Nelson served in a similar capacity in 1976.

The regents will also consider the appointments of four new departmental chairmen.

The nominee for chairman of the Marketing Department, is Ira J. Dolich, a faculty member at the University of Pennsylvania.

Robert H. Hurlbutt III, professor of philosophy, is being considered for chairmanship of the Philosophy Department in the College of Arts and Sciences.

Sheldon Stick, associate professor of speech pathology and audiology, is nominated as chairman of the Speech Pathology and Audiology Department in the College of Arts and Sciences.

Robert D. Brown, professor of educational psychology and measurement, is being considered for the chairmanship of that department in the Teachers College.

Several organizational changes at UNL being proposed to Board of Regents

Some old programs may get new names at the University of Nebraska Regents meeting in Scottsbluff Saturday.

The Regents will be asked to approve several administrative changes including a combination of health with physical education and recreation and abolishment of the Department of Poultry and Wildlife Science, both at UNL.

The Nebraska Center for Health Education, which contains both academic teaching and research programs in the public health area, will be moved into a new school of Health, Education and Recreation, under the UNL reorganization plan.

The programs will not be changed, according to Ned Hedges, assistant vice chancellor for academic affairs, who said that the move was merely an administrative change to put the Center under some UNL structure.

In the past the Center has not been aligned under any college on the UNL campus, though there have been ties with the NU Medical Center, he said.

The new school, which will replace the Center and the department of physical education and recreation, will be a part of the Teachers College.

Under a plan to discontinue the Department of Poultry and Wildlife Science, the poultry personnel and budget would be merged with the existing Department of Animal Sciences, while the wildlife staff and programs would join the existing Department of Forestry.

The UNL administration is also recommending a name change to Department of Forestry, Fisheries and Wildlife under this new plan.

This reorganization will eliminate some teaching duplication, reduce administrative requirements and imporve working relationships among scientists according to information given to Regents by the UNL Institution for Agriculture and Natural Resources.

Regents will also be asked to designate the state forestry services provided by the state forester through the UNL Department of Forestry as a separate entity.

The state forestry program, which includes information and action programs like rural community fire protection, tree production and forest pest control, is part of NU by state law and the state forester is an NU employe.

This program would be called the Nebraska Forest Service and would be a division of the forestry department under the new plan.

The new designation will improve state-wide visibility of the program and understanding of the program, according to information supplied the Regents.

The Regents will also be asked to approve another merger of five similar programs in the Teachers College under a Center for Business and Vocational Teacher Education.

The Center will contain the Department of Business Education, Department of Industrial Education, the office of the Coordinator of Vocational-Technical Education, the Research Coordinating Unit and the office of the Nebraska Advisory Council for Vocational Education.

A 10% increase in student fees at UNL and allocation of student fees for both the Lincoln and Omaha campuses is on the Regents' Saturday list.

The Regents have already approved $3.50 of the proposed $7.50 increase in UNL student fees for use in paying off the debt on the new Nebraska East Union.

The 1977-78 student fee schedule, if approved, will be $70.50, and the $233,475 raised will be distributed among 46 organizations.

The $200,500 in student fees at the Omaha campus will be divided among 16 student organizations.

Regents will also be approving individual salary increases for alla university faculty and staff. The increases, averaging 5½% for faculty and administrative employes and 3% plus $240 for office and service staff will be effective July 1.

'Drought' pine tree marketed

Los Angeles (AP) — Garden store sales of fast-growing pine trees by the "drought six-pack" — and sales to government and business by the millions — could make a jet age Johnny Appleseed of Lloyd Tupper. The tree he markets is adopted from an area of the world where drought is the rule.

Anywhere rain is sparse and trees are scarce appears to be fertile selling ground for the president of Arizona-based Tupper Tree Farms, who flies out of Los Angeles almost every week to some corner of the world to extol the potential of his special breed of pine tree.

He maintains that green vistas, and even forest industries, can be developed rapidly on land where dry and brown are the dominant conditions.

Jim Story, a tree wholesaler in Southern California, says that in sales to homeowners, "we had assumed that rapid growth rate of this pine was its strongest suit. But the most positive feedback has been on the tree's drought tolerance."

Tupper's trees have the trade name Mondell Pine, with a retail cost of $5 to $6 for a 12- to 18-inch tree in a one-gallon container, or about $30 for a larger tree rooted in a seven-gallon container.

Strong smog tolerance also is a selling factor, says Story, whose Pomona Wholesale Nursery distributes containerized trees supplied by Tupper Tree Farms of Sedona, Ariz.

Up to now, most of the business generated for the Tupper operation has been in the Middle East, not far from the Asian deserts and hillsides where the Mondell pine originated. "In Arab countries, which have experienced drought for thousands of years, they are more willing to take a chance on a new tree," says Tupper.

Tupper, 37, no relation to the plastic kitchenware family, thinks there is high potential for "creation of a paper and pulp industry in the southwestern United States." He says his variety of pine needs far less moisture than Douglas fir and Ponderosa pine, but grows to maturity two to three times as fast.

His firm planted 4 million Mondell seedlings last month. When they are lifted in a dormant stage sometime between November and January, most of them are "earmarked for planting in Morocco, Tunisia and possibly Egypt and Jordan," Tupper says.

He's also working on sales to Mexico, where "they are using up their trees so fast they won't have a single stand left in 10 years," he says.

Anti-Ericson forces didn't have cabinet votes firmly in hand

Full Disclosure

Editor's Note: President Sven Ericson, under pressure for his ouster by his political rivals, is forced to disclose that he suffered temporary blindness during his election campaign. Vasily Nikolayaev, Soviet Foreign Secretary who plotted an assassination attempt in which the President was permanently blinded and the head of the Kremlin killed, now has been removed from office in Moscow. Ericson's collusion with the Russians is charged. This is the eighth excerpt from William Safire's "Full Disclosure".

By William Safire

Mike Fong, Secretary of Natural Resources, seated in the West Wing hallway outside the Cabinet room on the day that had already been dubbed "Black Friday" by an expectant press, was not so sure that this cabinet meeting had been a good idea. He had expressed his reservations to Roy Bannerman: the twenty-fivers did not have the votes securely in hand.

The positive decisions of four out of six Cabinet members were needed to remove the President. Fong's vote was one. Curtice's vote, to expiate his growing sense of guilt for the Yalta deceit, was a second. A possibility of the third was Emmett Duparquet, the advocate for the President on the last go-around who had been taken for a fool by his client.

But where was the fourth? Not Lucas Cartwright, now in Reed's place as secretary of defense. Not Zack Parker, a forthright Bannerman-hater from square one, who had succeeded T. Roy Bannerman, Ericson's arch-rival, as secretary of the treasury. And Andy Frangipani at human resources, voting his constituency of the handicapped and the compassionate, was an Ericson stalwart.

"Where's the sense in it?" Fong had asked Bannerman. "If we go in and lose again, Ericson will fire me for sure, along with anybody else who goes against him. Then what hope do we have?" Fong was not looking forward to losing his government job, Bannerman's private guarantees notwithstanding.

"Impeachment, for one," Bannerman had replied. "That's what they impeached Andrew Johnson for — firing a cabinet officer. We'll need every legal ground we can find, if it goes impeachment. Firing you after an abortive 25th Amendment move would be a fatal mistake for Ericson. We have to force him to make mistakes."

For ten days, the Ericson administration had been under a bombardment in the press, in the Congress, and now in the courts, with this morning's indictment of presidential aide Mark Hennessy following Arthur Leigh's testimony, Bannerman inspired, before a grand jury. Suicide, scandal, cover-up, international blundering, deceit, deceit, deceit — the polls showed the American people were fed up with Ericson and his mess. They were no longer sorry for him — after all, hadn't he had brought on his own blindness? Mike Fong was convinced any normal man, under those pressures and with an ounce of patriotism left, would resign.

But Ericson hung in there, politically paralyzed, and stubbornly paralyzing the country. Nichols was no bargain, Fong thought, as the vice president appeared in the hallway for the 4:00 p.m. meeting, but at least the country could operate. Ericson in office was like having no president at all.

"Shall we have another go at it?" the vice president said, leading the others into the room. Nichols took his place at the table, opposite the empty chair of the President's; as the other chairs were filled, Fong was startled to see a strange face sitting

Primitive labor rebuilding temples

Pagan, Burma (AP) — With water buffalo carts and the same kind of primitive labor that built it centuries ago, the Burmese government is trying to restore this earthquake-damaged city to its ancient Buddhist grandeur. The project is being financed by donations from a faithful poor.

More than 5,000 monuments rest on 32 square miles of hot, thirsty plain in central Burma, many dating back to a time when there was "no America and the English were eating raw meat," as one Burmese official put it.

About 1,000 of the structures were damaged or destroyed in an earthquake on July 8, 1975. Deep fissures and cracks ravaged the foundations of temples as old as 900 years. Thousands of square feet of priceless wall paintings crumbled. The tops of towers housing Buddhist shrines broke off.

Hardly had the earth settled when work crews appeared to take emergency measures and people throughout the country offered meager savings and family jewels to help pay for the restoration work.

The neutralist policy of the government of Gen. Ne Win prevents the Burmese from asking for foreign financial help.

A United Nations cultural officer in Bangkok, Thailand, says the restoration effort has been impressive, given the primitive tools and Burma's impoverished economy. But it also has been slow and the Burmese admit that for the foreseeable future only those temples regarded as having special religious, historical and archaeological value can be worked on.

"The salvage of these monuments, which are exceptionally important . . . is a duty for all mankind," wrote Pierre Pichard, working more than a year ago for the U.N. Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO). He surveyed the damage in late 1975 and recommended equipment be provided the Burmese on a bilateral basis or through UNESCO.

Britain, The United States, Australia, Japan and West Germany were subsequently solicited but Burmese archaeologist U Bo Kay said that thus far the only foreign assistance received has been one Land-Rover from the West Germans.

UNESCO's director-general, Amadou-Mahtar M'bow, who visited Pagan last month, later told reporters about his organization's desire to help and talked about Pagan's heritage to the world but came out with no concrete international aid project.

The carts hauling bricks and mortar and men hoisting a bucket to the crumbled top of the famous Shwezigon Pagoda with a pulley wheel seem more like the builders of the 11th century than restorers of the 20th.

But working under a special government committee, the 250 or so laborers and supervisors already have patched up sizable portions of the most famous buildings, sealed wall cracks and taken initial steps to strengthen foundations. The government has set aside some funds for the project and voluntary contributions, many from religious groups, have amounted to 4 million kyat ($570,000), a considerable sum in Burma.

A.J.C. Bone, who has spent most of 30 years studying Pagan, argues that UNESCO's 1976 aid proposals are unrealistic. In a country where even getting a simple spare part for a car is a major task, the cranes and other mechanical devices suggested by UNESCO for the repair work would soon stand idle.

Bone, an Englishman who became a Burmese citizen, suggests that with no modern infrastructure available, a truly comprehensive restoration of Pagan would require a fleet of vehicles, repair shops, new roads, possibly computers and a large number of foreign experts.

President's opponents argue urgency

in treasury's chair. Not Zack Parker, the replacement for Bannerman, but a tall, pasty-faced man he had not met.

"Meeting will come to order," said the vice president.

Lucas Cartwright immediately said "the meeting is out of order until the secretary of the treasury arrives."

"I'm informed that Secretary Parker has been taken ill," said the vice president. "Severe attack of gastroenteritis, which he has suffered from for some time. Since there is no deputy secretary as yet, sitting in his place is the under-secretary for monetary affairs, Albert Hay."

Cartwright argued that the meeting be laid over until the following Monday. The vice president said the meeting could not be postponed without the consent of the calling member, which Fong would not give.

"I suspect foul play," Cartwright said dramatically. "There is going to be at least a suspicion in the public mind that Secretary Parker's food was tampered with. That will cast a shadow over whatever dicision is taken here, especially since it is being railroaded through with such unseemly haste."

"It wouldn't kill us to wait until Monday," said Fragipani, "out of respect to Zack Parker. After all, Zack has never even been to a Cabinet meeting."

"I move the question," said Fong. Why hadn't bannerman told him about the new man, Hay? Was this why Bannerman was so ready to call the meeting, knowing that Parker would be sick? Was Cartwright right about foul play? Fong was just as glad he didn't know.

"Would the attorney general give us a legal opinion?"

Duparquet shrugged it off. "IF Mike doesn't want to accept a delay, that's it."

"I don't," said Fong, "because there is an urgency. Just this morning, to cap off an incredible series of revelations, the President's chief of staff has been indicted on six counts of perjury. The government is in paralysis. The President is not in a condition to act."

"The attorney general presented the case for the President last time," said the vice president.

"I'll defer to Secretary Cartwright," said the attorney general. "He was chief of staff and knows the President's condition better than any of us."

"What are the charges?" Cartwright demanded.

Fong, feeling more confident each moment, said "There is only one 'charge,' as you put it. That is, the President of the United States is unable to fulfill the functions and duties of his office."

"I would like to hear from the attorney general," said Cartwirght. "No evidence has been presented to show the medical incapacity of President Ericson. The burden of proof is surely on the one who makes such a motion."

"Actually not," said Duparquet painfully. "This is not an adversary proceeding. The amendment does not say anything about a 'reasonable doubt.' It's a matter of the judgment of the men here assembled."

"You mean they could take a normal, healthy president, and with no evidence, declare him disabled and replace him with the vice president?"

"They would surely not, nor was that the intent of the legislation," the attorney general said. "But theoretically, they could. If the President objected, he has a remedy in law — he could ask for a reinstatement by the Congress."

Fong looked at Cartwright, pale, shaking, as that good man looked across the table at Duparquet. "Does the attorney general wish to repudiate all he said at the previous meeting of this cabinet?"

"My evidence repudiated me," said Duparquet. In a resigned tone, he ticked off the reasons why he was deserting Ericson: "I told the cabinet last time that no voter could anticipate an act of God, and there was nothing in Ericson's record that would have led the voters to believe he was more prone to blindness than anybody. I thought that was the truth, but it was false. Perhaps someone voted not to remove the President on the basis of that lie. I feel the need to correct that now."

"I move the question," said Fong.

"Wait." Cartwright looked desperate, nearly ill. "Would everyone just wait one moment, to consider with great solemnity the enormity of the deed we are discussing? History does not deal kindly with regicide. You are striking down a president — a president, gentlemen. For the first time in more than two centuries, a small group of men is taking the most awesome powers on this earth from the elected leader of our people and deliberately handing it to another man."

"If we are wrong," said Curtice, "the president has recourse in the Congress. If we are right, and do not act, the people have no recourse."

Fong looked at the vice president, who said "To the vote to remove the President. The secretary of state."

George Curtice said, "I vote Yes."

"The secretary of defense."

Cartwright said wearily, but in a strong voice: "I vote No."

"The treasury secretary."

Albert Hay said, "I did not think this was a decision I should make myself, so I reached Secretary Parker in the hospital just before the meeting. Treasury votes No."

Fong couldn't believe it. The last-minute substitution for Parker, the Bannerman-hater, was not a Bannerman ploy. The treasury secretary must have just been taken ill, that's all there was to it, and nobody in Bannerman's camp had a chance to work this undersecretary over.

"I withdraw my charge of foul play," Lucas Cartwright said mildly.

"Yes." Thank God we didn't try to pressure him, Fong thought; this is one of those guys who responds badly to pressure. Two to Two. We're dead. We need four, and that would leave it to Frangipani.

"The secretary of natural resources."

"Yes," said Fong to his own motion. That's twice he voted on this, and the first time to strike the President down. He cast his vote with the certainty that it would cost him his job.

"The secretary of human resources."

"Yes," said Andy Frangipani.

Silence. "A vote of 'Yes' is a vote to remove the President," said Lucas Cartwright, as if perhaps Frangipani did not understand.

"I know," said the Big Flower, with no expression. "The vice president is now the acting president."

Nobody knew what to do next. Finally, Duparquet said to Nichols, "Mr. Acting President, you have the power to veto the action taken this day by this cabinet. Do you choose to exercise your veto?"

"No," said Nichols.

"Then I would advise you to declare this meeting. . ."

"Wait," said Cartwright again. "In the light of the vote, I would like to propose that we give President Ericson the opportunity to step aside voluntarily, under the provisions of the 25th Amendment. Perhaps that would be more seemly."

They all looked at Fong. He knew that Bannerman would expect him to stick the sword in the loser, to make certain that the world knew Ericson was ejected from office against his will. "I think that's a compassionate suggestion, Lucas. I have no objection. Why don't you go see if that's what President Ericson wants, and he can put it in the form of a handwritten note to the secretary of state."

Cartwright left the cabinet room by the door that led toward the Oval Office. The rest of them sat there, saying nothing, for three minutes. Cartwright returned, a note in his hand, looking oddly cheered:

"President Ericson has given me this message. 'Earlier today, I turned down an offer to purchase the presidency. Now I am turning down your offer to let me resign the presidency. The deed you have done this day — to usurp my constitutional power — will link your names with Benedict Arnold. I will fight your action in the Congress until the powers of the president are once again in the hands of the person the people elected to that post.' "

After a moment, Nichols said, "He isn't disputing our right to take this action, is he?"

"No," said Cartwright. "But he has ordered a mattress to be brought to the Oval Office. If you want the President off the premises, Mr. Acting President, you're going to have to throw him out."

Days full of beer and baseball

Postcard

By Stan
Delaplane

San Francisco — These are the summery days of beer and baseball. (And Anita Bryant's people say San Francisco is a "cesspool of sex"?)

I bought a six-pack of Anchor Steam beer yesterday. Iced it up and drank it, feeling all-American, heterosexual and other good things approved of by the voters of Dade County, Florida.

Having cleaned up Miami, Anita Bryant is about to zero in on the Golden Gate. The gay community is up in arms. And even the sad straights are feeling a shiver of anticipation.

When the Bryants cast their thunderbolts, the innocent may be slain with the guilty.

"Stand up and be counted." A gay groupie carried the sign up and down in front of City Hall. It's a challenge.

☆ ☆ ☆

Steam beer began in the days of gold in the golden West. (When all men were all man, man. If you believe what they say.)

It can be brewed without refrigeration. Thus it became the prime brew of the Gold Rush latter days.

Now they give courses — and credits — in brewing in some of our better colleges.

"Nobody offered me course or credit in beer making," I told the children. "I had to learn by myself."

This was the Prohibition era. And while many of the young beer makers had no taste for the brew, we knew a home chemistry trick or two. We took over and made it for the grown-ups.

It was powerful stuff. Oh, we added a few touches to the recipe. A few raisins here. A little more yeast than the instructions called for.

☆ ☆ ☆

This material was easily purchased. You bought a five-gallon stone crock. And you bought a lot of sugar and a can of malt.

You mixed this up with plenty of water and a few cakes of yeast.

Next morning, your mixture was covered with a head of brownish foam.

You could watch the stuff work. Little yeasty bubbles rose on the surface and went pop!

After about 10 days, you siphoned this all off into bottles. We bought beer bottles and a capper and caps.

You let it stand for two weeks and you had beer.

You had beer but it took plenty of nerve to open it.

The blooming stuff often turned out explosive. You would be sitting around peacefully, thinking of ways to ease off the homework.

Up in the attick, the brew would reach a pressure point. Bang! Bang!

☆ ☆ ☆

Well, this is exactly what we were looking for. A certain excitement. It was the extra yeast or the extra sugar made the critical mass.

"If you put in too little, the beer was flat," I said.

"Put in too much and bang! It didn't blow the cap. Blew the whole bottle."

☆ ☆ ☆

It took a lot of nerve for people to open our beer. The question was would you get the cap off before it blew up in your hand. It was like pulling the pin on a grenade.

Anyway, just as I was getting educated to be Mr. Rheingold, the people elected Mr. Roosevelt.

The first thing he said was that beer with 3.2 alcoholic content was not alcoholic at all. Therefore it was legal. Some people said how could it be alcoholic but not alcoholic. But Mr. Roosevelt just said who was President if he wasn't? And don't obstruct justice.

So the breweries went back to work. And the last of the homemade beer blew up. And the glass was swept up. And our education was over.

Mennonites settling on Texas plain

Seminole, Tex. (AP) — The men toil in the fields, urging crops from the West Texas plain. The women dress plainly and wear no jewelry. The children do their lessons in a one-room ranch house school.

And these pioneers of 1977 speak German. The 600 Mennonites left homes in Mexico and Canada last fall and bought more than 7,500 acres in Texas near its border with New Mexico.

They weren't looking for a new life, said their bishop, Henry Reimer, rather a return to their traditional way of life.

"This is why we come to Texas," the leader of the Old Colony Mennonite Church said. "To get back to the old ways and to keep the kids on the farm and keep their German."

The Mennonites are Protestants, using a German version of the Bible. Mennonites began arriving in this country nearly 300 years ago, settling first in Pennsylvania and later in the Midwest. The larger Mennonite Church, with headquarters in Pennsylvania, lists about 100,000 members in this country.

Texas' new settlers said they hope to bring thousands more to the vast property.

In addition to crops, the colonists have begun a dairy herd and plan to build a cheese processing plant, machine shops and a furniture factory.

Seminole's mayor, Bob Clark, said the Mennonites are welcome. "They take care of themselves, control their children and they are work-oriented," he said. "And for that reason, I am glad they are here."

Dwayne Herman, president of a bank in Seminole, said, "The only negative comment I've heard is that they might not spend as much money here because they are self-sustaining."

The Mennonites have said they will pay local taxes, although they could claim a religious exemption for their church-owned land, until they build their own school system.

Bishop Reimer said he hopes Texas will provide the right atmosphere for the Mennonite children to "learn like we grew up."

"We have to work for our kids — what else do we have to work for? In the Bible it says we should keep them in their mother's language," he said.

In the small schoolhouse, the children (ages 6 to 13) sit on wooden benches, the boys on one side, girls on the other. The Bible is the only textbook. Lessons are in German, with English a second language.

Police forbid women to dress

By Jim Camden
Star Staff Writer

A 23-year-old former Lincoln woman testified Tuesday in federal court that five local law enforcement officers burst into her apartment and forced her and her roommate to remain partially undressed while being questioned.

Cindy Sue Cavender, currently of Portland, Ore., told a jury of five men and one women in U.S. District Court that on the night of July 28, 1975, she heard a dog barking outside her home at 3063 T St. As she started down the stairs inside her apartment to check on the dog, she saw a flashlight shining through the window. She heard the door being broken in as she was running back upstairs.

Miss Cavender testified she was wearing only a T-shirt at the time. Her roommate was wearing a T-shirt and panties.

Law enforcement officers entered the apartment and ordered the two women to go downstairs.

"There was a rifle looking right at me," Miss Cavender said. Both women asked to be allowed to dress, but the officers refused, she said.

Miss Cavender is suing Lancaster County sheriff's deputies Joseph Splichal and Kenneth Jackson, Lincoln policeman Ron Tussing and Nebraska state patrolmen Ron Osborne and Gary Garidori for violating her civil rights. She has asked for whatever damages the court will grant.

One of the main questions to be decided by the jury is whether the officers knocked on the door and announced their presence before kicking in the door. The officers had a valid search warrant, but it was not a "no-knock" warrant.

Miss Cavender and Miss Childs testified that they did not hear the officers knock, even though there were no radios or television on that would have prevented their hearing it.

Earl Garnas, 68, of 3069 T, testified he was outside on that night near the women's apartment when he saw two men "scamper" up the sidewalk in front of the home.

"The man in the suit opened the screen door and the man in the light shirt lunged at the door and went through," Garnas said. He added that he did not hear the men call out before entering.

Under questioning from attorney Richard Sievers who is defending Tussing, Garnas said he was not hostile to law enforcement officers.

But Sievers introduced a 12-year-old letter from Garnas to the Lincoln Police Department offering "$1,000 to the man who successfully blasts the police station." Over objections from Miss Cavender's attorney, Patrick Healey, U.S. District Court Judge Warren K. Urbom allowed the letter to be entered as evidence.

"I guess I must've been drunk then," Garnas said about the letter, and added he was not hostile to the police when the incident occurred.

Another important point in the trial is whether Miss Cavender's rights were violated when she was forced to remain partially undressed while being interrogated by Deputy Splichal.

Both girls testified they were told they could not get dressed until the apartment was searched. Both also testified that the officers were courteous and did not make any lewd comments during the search.

On that raid, the law enforcement officers were looking for drugs that recently had been stolen from K-Ray Pharmacy. They had conducted a raid earlier that night at 745 Washington and arrested six persons.

All five policeman testified they knew the warrant was not a no-knock warrant.

The two women were taken to the police station after the search, but later were released with being charged. None of the drugs from the pharmacy burglary was found in the apartment, although Miss Childs did have some marijuana in her room.

Job rate might shut off funds

By Nancy Hicks
Star Staff Writer

Lincoln may lose $1 million in federal money because too many residents have jobs, George Chick, city urban development director, told members of the Lincoln City Council and Board of Education Tuesday.

Without success, the department has tried to gerrymander neighborhood lines to come up with a 4,000 neighborhood population and an 8.5% unemployment rate — the requirements for spending the public works money — Chick said.

The two government groups met to discuss mutual problems ranging from future parks to slower speed limits over coffee and breakfast toast Tuesday morning.

Subcommittees were set up to spend more time on several areas including drug and alcohol education, counseling in junior and senior high schools and Lincoln Electric System (LES) in lieu of tax payments.

City administrators want to rewrite the city charter eliminating the skyrocketing in lieu of tax payments LES pays to government subdivisions.

Under the current city charter, 5% of the LES gross revenues are divided among the city's taxing districts. As utility prices rates have soared so have these payments.

The LES payments rose by 25.4% in 1975, by 34.3% in 1976 to more than $1.6 million. The school board, with the largest mill levy in the city, gets the lion's share of this money.

City administrators would like to see the dollar amount of the payments frozen at a specific amount, said Mayor Helen Boosalis.

The perennial question of lowered speed limits in front of schools was given the perennial answer by Dick Erixson, director of public works. Lowered speed limits are not effective in reducing speed and do not lead to fewer accidents. Traffic safety education and practices are the answer, he said.

Other items included:

— School owned land at 40th and Adams St. can fit into city plans for a neighborhood park in that area.

— Coordination between school districts and the city on urban developments occuring outside the city are needed.

Common OKs funds for agencies

By Gordon Winters
Star Staff Writer

Pastor Jerry Dunn didn't even get a chance to show his pretty chart.

In fact, he had barely settled in his chair when the show was over and his request for $30,000 to operate the People's Mission emergency family shelter was approved.

The speedy action was enough to produce smiles all around as the City-County Common reviewed requests for tax funds by 10 agencies outside government in a two-hour, 40 minute session.

In all, the common approved spending $699,163 on the agencies next year. What portion will be borne by the city and what will be borne by the county has yet to be decided.

The sum tentatively granted the agencies is an increase of $45,447 over that granted the same agencies last year, but it is $199,981 under the amount requested by the agencies.

Most of the decisions were in line with the recommendations of a joint budget committee, which had pared the budgets earlier in lengthy sessions.

Two agencies received pleasant surprises, however, when the common voted to add money which the committee recommended cutting.

Benefiting from the common's generosity was the League of Human Dignity, which received an additional $8,000 after executive director Steve Slaikeu said an expected $14,000 federal grant had fallen through.

Also getting an additional $7,829 was the Lincoln Indian Center. Sikyta suggested the amount be restored to give new director Marshall Pritchard a vote of confidence for his improvements in the center's operations.

In another move which might lead to changes in an alcohol and drug treatment "independent center" at Lincoln General Hospital the common voted that the Lincoln Council on Alcoholism and Drug (LCAD) study the possibility of moving the center's administration from the hospital to the City-County Health Department.

The common also voted to extend funding for the LCAD community awareness program for two additional months at a cost of about $4,500 while a federal grant is sought.

The committee also backtracked on two decisions postponed earlier and approved a $46,175 budget request for the Human Services Department and turned down a $8,226 request from the Region II Crime Commission.

Decisions made during the session are not final and separate action must be taken by the council and county board. Voting were County Board members Jan Gauger, Bruce Hamilton, Bob Colin, council members Joe Hampton, Dick Baker, Bob Sikyta, Bob Jeambey, Steve Cook, John Robinson and Mayor Helen Boosalis. Councilman Leo Scherer was absent.

Listed below are the budgets approved by the common, showing the amounts budgeted last year, compared with the amounts tentatively approved for this year, followed by the names of the officials who voted against adoption of the budget, if any:

Bryan Mobile Heart Team ... $60,000 ... $60,000.

Family Service Association ... $42,551 ... $42,551, Baker, Sikyta.

Houses of Hope ... $47,905 ... $47,095.

League of Human Dignity ... $11,614 ... $19,000, Baker, Jeambey.

Legal Aid Society ... $50,248 ... $40,740, Colin, Baker, Sikyta.

Lincoln Action Program ... $50,000 ... $0, Hamilton, Robinson.

Lincoln Council on Alcoholism and Drugs ... $52,984 ... $39,463 (plus extension of community awareness).

Lincoln Indian Center ... $19,500 ... $28,302.

Full Circle ... $159,037 ... $181,000, Sikyta, Colin.

People's City Mission ... $30,000 ... $30,000.

Southeast Nebraska Health Systems Agency ... $11,084 ... $11,804.

Youth Service System ... $152,464 ... $198,938.

Lawsuits pending against 400 water polluters

Washington (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency said Tuesday that more than 300 industries and 100 municipalities face probable enforcement actions such as lawsuits for failing to meet the forthcoming July 1 deadline for cleaning up their water pollution.

The agency refused to identify specific industries or municipalities before enforcement actions actually are filed against them.

With the July 1 deadline only days away, a new EPA policy of stepped up enforcement was announced at a news conference by Thomas C. Jorling, designated but not yet sworn in as assistant administrator for water and hazardous materials.

Under the 1972 water pollution laws, industries were required to apply the "best practicable" techniques to reduce discharges of pollution into the nation's waterways by July 1, 1977.

Municipalities were required to apply "secondary treatment" — essentially filtering and disinfection — to sewage discharges, or more stringent treatment measures where necessary to protect water quality.

Jorling said, "Significant progress has been made in cleaning up the nation's waterways. As proof of that, we expect that only about 600 of the approximately 4,000 major industrial dischargers will fail to meet that deadline.

Laetrile proposal rejected

San Francisco (AP) — The American Medical Association rejected Tuesday a proposal that Laetrile be made available without a doctor's prescription, saying that could "open the floodgates of quackery."

An AMA committee had recommended to the organization's House of Delegates that by advocating over-the-counter sales, doctors could avoid being asked to prescribe the substance.

Some people claim Laetrile combats cancer, but most physicians believe it is worthless.

Instead of the recommendation, the AMA's policy-making body adopted a statement that said, "It is the position of the American Medical Association that Laetrile is a substance which has no proven value as a drug."

The committee had not ascribed any value to Laetrile, and its chairman, Dr. Alfred J. Faber, said, "We thought we were taking away the profit motive from the people who sell Laetrile."

However, Dr. Jack Schreiber objected that such a position could be misunderstood by "the lay press and headline writers."

"The danger would be that the public would then understand that we had somehow lowered our standards on Laetrile," he said.

Federal scientists say animal tests have shown repeatedly that Laetrile has no effect against cancer tumors, and the Food and Drug Administration has banned it from interstate commerce. The American Cancer Society also opposes any exemptions for Laetrile.

The substance is extracted from apricot pits, peach pits and bitter almonds.

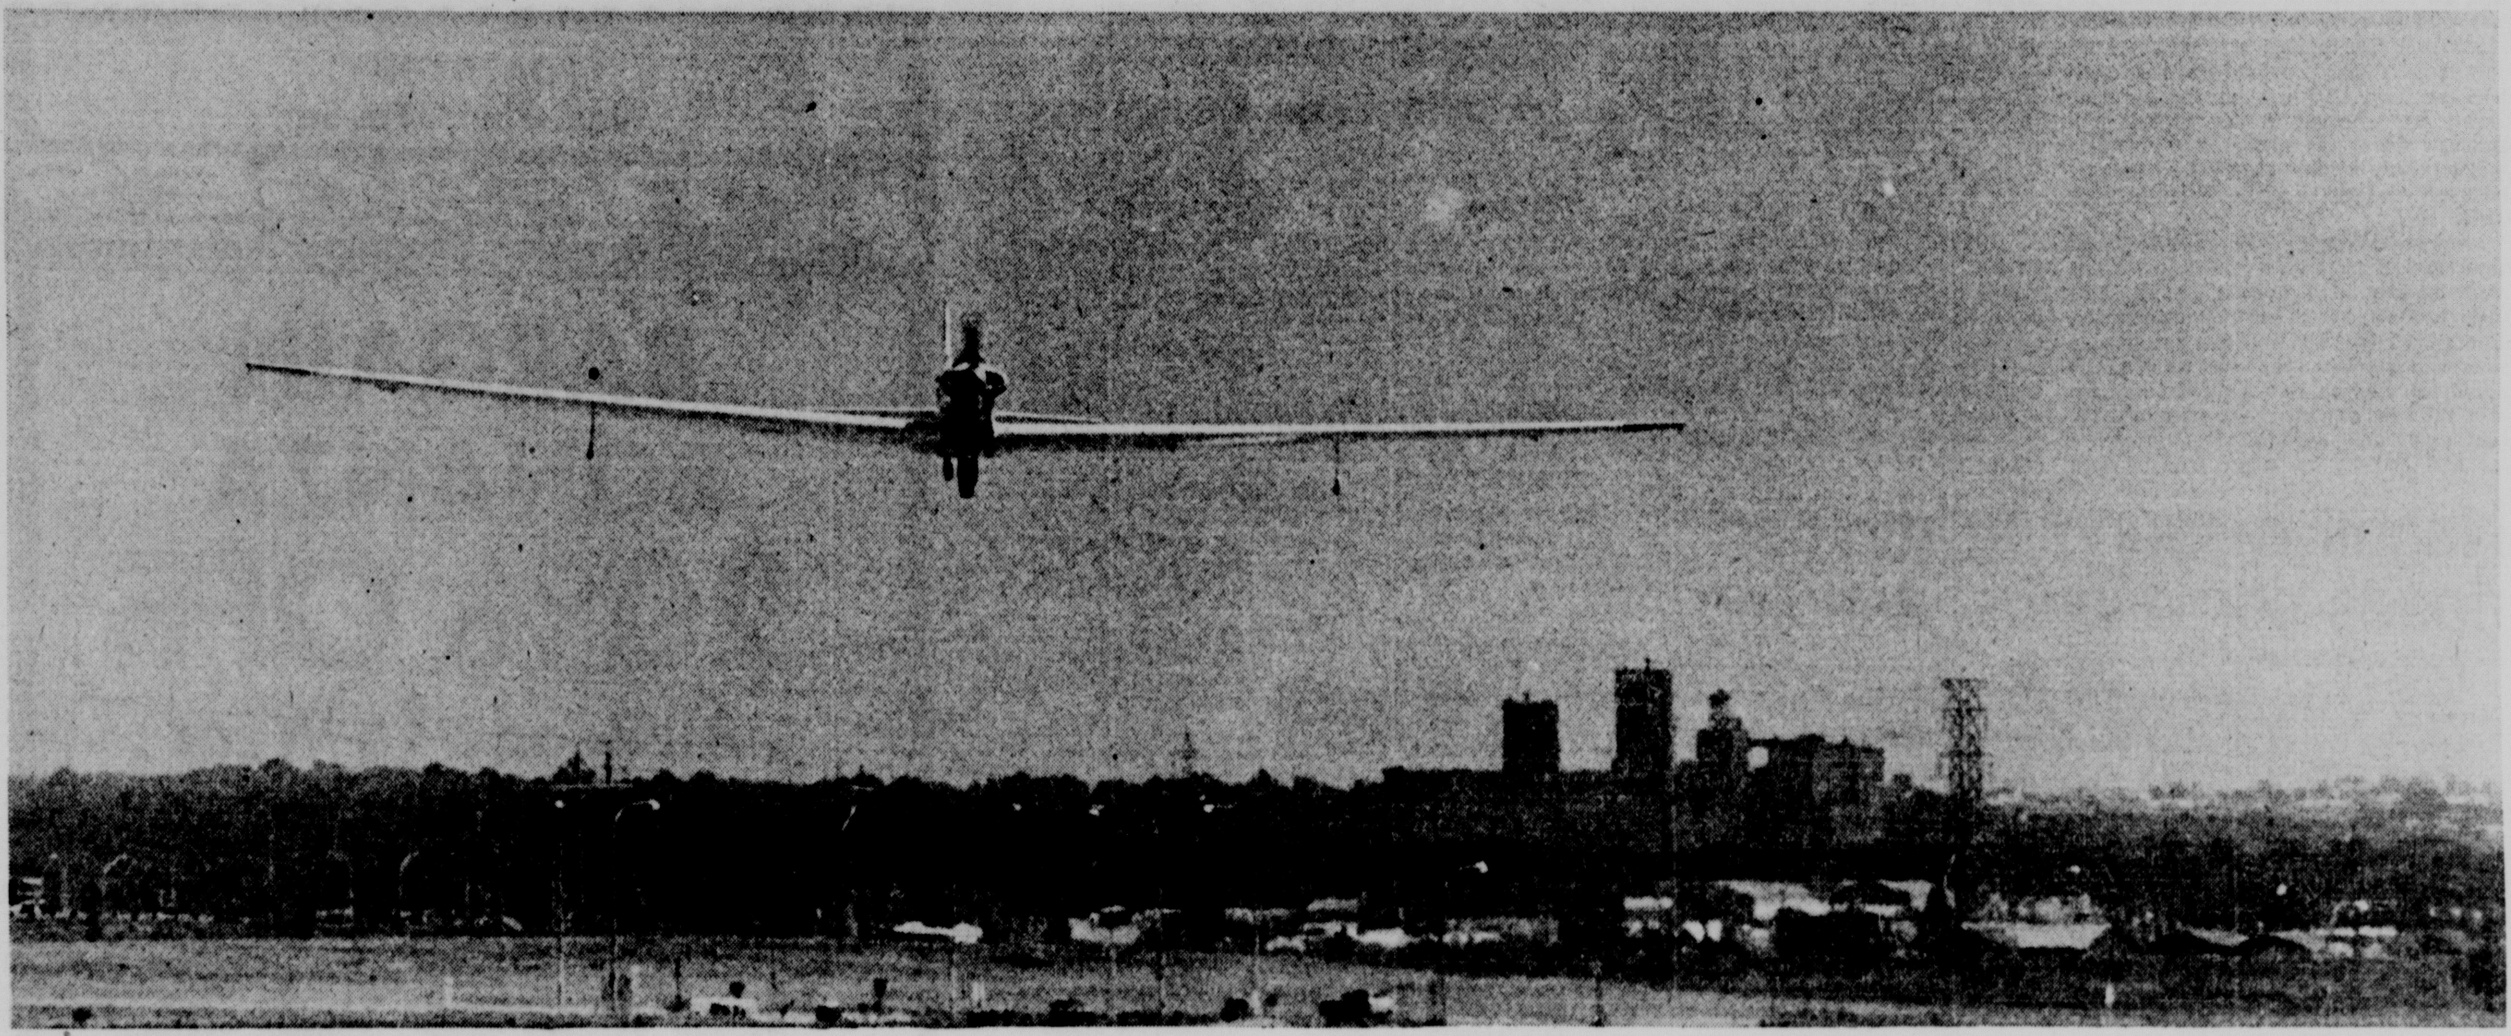
Sailplaning thrill —soaring on air

Sailplane flies over Branched Oak Lake.



The altimeter read 3200 when the propeller in front of Glenn Hattan slowed and finally became motionless.

Time to panic? No. Time for fun. Time for Hattan to match wits with the elements to keep the motorized sailplane aloft.

He craned his neck, looking up at the bottom of the puffy cumulus cloud blowing along a few hundred feet above us.

"Now we're riding without any expense," said the vice president at Commercial Federal Savings and Loan.

He purposely positioned the craft beneath the small cumulus cloud. A developing cloud of that type is a signal that warm air has risen into the colder air above.

Rising warm air, a thermal, is what sailplane pilots look for. By staying in the rising air, a sailplane gains altitude.

Hattan banked from side to side, practicing the sailplane pilot's art of locating the invisible lumps of warm air rising. The only sound was the whoosh of air slipping past the clear plastic cockpit of the two-seater sailplane.

For 15 minutes Hattan guided the sensitive craft. At one point the sailplane was 300 feet higher than when the engine was switched off. When it was time to return to Lincoln Municipal Airport the craft was only 200 feet lower than when the soaring began.

Sailplane pilots have stayed aloft without power for more than 50 hours. The distance record is more than 900 miles and the altitude record is 46,000 feet.

• • •

The Frelin Soaring Club, of which Hattan is a member, is a name coined by combining the names of Fremont and Lincoln. Five of the 10 members live in Lincoln, five in Fremont.

There is room for two more in the club, said Hattan, who is treasurer. President is Ed Weaver and vice president is Duane Funk.

To join, a person must invest $2,000. Dues are 20 per month and flying time is charged at the rate of $12 per hour the engine is used. (Hence, Hattan's comment, "Now we're flying without any expense" when he turned off the engine.)

• • •

The club sailplane is a German-made Sportavia RF5B Sperber, powered by a 68-horsepower Limbach engine, which is actually a modified Volkswagen car engine. It costs $32,000 when new. The club's was purchased used for $24,000.

It has a wingspan of 56 feet, compared to the 25-foot wing span of an ordinary single-engine light plane. The Sperber weighs only 1,040 pounds.

Some sailplanes are so efficient they travel about 40 feet for each foot they sink. For comparison, a single-engine light plane travels about 10 feet for each foot it sinks.

The Sperber travels about 27 feet for each foot it sinks, which puts it in a relatively high performance class, according to Hattan.

• • •

"Thermals are usually only about a hundred feet in diameter," according to Hattan, and the pilot's skill is measured by his ability to extract the most lift out of that pocket of air.

Aboard the sailplane over northeast Lincoln, Hattan pointed out the concrete and sand of the Burlington Northern railroad shops as the sort of terrain that heats air and causes it to rise in columns or bubbles.

Black fields and stubble fields also generate thermals, Hattan said. Water and green fields are no help to the soaring pilot. High in the air, however, air currents become confused and the source of the rising air is often unknown. "There's no one sure thing that guarantees you'll get it," Hattan says of clues to a thermal.

Boy came home a man

By Patricia Hughes

Write-On

The spatter of raindrops on the wide expanse of concrete runway grew to a roar as the rain came down faster and harder. My heartbeat seemed to keep pace with it as the time grew near for flight 416 from the West Coast to arrive. As I watched the darkening sky, waiting for my first glimpse of the plane, I remembered the night some three months ago when my son left home.

It was a dark, cold Sunday evening as we waited for the bus which would take him away from home and hearth to meet whatever the future had in store for him. He tried to bluff his way past the Fear, which stood shoulder-to-shoulder with him and tried to push it's way past him, as he shifted from one tennis shoe-shod foot to the other, fingering the already limp bus ticket in nervous hands. He laughed a little too loudly at comments which the rest of us really didn't think were funny and it seemed to echo back, also too loudly, from the big room of the depot.

All too soon the bus for Omaha, Des moines and points East pulled into the station. Tears formed in the eyes of his little sisters who didn't want him to go. A friend gave him a handshake, two boys trying to be men, and then growing up was momentarily put aside as they threw their arms around one another. Embarassed at their lapse of dignity, they parted. An arm around mom, a quick kiss and he was gone.

The house was too quiet without him the first few weeks. Too much food was cooked as I was used to trying to fill the always-empty stomachs of four teen-age boys and now I had only three. I hadn't realized just how much food one fairly thin teen-ager can consume. Slowly we adjusted to life without him although there was always a void which couldn't really be filled, even by the letters we received, read and re-read until the next one came.

Now he was coming home. I knew he would have changed and I wasn't at all sure I was ready for what he might have become. I was eager to see him — as eager as the brothers, sisters and friends who were also watching the skies with searching eyes — but I was a little afraid, too. After all, he was my first-born, the little guy I had depended on so much to be the man of the family, and he was the first to leave the nest and try his wings. Had he been successful in this first attempt? I would soon know the answer.

Suddenly a cry arose from the crowd around me. The blinking lights of the plane had broken through the cover of dark clouds and the rain slackened as if on purpose as those two winks became a tiny plane which grew larger and larger and finally approached the runway. My heart jumped into my throat and tears welled up in my eyes. He was home at last!

Impatiently we watched the now huge silver plane taxi up to the building. A ramp was driven up to the door and a blue-clad stewardess took her position beside the open cavity from which people carrying various bags, boxes, etc. were starting to emerg. Anxiously our eyes watched the stream of passengers as we searched each new face, looking for a sign of something familiar to us.

There! Was that him? Was this the long-haired boy, always dressed in blue jeans and tennis shoes, who had left me; this neatly dressed young man who walked so tall and erect, his hair neatly trimmed and his shoes shined, eyeing the crowd as if looking for someone — was this my son? It was! Pride rose inside me as I watched him stride across the runway, making his way through a small knot of people, carefully avoiding a collision with a small child who darted from her mother's reach.

As he reached the waiting group the tears rolled down my cheeks and I hugged him gratefully. This was my boy; no, this was my son — he was a man. He was more than that — he was a United States Marine and from the pride in his eyes, he was as proud of it as his mother was — and is.

Individual health plans can be shock

It's Your Money

By Jane Bryant Quinn

New York — Every year, millions of Americans who felt safe from medical bills — thanks to their group health plan — suddenly lose that insurance. Overnight, and without guidance, they have to find a good individual or family plan. It's hard to imagine this happening to you, but here are some of the ways you could be left out in the cold:

(1) You could lose your job and not find a new one right away, or leave your job and try a business of your own. (2) You might be a woman formerly covered under your husband's plan who lost her insurance because of separation or divorce. (3) You're a young person grown too old to be included in your parents' plan, but aren't working for an employer with group coverage. (4) Perhaps you took early retirement, and have to wait several years before qualifying for Medicare. Many other things could happen, as well.

If you were paying little or nothing for your group coverage, the price of comprehensive medical insurance will be an awful shock.

The cost of Aetna Life & Casualty's comprehensive policy for a middle-income couple aged 35, with two small children, runs $908 a year in North Dakota, $1,021 in Washington, D.C., and $1,255 in San Francisco.

When you're looking for coverage, there are four main avenues to explore. (Even if you're not in the market for a plan right now you might want to clip and save this information, because you never know when you're going to need it.)

—Is group coverage really out of the question? Your employe plan may not be the only group available to you. Some trade, professional and fraternal associations offer group health plans, which may not be as comprehensive as your employer provided but at least offer the advantage of a group rate. Take a minute to think about all the groups you could join and ask if they have health plans.

If you've started your own business and it employs someone besides you, the company qualifies for group coverage (even if the two employes are you and your spouse). But note: Rates on group policies are assigned according to the type of business, and some businesses are more expensive to insure than others. If you've started a fast-food place, for example, you might find it cheaper to insure yourself individually rather than under a group plan.

—What about the Blues? Anyone shopping for individual or family coverage should certainly get copies of the policies for Blue Cross (for hospital bills) and Blue Shield (for doctor bills). The Blues often provide the largest number of health services for the dollar.

Some plans, however, don't have major medical insurance for prolonged and expensive illnesses.

Generally speaking, you will turn to other insurers for more extensive coverage than is available from the Blues, or for less-expensive, limited-coverage policies.

—Which private insurer? The companies are all so different you'll have to compare their policies point by point. There's simply no substitute for a good health-insurance agent who isn't tied to a particular company. He is familiar with the policies of several companies, and can help you choose the best one for you. If you're uninsurable, the company that carried your group plan is generally required to offer you an individual policy.

Not many companies offer comprehensive health plans for individuals. Three leaders in this area are Aetna, Prudential Life Insurance and Washington National. But many other companies do provide major medical insurance, which is less expensive. This kind of coverage leaves the less-expensive illnesses to you, but protects against health problems that are serious and prolonged.

—What about hospital indemnity plans? These pay a certain number of dollars for each day you're in the hospital, but the amount is generally so low that the policies won't do for primary coverage. You might buy one, however, to supplement other hospitalization insurance. Travelers Insurance Co. has a new indemnity policy that offers broader benefits, and other companies may follow suit.

Be warned that this branch of the industry has been plagued with tricky clauses and misleading advertising. Be sure to know exactly what you're buying.

Dentist travels often to take care of horses

Fairview, Pa. (UPI) — Horses, like people, need dentists.

That's where Dan Propes comes in. He's one of about 200 equine dentists who service the teeth of horses from coast to coast.

"In my opinon, a horse's teeth and his feet are the most important things that must be sound before he goes into training," Propes said.

A native of Detroit, Propes trained horses for nine years before becoming a horse dentist.

Because his speciality has so few practitioners, Propes works in Maryland and Kentucky in addition to handling horses at Pennsylvania tracks.

Propes said he picked up a lot of knowedge from Dr. Alex Harthill, a Louisville, Ky., veterinarian, who was called to New York in an effort to save the life of Ruffian, the outstanding filly who broke down in a match race with Foolish Pleasure.

"One thing about horses, they don't get cavities," Propes said.

"But their teeth are growing all the time and they get abscesses."

Propes said he is called upon from time to time to extract a horse's teeth.

"It's not an easy job," he said. "The knack is how to do it without getting hurt."

From his dentistry, Propes has a large collection of bracelets and necklaces made from horses' baby teeth and the caps of their regular teeth. Some people in racing consider such trinkets good luck.

"If that's the case," said Propes, "I should have been wearing one of them the day I got kicked."

It happened last March, when Propes was serving as an assistant starter at a track. A horse kicked him in the stomach, sending him to a hospital.

"They told me I stopped breathing twice in the hospital," he said. "I don't remember the name of the horse, but he might just as well have been Joe Frazier."

Negative-sounding mother needs some understanding

By George C. Thosteson, M.D.

To Your Good Health

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My mother, who is 91, lives with us. For the past seven years she has lived in a negative world. Her mind is rational and excellent except that everything is viewed negatively and she utters ugly remarks.

It begins to affect my children and my husband and our relationship to each other. Mother is loved and wanted (although she denies this to all). I could not sleep at night if I had to put her into a nursing home.

Isn't there a drug on the market that would make her see the happier side of life, one that would not injure her? I am literally at wits' end.—R.C.

Tranquilizers might quiet her down and perhaps make her see the "happier" side of life, but I wouldn't go on record as favoring them for her. For one thing, tranquilizers are notorious "maskers" of real ills.

Before you push any panic buttons, have your mother examined for possible nutritional deficiencies. These are not uncommon among very elderly persons. Diet or vitamin supplements often correct the situation.

Too, there can be a subtle circulation impairment, and there are medicines to improve that. Perhaps what your mother really needs is a massive dose of TLC (tender, loving care).

Negative personalities usually reflect insecurity or anxiety. At 91, she should be allowed some eccentricities, I'm sure you will agree. When she gets overly negative, avoid arguing. Just toss it off with, "Oh, I don't think you really mean that," and let it pass. The children can be taught to understand, and I'm sure your husband can learn to forgive an elderly mother's outbursts.

Dr. Thosteson welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in this column whenever possible.

Health Tip

Heat exhaustion and heat stroke are both by-products of too much time in the sun. Heat exhaustion is more common. Its symptoms are pale and clammy skin, a weak, rapid pulse, and complaints by the victim of weakness, headache or nausea. The victim may have cramps in the abdomen or limbs.

Move the victim to a cool place, but protect him from chilling. Have the heat exhaustion victim lie down with head level to, or lower than his body. Give him salt water (one teaspoon of salt to one quart of water) to drink if he is conscious, and call a physician.

Hot, flushed skin and a strong rapid pulse are symptoms of heat stroke. The victim is often unconscious.

In cases of heat stroke, call a physician first, then cool the victim's body by sponging it with cold water by cold applications. If the victim is fully conscious and can swallow, give the above salt water solution, do not give alcohol in any form, and keep your cool.

Powder is good martini

Seattle (AP) — It's a powder much like those which turn into soft drinks or juice when you add water — but this powder could make a powerful martini.

Federal and state government officials say the powder isn't legal now. But investors here and in Portland, Ore., hope to get approval to market it in pouches which will produce popular cocktails, beer and wine.

"People aren't going to expect Mouton Rothschild out of a sack, but they won't be disappointed," says Mike Hill, a Seattle public relations man and marketing chief for Global Marketing Services.

"One of my dreams has been to open a package like Kool-Aid and beer comes out of it."

Sato Food Industry Co., located near Nagoya, Japan, holds patents on the process which traps alcohol in the powder form. Sato says the raw powder contains up to 30 per cent alcohol by weight.

Sato has sold the powder in Japan as an additive, used in jelly, chocolate and foods enhanced by a liquor taste. The Japanese say they haven't used the powder for beverages because liquid liquor is readily available.

Land, not people, prevails

By Jim Camden
Star Staff Writer

Book Review

There are some books in which one person is the most interesting character. In other books, two or three or more characters share the spotlight.

But the star of Colleen McCullough's "The Thorn Birds," is not a person at all — it's the continent of Australia.

Anyone who thinks Australia is nothing but aborigines, kangaroos and koala bears should read "Thorn Birds," to get a lesson in geography while reading an absorbing novel. The plot centers around a family of Irish immigrants, the Clearys, and a local priest who tries very hard at remembering his vows of chastity but fails.

The Clearys take over one of the largest ranches in Australia on land that would make the Sandhills look like a rain forest. From the 1920's to the 1960's the father and eight sons run a large, profitable sheep ranch, and the single daughter manages to tie herself to an unhappy marriage.

But before long, it becomes apparent that the land runs the runchers, and not the other way around. The demands of running 250,000 acres sap the family to the point that thy can really do nothing else.

"Thorn Birds" is a sad book in two respects. First, there seems to be a tragedy around every corner and little unbridled joy in the story. One son leaves home and winds up in jail, two others go off to war, there is a drought, a fire, and a depression. But such is life, and in these respects Miss McCullough does a good job of story telling.

But the book is also sad because although it is good, it is not as good as it could be. The author understands the land, she understands her three women characters and she seems to understand Ralph de Bricassart, a Catholic priest caught between his church and a woman.

But she does not lend enough understanding to the other men in the book. Instead, she tends to lump them all together as well-tanned workaholics who have nothing on their mind but tending sheep. Anyone who doesn't fit into that mold she adroitly kills off or banishes from the land.

This may not be a major flaw, however, for those men are really only minor characters. And Miss McCullough does an excellent job of conveying the major character — the continent — to the reader. From the grasslands to the rain forests to the tropical islands, the reader gets a feel for the land which in turn gives a feel for the people.

This Australia without aborigines and boomerangs (there are none in the book). It's the Australia of large cities, small towns and large ranches, of sheep and sugar cane.

After a short five weeks on the best seller lists, "Thorn Birds" has moved to the number one spot which gives an indication of how well a book about Australia can succeed in America.

Opening lead - four of diamonds.

Assume you're East and partner leads the four of diamonds. You cash the K-A, West playing the three on the second round. You now know that partner started with five diamonds, declarer therefore with two. What would you play next?

You could make the lazy man's play of a spade at this point, but, if so, you might have some explaining to do to partner after declarer took the rest of the tricks.

South would win the spade and play the A-K of clubs, learning that you had four trumps to the jack. It would then be easy for him to enter dummy with a heart, return a trump, trapping your jack, and so take the remaining tricks.

Oddly enough, the proper return at trick three is a low heart! This has all the earmarks of an insane play, but it is the right play nonetheless.

Let's consider the bidding first. South is sure to have 5-5 or 6-5 distribution for his bids, and it therefore cannot harm you to lead a heart into dummy's A-Q. The heart trick you bestow upon declarer will be of no earthly use to him, and at the same time it may do you a world of good.

In the actual case, your generosity pays off very well. No matter which way South turns,he cannot make the contract. He loses a trump trick even if he stands on his head.

Furthermore, the heart return is likely to stop the contract even if West has a low club instead of the ten. Declarer would be unlikely to attempt a finesse at trick four if he had the A-K-Q-10-x

Dear Abby

By Abigail
Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Whoever invented the CB radio sure invented a road monster. My husband, a once law-abiding citizens, now gets into his car, turns on his CB and starts looking around for other CB antennas. He then identifies the color and make of the car and asks if they have their "ears" on.

Next he gets a "front door man" and a "back door man" so he can exceed the speed limit without getting caught by a "Smokey" or "bubble gum machine" (police).

Meanwhile, everybody else with a CB is speeding, looking for road buddies and driving with one hand on the wheel and the other holding a speaker. By the time we've reached our destination I'm exhausted.

We just returned from one of those "fun" weekends, and I am ready for a straitjacket. Four hours over and four hour hours back with breakers 1 to 9, and that's it for me.

Before my husband got a CB we enjoyed a leisurely drive listening to soothing FM music. No more!

Next time I'll stay home. My handle?

STEAMED BEAVER

DEAR BEAVER: Don't sell the CB'ers short. When you need help on the road you might have a long wait before a Tijuana Taxi (sheriff) or Smokey (police) happen by, but those guys in the 18 wheelers (big trucks and trailers) are great in a 10-33 (emergency) situation.

DEAR ABBY: Please settle a debate between by gentleman friend and me.

I just turned 28, at which time Jim informed me that I am now an "old maid."

Jim's definition of an old maid is any woman who is 28 and single, regardless of whether she has been previously married.

My definition of an old maid is a woman who is 30 and has never been married.

Which of us comes closer to your definition?

I am a divorcee, so even though I am unmarried at age 28, I do not consider myself an old maid.

Answer in the paper. The loser owes the winner a dinner.

LINDA

DEAR LINDA: Jim owes you a dinner. (P.S. The term "old maid" went out with the buttonhook. I prefer "unclaimed jewel.")

Action Line

I.D. with photo probably best

To ask a question, call 477-2121 or write P.O. Box 81689, Lincoln, Neb. 68501.

I am 14 year old. I have a job and have a checking account. I am having trouble cashing checks at stores around because I only have a Social Security card for I.D. What else could I use?

— R. Keller, Lincoln

ACTION LINE: Probably the best I.D. is something with your photo. Contact Security Services, Inc., 3601 O, which can make a photo I.D. card for you. The cost of the card is $4.16 with tax.

Ay, that's the rub

My husband and I are having a fight. I've heard that using vinegar instead of expensive suntan lotion will give a great tan at a fraction of the price. He says I've been in the sun too long. What do you say?

— Bathing Beauty, Lincoln

ACTION LINE: We always stay out of domestic squabbles, but the use of vinegar for sunburn, rather than tanning, sounds familiar. According to our worldly philosopher, you smell so funny you never dare venture out in daylight — hence no burn. A better source of information is the Federal Consumer Information Center, which can send you an informative pamphlet on how to bronze safely. Write for "In Pursuit of a Summer Tan" c/o the Center, Pueblo, Colo., 81009. It's free.

No record of recorder

Shortly after the first of the year, I ordered a cassette tape recorder from Automated Learning, Inc. of Fairfield, N.J. The recorder part did not work so I returned it to the company. They told me they would send me a new recorder but I have not received anything. Can you help?

— M. Gregg, Loup City

ACTION LINE: A customer service representative at Automated Learning said she does not know why you did not receive your order by now. At the firm's request, we have forwarded your letter to the New Jersey firm for action. Keep us posted.

Metric mix-up

I note the use of the term "metric ½ gallon" in liquor advertisements. Are we also going to have metric quarts, metric miles, inches, etc.?

— Walt Nolte, Lincoln

ACTION LINE: Give some people an inch, and they'll take a kilometer. Distillers began the switch to metric sizes last year, (changing) present liquor bottle sizes to six metric standard bottles. The distillers also apparently advised salesman to refer to the new sizes as "metric ½ gallons", etc. The net result, however, is that you'll probably be getting slightly less liquor in each bottle than in present equivalents. The table below compares the new metric bottles with their counterparts.

Bottle Size	Oz.	Metric	Oz.
mini-bottle	1.6	50 mi.	1.7
half-pint	8	200 mi.	6.8
pint	16	500mi.	16.9
fifth	25.6	750 mi.	25.4
quart	32	liter	33.8
half-gallon	64	1.75 liter	59.2

African play aimed at U.S. conscience

Berkeley, Calif. (AP) — For one involved observer, recent campus demonstrations against United States ties to apartheid South Africa are welcome disruptions.

Selaelo Maredi, a black playwright in self-imposed exile from South Africa, hopes the protests will blossom into the kind of national outrage once fueled by opposition to the Vietnam war, eventually forcing American businesses from Africa's southern tip.

Aided by a repertory company of five fellow countrymen, Maredi has begun a campaign of his own to prod America's conscience.

Their play, "Survival," is currently on nationwide tour. With an offbeat, harsh satire, it portrays life in a nation where four million whites dominate 18 million blacks.

"I saw the kind of news South Africa was selling to people on the outside," Maredi said in an interview between performances here, explaining why he chose to travel thousands of miles to perform in this country. "What I'm doing here, I'm in the struggle."

Most of the play takes place in a prison cell. Early scenes depict how a new inmate is brutally initiated when cellmates refuse to indoctrinate him to prison practices.

They finally tell him: "Say thank you, Bass ("boss" in Afrikaans), when they hit you."

It is concentration-camp humor. The audience titters, but in the end must ask itself how funny are slaves' jokes about "massa"?

For a time, one of the prisoners is set "free" and returns to the checkerboard life at home where, no one jumps from the black squares to the white.

He is so dismayed by the racism he confronts that he asks authorities to put him back in jail "for doing nothing."

On his return, he and his cellmates decide to take on the system. "We've decided to resist, to make a grab for the light at the end of the tunnel," they proclaim.

James Bertholf, chairman of the Theater Arts Department at Orange Coast College in Costa Mesa, Calif., discovered the production last year on a visit to South Africa.

Maredi, 35, claims he will never return to South Africa, but insists "I will go back to Azania," the name blacks have given their homeland.

After an appearance this summer in Baltimore, the group plans to resume the tour in the fall with a swing through East Coast campuses.

Murder counts dropped against Omaha couple

Omaha (AP) — First degree murder charges against an Omaha couple were dismissed Tuesday after alleged eyewitnesses to the beating of Harold Hay refused to testify at a preliminary hearing, a deputy Douglas County attorney said.

It was the second time first degree murder charges in the slaying of Hay, who was found beaten and bleeding in an abandoned cattle chute May 19, have been dropped.

Two teenagers who had been jailed more than two weeks, charged with murder, were freed early this month after police said eyewitnesses implicated two other persons.

The two arrested at that time, Homer and Joyce Smith, had been in jail until Tuesday, when the murder charges against them were dropped at a preliminary hearing in District Court.

Deputy County Atty. James Jansen said the charges were dismissed because of insufficient evidence. Homer Smith was released from jail but Joyce Smith is being held on an unrelated misdemeanor charge, according to jail officials.

The hearing had been continued from Friday, Jansen said.

Jansen said three persons he described as eyewitnesses to the slaying of Hay "refused to cooperate. Our hands are kind of tied without the cooperation of any witnesses."

Jansen said County Atty. Donald Knowles had talked with one of the alleged witnesses "and the witness refused to talk. He said he was going to deny any statements he had given police."

Jansen said notices to appear at the preliminary hearing had been sent to the three alleged witnesses. "All you can do with a subpoena is get them in court," he said.

He said he "presumed" police homicide detectives would continue the investigation.

Hay, 38, was found bleeding and unconscious in an abandoned cattle chute in South Omaha and died the next day without telling police what had happened.

Authorities have theorized that Hay was lured to the cattle chute by a prostitute, beaten and robbed. Hay reportedly had the reputation of carrying large amounts of money and was believed to be due to receive a large inheritance from his father's estate.

But authorities said he was carrying less than $100 when he was beaten.

A week after his death, two youths were arrested and charged with killing Hay. They had been in jail without bond when the Smiths were arrested and charged.

Today's children are Santa believers — poll

Lucy Benjamin, Nebraska Wesleyan University psychology department head, has found that more children today would teach their own kids to believe in Santa Claus.

Nearly 900 Lincoln fourth through eighth graders in 14 schools were surveyed to see how their views matched those of Lincoln children surveyed in 1896 by a student of UNL professor Harry Kirke Wolfe. The study was found in an extinct UNL education journal.

The survey was duplicated and Benjamin enlisted Weslean graduates Rosalie Hall and Jacqueline Langeley to help.

One sixth-grade daughter of missionaries said Christmas is more for sharing that for giving. She said she was shocked when she found out Santa is fictitious. "If you can lie to me about Santa Claus, you can lie to me about God," she said.

A fourth-grade boy thought his parents were Mr. and Mrs. Santa when he saw them in the living room shadows with presents. "I was very sad to find out the truth," he wrote.

It was found that more children today than in 1896 said it disappoints kids if they learn there is no Santa Claus.

Yet, Benjamin found that about three-fourth of today's children said they would tell their children there is a Santa, compared to half to two-thirds of the children survyed 81 years ago.

The survey also revealed that more children today learn from their parents that Santa is not real. In 1896, they learned from other children.

Fewer kids today, only a third to half, think Santa is the supernatural type who can shinny down stovepipes, eat cookie and read letters. More kids now see him as an actual man, generous and kindhearted.

The survey showed, Benjamin said, that children's attitudes haven't changed much in 81 years.

Home inspected for gas leak before explosion

Omaha (AP) — The owner of a South Omaha house that was destroyed by an explosion and fire Sunday said Metropolitan Utilities District (MUD) workers inspected his home for a gas leak more than two weeks ago.

James Wiggins said he called MUD after smelling gas but workmen inspected the kitchen and told him nothing was wrong.

David F. Barber, spokesman for MUD, confirmed that MUD employes were at Wiggins' home June 2. He said they checked the kitchen's gas range and found nothing wrong with it.

Fire officials have not ruled that the explosion was caused by a natural gas leak. Capt. Don Brunken said he will wait until MUD completes tests at the house before he rules on a cause.

Wiggins, his wife and their children were on vacation when the explosion occurred.

Crounse lived on the rails.

McCool Junction — If the railroads of yesteryear had been run like today's Amtrak, "We'd all be driving a horse and buggy," according to John Crounse, retired railroader.

Crounse, 77, practically grew up in the Burlington railroad yards in Lincoln, in the days of lanterns, steam engines, and zephyrs that lived up to their name.

"I put in six months with the MOP (Missouri Pacific Railroad) in Kansas City back in '22," Crounse said, "but then I was broke."

He wound up in Lincoln in March that year and "walked about two miles to the yard office (on West O) and asked for a job. The boss told me to go see the doctor, and I was hired," he added.

Switchman Crounse managed a 40-year career with the railroad, retiring in 1962. During the latter years he was also an Otoe County farmer, "mostly on nights and weekends." He bought a place near Douglas in 1956 and managed pasture, cattle and round trips to Lincoln until his retirement.

He moved to McCool Junction that year, in an effort to stay in touch with the farm, he said.

During his railroad years he survived, among other things, the railroads' first attempts at electronic communication.

The yard master brought four walkie-talkies into the yards and they tried to use them to put a train together — switchmen giving instructions to the engineer to back up, or pull forward.

"After about an hour he (the yard master) came up to me and told me to get my lantern and go back to the old way," Crounse said.

He doesn't deny that modern technology has worked some wonders for the railroad. "You know, they can push a button in Hastings and get the train to pull onto a siding in Fairmont. That's really something," he added.

Crounse had an opportunity to ride Amtrak from Denver to Lincoln several years ago, and decided that the railroads aren't what they used to be.

"We got started late, they refused to put on another car to handle an overflow of passengers, and during one of the stops they took our car off completely, and we had to hunt for our overcoats. We finally got into Lincoln at four in the morning," he said.

In the days of the Zephyrs (from the Greek for west wind) they used to travel at "more than 100 m.p.h. across the Plains," Crounse added. "They can't even keep 'em on the tracks now."

Crounse remembers the day when it took him 25 minutes to add a passenger car to a train in Lincoln. He had to call Omaha to get clearance and then wound up hooking up the car himself.

"I really got chewed out for the delay," he added, something which should be done today, "considering how often the passenger trains run late."

Crounse also has some ideas about routing coal trains around Lincoln, a topic of some controversy in recent months.

"They don't have to run all those trains through the old Russian Bottoms (now the South Salt Creek neighborhood). They could build some new track out west (near the Burlington switching yards on West O) and route some of them up north and around east," he said.

He is sure enough of his plans that he added, "I wish some of those fellows in Washington would ask me what I think."

But, Crounse isn't ready to tackle the railroads. "I'd rather mind my garden and play the ponies now and then," he said.

Crounse owns seven lots, and all of the land that isn't covered by house and garage is in garden. Beans, corn and peas take up most of his time now, but occasionally he gets off his tractor long enough to drive his Cadillac to Grand Island's Fonner Park.

"I had to borrow $2 from a friend (during a recent track visit) byt I won $500 on the race," he grinned.

Crounse also keeps an eye on the growth of the small York County community of 260. "They're building a new $90,000 park and the grain elevator is building a new addition," he said.

But Main Street, albeit quiet, hits a dead end against the Blue River. "They don't even have it (the dead end) marked and I'm afraid some guy is going to run off into the river some day," he added.

Chadron tax gains 2nd-round OK

Chadron (UPI) — The city council Monday night gave second-round approval to a proposed 1% sales tax ordinance that is vigorously opposed by business interests.

The council had scheduled a final vote July 5 but postponed it until July 18 to allow more study.

Chamber of Commerce Manager John Gericke, presented poll results from 100 of 250 chamber members. The results showed a 2 to 1 plurality against the sales tax.

On his ballot, one chamber member urged the council to "cut out programs and not commit retail suicide."

The second-round approval vote was 4 to 1, with Councilman Ron Busch casting the lone nay.

Proponents have argued the sales tax is necessary because of inflation and a potential $9,000 loss in federal revenue-sharing benefits.

If the tax is approved, Chadron would be the fifth — and smallest — city in Nebraska to levy one. The others are Omaha, Lincoln, Bellevue and North Platte.

Smith's opinion of OSHA unchanged

United Press International

Rep. Virginia Smith, R-Neb., Tuesday said a meeting with Dr. Eula Bingham, new director of the occupational Safety and Health Administration, has failed to change her thinking about the federal agency.

"I am very concerned that she will continue to oppose any exemption for farmers and ranchers from the OSHA regulations, even though she (Bingham) admitted it was very difficult, if not impossible, to conduct on-farm inspections," Mrs. Smith said in a news release from her Washington office.

Mrs. Smith said Dr. Bingham told the task force on the reorganization of government that she was surprised to learn that only seven-tenths of 1% of the OSHA budget was used for education efforts.

"She also stated that many OSHA health and safety inspectors are inexperienced and have little knowledge of practical application for the various rules and regulations," Mrs. Smith said.

She said Dr. Bingham also indicated that OSHA has responsiblity to offer small businesses assistance and consultation.

Health center budget hiked

Grand Island (AP) — The Mid-Nebraska Community Mental Health Center board has approved an increase of about 5% for the center's 12-county operating budget. The $554,000 budget proposal for fiscal 1977-78 represents a $26,000 increase. Final action on the matter will come at a Friday meeting of the Region III Mental Health Board.

Official fined for assault

Omaha (AP) — Robert P. Dworak, a member of the Papio Natural Resources board was fined $25 in Municipal Court for assault and battery. He pleaded no contest to the charge in connection with a May 13 incident in which a bicycle rider said he was forced off the road, beaten and sprayed with Mace by a man he identified as Dworak.

Pope commends Boys Town

Boys Town (AP) — Pope Paul VI has commended Boys Town for remaining faithful "to the vision of Father Flanagan" the institution said Tuesday. The pope "is especially pleased with the recent support given Boys Town for the scientific study of adolescents' psychology, in particular, the program located at the Catholic University of America," according to a letter sent to Boys Town Director Father Robert Hupp by the U.S. Apostolic Delegation in Washington D.C.

College begins energy moves

Kearney (AP) — Kearney State College will use smaller light bulbs, take longer vacations, stay cooler in the winter and warmer in the summer as well as renovate some of its buildings under a three-phase energy conservation play announced Tuesday. College President Brendan McDonald said the plan will encompass all areas from "the most elementary conservation steps to levels of increasing sophistication."

Committee wants a peek

Omaha (AP) — A committee has recommended that the Douglas County Courthouse cornerstone, seated since 1908, be opened in September as part of the formal dedication of the new plaza connecting the courthouse with the new City-County Building. John Goodsell of the Douglas County Public Affairs office suggested after the inspection that the cornerstone be replaced with additional recent historical items.

Discharged men are rehired

Hastings (AP) — The Adams County Board of Supervisors voted Tuesday to hire three men who had been discharged by the sheriff and to turn over to them operation of the county's ambulances from the courthouse. Dick Wenske, Ken Catlin and Jerry Grinstead had been fired by Sheriff Robert Anderson in April after a dispute over whether the ambulance service should be separated from the sheriff's office. The board voted May 27 to separate the service.

Residents will get pay for dead trees

Omaha (AP) — The Norris Public Power District intends to compensate residents for trees and shrubs mistakenly poisoned when district crews spread a herbicide along roadsides to kill trees which interfere with power lines.

District officials said they have received about 25 complaints, mainly from persons in Lancaster County, but with some from Gage, Jefferson and Saline counties.

Norris General Manager Glen Schmieding said district employes and an independent authority are investigating each complaint to determine if it is valid and to assist in reaching a settlement.

He said compensation will be in the form of replacement trees, money or other aid.

The Norris Public Power District Board also reported it will consult with state wildlife and environmental officials before applying any more of the herbicide along roadways.

The district spread pellets of Tordon 1 OK along about 4,000 miles of the 4,500 miles of line it operates. Schmieding said some workers inadvertently laid down excessive amounts.

The State Department of Environmental Control and the State Game and Parks Commission investigated, along with Norris, when citizens complained of dying trees and bushes and possible water contamination.

An investigator says no water contamination was found.

A spokesman for the Nebraska Public Power District said NPPD makes limited use of Tordon 1 OK, but has had no problems with it.

Flood control project receives public support

Central City (UPI) — The 45 persons attending a public meeting showed "near unanimous support" for the proposed $3.4 million Silver Creek watershed flood control project, according to Ron Bishop, Central Platte Natural Resources District manager.

Bishop said about 400 farmers are involved in the 90,000-acre drainage area in Merrick County.

"The main concern of the individuals in attendance seemed to center around whether fencing would be required to keep livestock away from the channels," he said. "There seemed to be a considerable amount of concern that the fencing would make the grazing of pastures unfeasible and would provide hardship on the landowners."

Bishop said a representative of the Omaha consulting firm which devised the plan told the farmers that, if flatter slope sites are put on the channels, grazing without fencing could be permitted.

The Central Platte NRD will take formal action on the proposal at a meeting Thursday night in Grand Island.

Hastings power group has closed session

Hastings (AP) — The Hastings Power Supply committee met for just over two hours in executive session Monday night negotiating contract agreements with the engineering firm Sargent and Lundy of Chicago for Hastings' planned power plant.

Committee chairman Dennis Mullen said no final decision was reached and that it would be premature to give any dollar amounts of the contract.

Following the closed session Bill Beavers, a representative of financial consultant Chiles Heider of Omaha, outlined the official statement to be provided for bond sales to finance the coal-fired generating plant.

Beavers estimated that the earliest date the city could enter the bond market would be four to five months.

He said before entering the market, the committee must consider fuel, design, costs, permits, environmental regulations and site selection to determine if the bonds are economical to ratepayers.

He said work must begin as soon as possible on the necessary licenses, permits and environmental procedures.

Unity among veterans sought in proposed bills

Associated Press

An effort will be made to unite veterans organizations behind a package of legislation to be presented to the 1978 Unicameral, the commander of the Nebraska Veterans of Foreign Wars said Tuesday.

Wayne Andersen of Stuart said he hoped "to present a strong case to the legislature, through a series of bills, that will see to it that veterans don't have to come begging every year."

At the top of Andersen's list of proposals will be one to increase the Veterans Aid Fund by "at least $2 million," he said.

Late in the 1977 session, senators rejected a proposal to increase the $10 million fund by $1 million, Interest from the fund, administered by the state, is used to help needy veterans, Andersen said.

Andersen is working with Neligh Sen. John DeCamp to help put the proposed legislative package together.

"They came in at the eleventh hour in the last session and there really was no way we could help them," DeCamp said. "Between now and January 1 I think a program can be worked up that can win legislative approval."

Andersen said the effort "will need the support of every veterans organization," and said he would try to organize the VFW, the American Legion and other groups to support it.

"The principal in the Veterans Aid Fund can't be touched, only the interest can be used, and inflation is eating it up," he said.

"We would like a program that would automatically make what you could term cost of living increases, or whatever, in the fund automatically," Andersen said.

The fund paid more than $500,000 to needy veterans in the last year, he said.

"We also would like to see part of the Norfolk Regional Center devoted to the care of veterans," Andersen said. A bill aimed at that goal was stalled in the last session.

"I would hope the entire area of veterans legislation could be re-examined next year," Andersen said. "But we have learned that we have to make ourselves heard and that is what I'm going to be working at."

DeCamp said he hoped a series of joint veterans group meetings could be arranged, "so that we can get a picture of what the veterans need and want, and get those bills off the ground early in the next session."

"I want veterans to show up for committee hearings and I want every senator to be aware of what the veterans want," DeCamp said.

Exon firm, assessor clash over tax matter

Omaha (UPI) — The Douglas County Assessor's Office said Tuesday a firm controlled by Gov. J. James Exon failed to comply with personal property valuation requirements for its Omaha office.

Lois Callahan, chief auditor and personal property director, said the J.J. Exon Co. was sent two forms asking the amount of inventory and office equipment on hand at its office at 7397 Pacific St. and both forms were returned and marked "not applicable."

Mrs. Callahan said the assessor's office has estimated the value of the equipment at $75,000 and whatever the value ends up being, Exon's firm will be assessed a 50% penalty because it failed to voluntarily file a valuation report.

Exon owns a majority of stock in the company, but hasn't taken an active role in it since being elected governor.

In Lincoln, the firm's accountant-controller, Dale Lilyhorn, said the firm keeps all its inventory and equipment in Lincoln and pays taxes in Lancaster County.

"We don't have any inventory in Omaha, we don't have any warehousing there," Lilyhorn said. "If they sell a machine, we pick it up in Lincoln and deliver it."

However, Mrs. Callahan called the firm's Omaha office and was told the firm had a copying machine on hand and could deliver it immediately.

"If they have someone answering the telephone in Omaha, they have at least a chair and a desk," she said, "and those are not listed under office equipment."

Lilyhorn said "there may be one or so copy machines" in the firm's Omaha office but "I can't say for sure."

"But if there is," he said, "then it is reported in Lancaster County and we pay taxes there."

Mrs. Callahan said state law requires the tax be paid in the county in which the equipment is located.

If Exon's firm fails to prove to the assessor the value of its Omaha office equipment is different than the $75,000 estimate, it will be billed for an estimated $2,750 in taxes in November, Mrs. Callahan said.

Proposed G.I. school budget gets early OK

Grand Island (UPI) — A proposed $10.4 million Grand Island School District budget sailed through a public hearing Monday night without opposition.

Albert Stelling, Chamber of Commerce Tax Committee chairman and the only person to testify, praised the school district administration for doing a "fine job" in assembling the budget which is up 7.6% from last year.

The school board is expected to vote on the proposal during its July meeting.

Dr. Cliff Dale, school superintendent, said because of more revenues from several sources, including state aid, the increase in local taxes for the proposed budget would be $84,000 or about 1.4%.

The total mill levy will be 60.5 mills, a decrease of more than 6 mills from last year. Dale said the mill levy figure was based on an estimated tax valuation of $113 million.

The largest single category in the budget was an estimated $6.3 million primarily for salaries, an increase of 7.5% over last year.

Douglas County valuations hit record

Omaha (AP) — Douglas County has a record $94 million increase in personal property valuations this year, Lois Callahan, personal property director and chief auditor in the assessor's office, said.

The valuations increased to $650.9 million this year, she said Tuesday, and could climb higher after audits are made on some businesses.

Much of the valuation increase was in business inventory, which climbed by $50.9 million to $339 million, Mrs. Callahan said.

She credited publicity about the "assessor's air force" in large part for the increases.

"I'm certain it made some businesses file more accurate reports," she said. "I plan to be out again Jan. 1, 1978, not only by air, but by land."

Last Jan. 1 Mrs. Callahan flew over the county in a plane, taking photographs of feedlots, auto dealer lots and other businesses which had considerable inventory. The pictures were compared with personal property reports filed by the businesses.

Top level salary raises OKd

Omaha (UPI) — The Douglas County Board Tuesday approved a $225,000 salary increase package for 66 top bracket and professional employes.

The 12.9% increase in the wage package, effective July 1, matched that given earlier to other county employes covered by union contracts.

Commissioner Richard Fellman objected to the raises because he said nine of the employes involved earned more than $25,000 annually.

"We are more than matching private enterprise," Fellman said.

However, Commissioner Michael Albert responded, "show me a private hospital administrator who is paid only $39,000 and I'll give you a bucket of apples."

None of the county employes received wage increases last year because of the county's fiscal crisis at the time.

Job doesn't give theft immunity

Omaha (UPI) — Al Veys has proven even being mayor of Nebraska's largest city won't prevent someone from attempting to make a fast buck.

Veys told police his car was parked at the University of Nebraska-Omaha parking lot Monday when someone stole his police radio antenna off the trunk.

Veys valued the antenna at $25.

Millard board eyes different school systems

Omaha (AP) — The Millard School Board decided Monday night to start a study concerning alternative school systems, to be presented to the board by January for possible implementation by September of 1978.

Discussed most frequently at the meeting were the traditional system and the free or new school system.

Dr. Robert Ackerman, a board member, said he "favors the concept" of alternative systems in a rapidly growing district like Millard.

He said he doesn't think "the basic school is a bad option at all," but many parents may prefer free schools where students have more options about what they study.

Rains flood lowland areas

Heavy rains spread across central and western Nebraska Tuesday, leaving extensive lowland flooding behind.

The Little Blue River at Ayr overflowed onto Highway 74 Tuesday night and was carrying a heavy load of water.

A flood warning was extended until Wednesday morning for persons living along the river from Ayr to Hebron, with the river expected to crest at DeWeese early Wednesday at 12 feet.

Portions of the Crystal Lake area were under water and some of the minor streams that feed into the Little Blue had backed up and some overflow had occurred.

Afternoon showers were steady over the southeast portion of the state, as the rest of the storm activity drained out from the west.

Severe sewer and street flooding problems were reported in Hastings. City engineering crews placed barricades in northwestern parts of the city where water was reported near some residential doorways.

A weather observer at Crete in the southeast said that town received 3.16 inches of rain from 9:30 a.m. Tuesday to 12:20 p.m.

Some of the other heavier precipitation reports included 1.20 inches of rainfall in Garland, 1.36 inches at Hickman and 1.72 inches at Nebraska City.

Nebraska City received 1.40 inches of that total in a 40-minute period. Other rainfall reports showed 1.50 inches at Nelson, giving the town a total of 2.81 inches since midnight, and 1.26 inches at Roca.

University of Nebraska at Lincoln agriculture engineering Professor William Splinter said the rain "really takes the pressure" off farmers who irrigate and will probably delay the need for irrigation until about July 4, the normal starting date.

He added though, that farmers preparing to harvest wheat next week probably weren't too pleased by the downpour.

Lincoln received .76 inches of precipitation. Temperatures in the Capital City ranged from a high of 73 to a low reading of 61.

Professor Don Hanway of the UNL agronomy department said the rains were especially welcome in the southeast area of the state where they were needed the most.

He said there had been little carryover of moisture and that the area around Lincoln had been up to an inch and a half behind for the year in precipitation.

The heaviest rain fell on a 35-mile stretch from east of Lincoln to northeast Kansas near Manhattan.

Storms in the central and eastern parts of the state cleared out in the evening hours but a heavy line of thunderstorms moved into the Panhandle area southeast of Crawford and west of Gordon. Another heavy thunderstorm was reported along the Nebraska-Wyoming border northwest of Scottsbluff.

The weather service at Scottsbluff issued a severe thunderstorm warning for Dawes and northern Sheridan Counties after thunderstorms were spotted near Chadron in the evening. Scattered spreading thunderstorms were expected to move east.

Evening temperatures across the state were in the 70s. The high temperature for the day was 85 at Chadron. The high in Omaha was 69, with a low of 59. Grand Island reported extremes of 74 degrees high and 60 degrees low temperatures.

Winds were generally southeasterly at 10 to 15 miles per hour, except in the Panhandle where they were northeasterly at 5 to 10 m.p.h.

The Associated Press reported that a teen-aged couple watching overnight rains late Monday night in a field near Scottsbluff were alarmed when the boy put his hand outside the window of his pickup and felt water.

The level of water in the field had nearly reached the window of the truck. Climbing to the roof of the cab, the youths called for help and were rescued by the Scotts Bluff County sheriff.

Bill introduced to aid rural power districts

Omaha (AP) — Sen. Carl Curtis of Nebraska Tuesday introduced a bill which would have the effect of helping rural power districts in time of disaster.

The bill gives the administrator of the Rural Electrification Administration the authority to use assets of the REA revolving fund for emergency repairs of rural utility and telephone facilities when normal federal disaster aid is unavailable.

Acting at the state governor's request, the administrator would decide whether to lend REA assistance.

The fund would be reimbursed by Congress.

The Curtis staff said the bill was prompted by the Carter administration's refusal to provide federal disaster relief for several rural electric systems in Nebraska, Kansas and Colorado, which were severely damaged by snow storms last March.

7 women, 5 men sit on jury of York youth's murder trial

By Michael Holmes
Outstate Nebraska Bureau

York — Seven women and five men were selected Tuesday afternoon to serve as the jury in the murder trial of 17-year-old Ricky A. Johnson.

Johnson is charged with first degree murder in the fatal shooting of a York police officer the night of April 22.

The jurors were sworn in after two days of questioning by District Court Judge William Norton, Deputy County Atty. Vince Valentino and defense attorney John R. Brogan.

Nine of 43 prospective jurors questioned were dismissed by the judge, most because they said they held personal opinions that would make it difficult for them to be impartial during the trial.

One prospective juror, a Nebraska Public Power District employe, was dismissed after he noted that Brogan is a member of the NPPD board of directors.

Valentino asked the man if he would be influenced by Brogan's presence as defense attorney. "Naturally, I might be more receptive to what he says than what you say," the man replied to laughter in the courtroom.

James M. Richardson, 24, was responding to a disturbance call at the Johnson home when shot and killed.

Brogan's questioning of jurors Monday and Tuesday centered on their feelings about ownership of rifles and shotguns, use of alcoholic beverages and any acquaintences they might have who are law enforcement officers.

However, he added a new question for prospective jurors interviewed Tuesday. Several times, Brogan asked if the jurors would be influenced because of "coarse language or epithets" the defendant might have used in referring to police officers.

Johnson, then a York High School junior, was arrested about an hour after Richardson was killed. The youth's mother, Mrs. Gayle Johnson, testified at a preliminary hearing that the shooting followed a quarrel between her and her son.

After the quarrel, she said, Ricky left the house carrying his .22 caliber rifle. Several shots were fired at the Johnson home before Richardson arrived on the scene, she said.

Opening arguments are expected to begin Wednesday morning.

Taxi driver piles into pole, dies in Omaha

Omaha (AP) — An Omaha taxi driver who died shortly after his cab struck a power pole early Tuesday is Nebraska's latest traffic fatality.

Police said George W. Hickman, 49, was southbound on an Omaha street when his cab spun out of control and struck the pole about 6 a.m. The Street was wet and the tires of Hickman's cab were bald, according to accident investigators.

Brother finds 14-year-old boy dead on farm

Central City (AP) — A 14-year-old boy died Monday on a farm where he and his brother were doing irrigation work.

Authorities said Scott Pullen, 14, of Central City was found dead by his older brother, Mitch. The two had been working on the Don Erickson farm north of here, and the boys had separated briefly.

When Mitch returned, he found his brother dead, authorities said.

The cause of the youth's death was not known. An autopsy was scheduled at a Grand Island hospital.

The boy was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Pullen of Central City and the brother of Jeff Pullen, starting middle guard for the University of Nebraska football team last year.

Omahan's truck hits pole

Omaha (AP) — A Department of Roads vehicle pulling into traffic may have led to an accident Monday afternoon that sent a semi-trailer truck down an embankment of Interstate 480 in Omaha, police said.

The truck, driven by Harry Ellis Jr. of Omaha, hit a light pole and went off the northbound Interstate after hitting the rear of a suddenly slowing truck, police said.

Ellis, who compalined of a hip injury, was in fair condition at Lutheran Hospital.

The other driver, Gary Smith, 32 of Council Bluffs, told police his truck was hit when he had to brake for a Roads Department vehicle pulling off the shoulder onto the road.

Nebraska man critically hurt in Rapid City

Rapid City, S.D. (UPI) — A 30-foot fall onto a concrete floor has left a Nebraska man in critical condition in a local hospital.

John Bartak, 31, a working foreman with a Norfolk, Neb., construction firm, fell while working in the symnasium at the new Rapid City Central High School.

Bartak is employed by Kenney and Reel Construction Co.

Train derails; no injuries

Brule (AP) — Union Pacific Railroad crews cleared the westbound main line track Tuesday afternoon, and were expected to have the eastbound track cleared by 8 p.m. Mountain Time.

The tracks were blocked early Tuesday morning when seven cars and the caboose of an empty, eastbound freight train derailed about four miles west of here.

A conductor and brakeman were reported shaken up but not injured in the derailment.

Buffalo Bill's image hurt by 'crazy films'

North Platte (UPI) — The image of William F. "Buffalo Bill" Cody has suffered from "some of these crazy films that have been made about him," the recipient of this year's Buffalo Bill Award said Tuesday.

"People prefer tearing a man down, rather than building him up," said Col. Tim McCoy, 86, the veteran of nearly 100 Western movies.

"My impression of Cody was that he was probably the most fantastic showman we have ever put out," McCoy said at a news conference.

"I always admired him. I thought he was terrific," said McCoy, his blue eyes shining from below his broad brim Stetson set at an angle that was his trademark.

The award, which honors McCoy for "outstanding contributions to quality family entertainment in the Cody tradition," will be presented Wednesday at the opening performance of the Buffalo Bill Rodeo.

McCoy's career began in the 1920s, when he served as a technical advisor for the movie, "The Wagon Train." He was an Army adjutant general in Wyoming, and, because he knew sign language, the movie company asked him to provide the Indians. McCoy brought 500.

Even then, authenticity was difficult. "They wanted to do a council scene out in the open and they wanted the tepees put in a circle with the doors all opening onto the center.

"I said, 'You can't do it that way. They only pitch a tepee one way.' The door must face the east so that when the Indian comes out of there in the morning, he sees the sun, his father, come up to greet him.

"Through another interpreter, the Indians were told to pitch their tents with the doors facing in.

"When they came out the next morning, the Indians had all the doors facing east," McCoy said.

McCoy resigned his commission in the Army and spent two years promoting "The Wagon Train," appearing on stage with about 50 Indians.

In 1926, McCoy signed with MGM, and within three years he had made 16 films. The first, "War Paint," was shot on location in Wyoming where McCoy played a role he was already familiar with — a cavalry officer.

Some of the current Westerns make no pretense at being authentic, he said. "Fiction most always has to be more heroic than the real thing, but when I look at Westerns today and Westerns made when I was in the business, there is no comparison whatsoever.

"In our day, the hero had to be an outstanding, clean-cut fellow that the kids all looked up to and said, 'Oh, I want to be like him' when they left the movie picture house. Today, they look like bums," McCoy said.

Minnesota firm buys Pamida service operation

Omaha (AP) — Marshall Foods Inc. of Marshall, Minn., has announced purchase of the service merchandising operations of Pamida Inc., an Omaha-based retail firm.

David J. Weiner, president of Marshall Foods, announced the purchase price will be in the range of $2.5 million.

Pamida Board Chairman D. J. Witherspoon said the division purchased by Marshall distributes nonfood items such as health and beauty aids, primarily to supermarkets.

He said the division accounted for only four per cent of Pamida's annual business and was sold "to put all our effort behind our retail discount business."

Witherspoon said Pamida owns 193 Gibson's discount stores throughout the Midwest.

Marshall Foods, through its Groves-Kelco Division and other operations, also is in the service merchandising business.

The Groves-Kelco Division also obtained Pamida's service merchandising warehouse facilities in South Sioux City, Neb.

No one wants blame for $1 million mistake

Omaha (AP) — A $1 million "mistake" six years ago is going to cost Omaha dearly.

In 1971, $1 million was spent to pave a two-mile stretch of Pacific St. and it was supposed to last 25 years, officials said.

The pavement is shot. Another $1.2 million will have to be spent.

"I'm afraid we all make mistakes, and this was a big one," City Construction Engineer Roy Sides said.

"You strive for 100% performance, but you don't always get it. Unfortunately, the taxpayer ends up paying for it.

"I don't want to point fingers, but let's face it. The contractor did the job and it's up to him to get the job done."

The pavement was installed by Charles Vrana and Son Construction Co., which said it was not at fault.

Richard Coleman, vice president of Vrana, said Monday that Omaha had a bad winter starting a month or two after the work was completed.

"The city dumped tons and tons of salt on it, and we had just finished," Coleman said. "That's the worst possible thing you can do to new concrete. It just takes the top off."

Sides said many tests have been run on the concrete and they don't pinpoint the contractor.

Bluffs to ban topless massages

Council Bluffs, Iowa (AP) — Women may continue giving professional massages to men in Council Bluffs, but topless massages soon will be prohibited.

A week ago, on a motion by city council member Dorothy Strohbehn, the council directed the city attorney to draw up a massage parlor ordinance amendment prohibiting females from massaging males and vice versa.

Explaining that this might damage business for legitimate massage parlors, Mrs. Strohbehn asked the council Monday to change that amendment to prohibit topless massages. The motion passed unanimously.

A second motion requiring for Council Bluffs masseurs and masseuses 150 hours of training at an accredited school passed 3-2.

Nightclub operator's trial reset

Council Bluffs, Iowa (AP) — Pottawattamie County District Judge E.F. Hansen Tuesday postponed the trial of a Carter Lake nightclub operator accused of wounding two men outside another lounge May 1.

Richard McWilliams, 28, operator of the Nite Life Lounge, faces two counts of assault with intent to commit murder stemming from the incident at the Hi Baby Lounge.

McWilliams' trial was scheduled to begin Tuesday, but his attorney requested a delay.

Tiemann again targets GOP 'declining fortunes'

By Don Walton
Star Staff Writer

Former Gov. Norbert Tiemann Tuesday directed more criticism at Nebraska Republican Party leadership after GOP National Committeeman William Morrow described his earlier remarks as "grossly erroneous and grossly unfair."

The former (1967-71) Republican governor said "declining fortunes" of the GOP in Nebraska can be traced to the fact that the GOP has been "outgunned, outmanned, outfought and out-talented" by Nebraska Democrats.

And the likely result will be the loss of the remaining Republican Senate seat next year and Democratic retention of the governorship and lieutenant governor's office, he said.

"The majority party (Republican) continually loses important elections" in Nebraska, Tiemann said.

Not only did it lose the governorship in 1970 (when Tiemann's reelection bid was rejected) and 1974, but it lost a Senate race in 1976, he noted.

"Where are the bright young faces?" he asked.

One reason they may not be rising in Republican ranks, he suggested, is that they are often discouraged by GOP party leaders.

"I know who said no to me" in 1966, he said. That's when Tiemann made his first successful run at the governorship.

"The leadership told me to run for state treasurer or the Legislature and work my way up. I was given to understand that I was not their boy."

Tiemann subsequently won a primary battle with former Gov. Val Peterson and was elected that November.

Tiemann Monday had suggested that the GOP needed fresh new leadership and "new blood" if it is going to successfully meet Democratic challenges.

Morrow offered his brief critique of those remarks in answer to a question during a panel discussion at the Robert A. Taft Institute of Government on the University of Nebraska campus.

Tiemann promptly replied that he would "stick by the comments I made. The party is in a shambles and I don't see any resurrection coming."

Now living in Virginia, Tiemann said he believes he can look at Nebraska's political scene objectively.

As for fresh blood and fresh faces, the Republic Party "ain't got none," he declared. "The party is in a shmables and a mess."

Morrow said Republican leaders remain impartial in primary battles.

"We can't grant a nomination," only the GOP voters can, he noted.

As for new blood, he said he believes both of the two announced Republican gubernatorial candidates (Vance Rogers of Lincoln and Robert Phares of North Platte) would fit that description.

Within the party structure, Morrow said, he believes "Nobby would not know half the people on the state central committee" since they have landed there since he left office.

Democratic National Committeeman Allen O'Donnell also participated in the panel.

"I don't think the Republican Party is in a shambles," he said, "but I wouldn't mind."

On other matters, all three panelists urged support for a partisan Unicameral.

O'Donnell said he believes partisan organization of the Legislature would dilute the power of special interests.

Morrow said such a system would result in "more efficient and effective" organization of the Unicameral.

Tiemann suggested that the lieutenant governor also be removed as presiding officer of the Legislature and simply assigned the role of "assistant governor."

Interchange is given first OK

Omaha (AP) — Nebraska has been notified by the Federal Highway Administration that it approves of an Interstate 80 interchange near the southwest edge of Omaha.

Lou Lamberty, Douglas County surveyor, said the interchange could be built just south of Harrison Street at about 126th Street.

He said an engineer now must be employed to prepare specific plans, and it may be several years before such a road is built.

Sciences grant aids Bellevue College plans

Omaha (UPI) — Sen. Edward Zorinsky, D-Neb., said Tuesday the National Science Foundation has approved a $100,000 grant for Bellevue College.

In a statement released by his Omaha office, Zorinsky said the funds would be used for a science development project involving natural science and psychology.

Zorinsky said the project involves the subjects of biology, chemistry, physics and social sciences.

The grant will allow Bellevue College to further develop intercooperation among the various natural sciences and psychology, Zorinsky said, "and at the same time aid in providing quality higher education for the Bellevue area."

Zorinsky said the grant was one of 68 awarded through the National Science Foundation's Comprehensive Assistance to Undergraduate Sciences program.

Stocks score broad advance

Dow Ind. +4.33

NewYork (AP) — Stock prices scored a broad advance Tuesday as the inflation-sensitive market responded to a government report showing a slowdown in the rate of consumer price increases.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up more than 10 points during the day, gave some of that up near the close to finish with a 4.33 point gain at 928.60.

The strength was widespread. For every two issues that lost in value on the New York Stock Exchange, more than three gained.

Brokers said the Labor Department's report on the consumer price index in May helped dampen worries over the rate of inflation.

The government reported Tuesday that consumer prices rose at an annual rate of 7.2 per cent in May, a reduction from the 9.6 per cent level reported in April.

In a separate report, the Commerce Department said that factory orders for durable goods increased a half per cent in May after a drop of seven-tenths of a per cent in April.

Both reports apparently added to investor confidence in the direction of the economy. The Dow average, which rose in a mild rally late Monday, has gained more than 8 points in two days.

Standard & Poor's index of 400 industrial stocks gained .33 to 110.05. The S&P 500-stock composite index rose .32 to 100.74.

Sony Corp., off ¼ to 9¼, led the active list as of the 4 p.m. close of the NYSE. Trading included a 242,700-share block traded at 9⅛.

Twentieth Century Fox, second most active, came in for some apparent profit taking after posting recent strong advances on the strength of its new film "Star Wars." The stock slipped one point to 22¼.

Pan American, up ¼ to 6, also was active. Trading included a 100,000-share block at 5⅞.

Among the largest net gainers was Coca-Cola Bottling Co. of New York, up ⅝ to 8⅞. Trading included a 50,000-share lock at 8⅜.

Fremont beef plant planned

Omaha (AP) — A firm headed by a retired Air Force major general plans to build a beef-processing plant in Fremont to prepare beef for export.

The firm plans to market other agricultural commodities, such as soybeans, wheat and corn, a spokesman said.

Pete C. Sianis, deputy chief of staff for operations at Strategic Air Command Headquarters until his retirement in 1973, said Prime-X International has 14 stockholders. He said many of them are "prominent Omaha-area businessmen."

Sianis said the firm has selected a tentative site in Fremont, where it has an office, for construction of a beef processing plant, probably within the next six months.

Sianis and the firm's secretary-treasurer, Lyle Bonn, declined to list stockholders until plans for the firm are formally announced later.

Bonn is a former West Coast meat processor. He said Prime-X has hired State Sen. Walter George of Blair as an export marketing executive.

George is attending a trade show in Frankfurt, Germany, where meat processing equipment is being displayed, Bonn said.

Bonn said the idea for the firm originated last year when George and four other state senators formed Midwest Task Force for Beef Exports.

None of the other task force organizers are involved in Prime-X, Bonn said. They are Sens. Loran Schmit of Bellwood, Cal Carsten of Avoca and former Sens. Leslie Stull of Alliance and Jules Burbach of Hartington.

The task force was established to expand and stabilize foreign markets for midwestern beef and beef products.

Bonn said he merged a beef processing firm he headed in San Diego, Ibex Inc., with Prime-X and plans are to build a plant employing about 50 persons in Fremont.

"We should expand rapidly after we get started," he said. "There is a market of 360 million people in Europe. It has been barely tapped."

Bonn, a mechanical engineer, said beef produced by Prime-X would be similar to beef cuts produced by Iowa Beef Processors, in that the cuts would be boxed and vacuum-packed.

"We plan some departures from traditional meat-cutting techniques," he said.

Processing by Prime-X will include providing individual steaks "ready to throw on the stove," Bonn said.

He said the firm also hopes to market the products of other meat processors in Nebraska.

Soybeans fall to daily limits

Chicago (AP) — Soybean, soybean meal and oil futures in old crop deliveries fell to allowable daily limits on the Chicago Board of Trade Tuesday.

Wheat, oats and corn were down 4¼ to nearly 6 cents. Iced broilers lost more than ¼ cent a pound on selling influenced by lower grain and meal prices.

The decline over the entire board was blamed on a slowdown in exports, a lack of buyers and a generally bearish mood, and generally beneficial weather for crop growth.

Petition against school aid increase seen

United Press International

A petition campaign to block the $20 million increase in state aid to schools and to roll back a sales tax increase is virtually assured, says S.H. (Zeke) Brauer Jr.

Brauer, secretary of the Nebraska School Improvement Association, said a final decision will be made next week.

"I feel it will be done," he said. "The people expect it."

If the effort is made, opponents of the new state aid program will have until Sept. 2 to reach their goal of 54,000 signatures on the referendum petitions.

Brauer has been polling nearly 1,500 activists from the successful 1974 state aid repeal referendum campaign for pledges of support. He will leave the final determination to former state Sen. Ramey Whitney, Chappell, he said.

Whitney will be responsible for gathering support from present and former state senators, Brauer said. Brauer would act as coordinator.

If the signature goal is reached, the 1977 state aid law would be suspended until a 1978 referendum election. That would also remove the need for the half-point increase in the state sales tax rate, Hrauer said.

The jump from 3% to 3.5%, scheduled to take effect July 1, has been blamed on the need for state school aid funds.

The 1977 Nebraska Legislature enacted the state aid bill over Gov. J. James Exon's veto. It calls for an increase from the present $55 million in three, $20 million annual boosts to $115 million.

Brauer said the petition drive will concentrate on urban areas because this is a critical period for farmers, who must be in their fields with the hay and wheat harvest and the laying of irrigation pipe.

"We expect a heavier volume of signatures in Douglas County (than during the 1974 drive)", he said. "The people I talk to there are absolutely irate."

In 1974, the association's primary partner was the AFL-CIO. This year, he said, union members are being polled but the leadership has not been consulted. Sen. Bill Brennan, Omaha, state AFL-CIO president, may not support the anti-state aid forces, Brauer said.

Brauer said he thinks Brennan may not be a staunch opponent this year because the senator received a campaign contribution from the Nebraska State Education Association, which represents the teachers and is a state aid backer.

The suspension of the state aid law would create problems for school districts, Brauer said. For that reason, he hopes to file the petitions before the Aug. 15 deadline for approving local school budgets."

Congressmen and 19 states support Curtis' balanced budget amendment

Washington (AP) — A bipartisan group of members of Congress are pressing for a constitutional amendment that would require the balancing of the federal budget.

Sen. Carl T. Curtis, R-Neb., who has filed such an amendment in the past several Congresses, told a news conference that 19 states have petitioned Congress to submit the proposal for ratification.

Under the amendment proposed by Curtis the President would determine within 20 days after the close of the fiscal year whether there was a deficit.

"If there is a deficit," reads the Curtis amendment, "the President shall determine the percentage rate of income tax surtax needed to recoup the deficit in the following calendar year."

The amendment also would provide that "in the case of a grave national emergency, including a war formally declared by Congress," the statistics could be set aside for one year by vote of a three-fourths majority of the House and Senate.

Sen. Harry F. Byrd Jr., Ind.-Va., told the news conference that in the last 10 years that national debt has increased from $341 billion to an estimated $700 billion at the end of this year.

"I believe in the long run, only a legal mandate will curb the politician's urge to spend," said Byrd.

A proposed constitutional amendment requires approval by two-thirds of the House and Senate and then ratification by the legislatures of three-fourths of the states.

Nominee to school unit voted down

Omaha (AP) — The Omaha School Board voted 5-4 Monday night to ignore the nomination of Edward L. Lacrosse for a board vacancy and start the selection over again.

The vote continued a rift along board members that prompted the Omaha Council of Parent Teacher Associations to express "grave concern" in a statement to the board.

Mrs. Judy Marx, council president said the division "can only impede the policy-making process which is the responsibility of the board."

LaCrosse, a Boys Town administrator, still could be nominated in the next round.

Board member Don Cunningham last week accused five others of breaking the law by nominating LaCrosse June 8 to succeed Tim Rouse. Rouse resigned to join the Omaha City Counci.

Cunningham named Paul Kennedy, the board's president and members Dorothy Beavers, Mrs. Maurice Frank, Leo Hoffman and Gaynelle Goodrich as the violators.

Jemes Monaghan said he considered the June 8 action "null and void," because the committee hadn't given enough notice that it would nominate someone.

He said the board's policies require five days advance notice of a meeting agenda.

Frand Stanek, who was out of town, said he reviewed qualifications of prospective appointees for 1½ hours in the board secretary's office before he left town. He said he told the search committee chairman, Mrs. Ruth Thomas to "go ahead and name someone."

Hoffman challenged Monaghan's allegation of improper notice.

But Monaghan said the intent of the June 8 meeting was "not to take action but to establish procedures" for selecting a board member.

Ronald Magruder, who also missed the June 8 session said he was disturbed the committee nominated a candidate. He said he also understood that the meeting was called to establish procedures.

Summer school won't be hiked for handicapped

Lincoln Public Schools have not budged an inch from their policy not to provide special education for any more hours per year than schooling provided for normal students.

In answer to a request by the Lancaster County Board to fund a special program for 6 severely handicapped youths under the LOMR (Lancaster Office of Mental Retardation) program, Supt. John Prasch reiterated that the school system will only pay for half-day sessions for six weeks this summer, or a total of 90 hours of instruction.

The County's problem is what to do with these youngsters for the rest of the summer until Lincoln Public Schools take over their education full-time next fall.

The youths need an intensive, full-time educational program year-round, according to LOMR Director Bill Templemeyer.

The County Board has not yet decided whether to fund the program to expand it to full days until July 22, then continue full-day instruction until the fall term starts.

Full funding for this period would cost $6,000, according to Templemeyer. The school system was asked to contribute half this amount, but has refused to do so.

Some get pay raise

Washington (AP) — Workers at Celanese Corp. plants in three southern states have approved a new contract raising hourly pay $1.15 over the next three years, the Federal Mediation Service announced.

Boo-birds don't ruffle Connors' feathers; Evert wins

Wimbledon (UPI) — Jimmy Connors, shrugging off the unprecedented boos and hisses of a normally staid center court crowd, Tuesday defeated Briton Richard Lewis, 6-3, 6-2, 6-4, in his opening match of the $373,440 Wimbledon Centennial Championships.

The Royal box was pointedly empty when Connors took to the center court, and the crowd of 15,000 began booing, hissing and catcalling in a display of displeasure never before given a former champion.

The reason was Connors' decision Monday not to attend the opening parade of past champions and not to collect his commemorative medal, an action which the British press called a snub to the Duke of Kent, who was handing them out.

But Connors' career is a record of thriving on adversity and he has often appeared at his best when battling the establishment, be it American or British.

"I expected the reception I got," said Connors afterwards. "It made me play better."

The top seed and 9-4 favorite was seldom tested by the left-hander who looks a little like Stan Smith but has none of the Californian's armory of shots. Connors played with his right thumb bandaged in a small steel splint but the injury didn't affect his game.

"I can't come all the way around with my swing," he said. "Perhaps it even helps my game."

The second day's play was evenly balanced between men's and women's first round singles. The only upset was not really even that. Harold Solomon, the 16th and last seed, was dumped by fellow American Steve Docherty, 6-4, 4-6, 7-5, 7-5.

Solomon's baseline game, all-powerful on slow courts, was hopelessly at sea on Wimbledon's fast grass and critics who were surprised that Solomon should be seeded at all were justified.

Docherty, of Portland, Ore., used his booming first serve and good volleying to the maximum, leaving Solomon no time for passing shots, and the Silver Spring, Md., player was soon showing his frustration by throwing his racket at the back fence and slugging balls into the next court.

Defending champion Chris Evert was in a calmer mood on center court, demolishing fellow American Ruta Gerulaitis, her first round opponent, 6-0, 6-3, with her usual cool approach.

Her tennis varied from the baseline and her drop shots frequently caught the New Yorker flat-footed. She disposed of the first set in just 18 minutes and when Gerulaitis finally won a game, she received an ovation from the crowd for the feat.

On the next-door court, Martina Navratilova, the player seeded to meet Evert in the final, was giving a much less convincing display against Briton Glynis Coles. The score of 6-3, 6-0 was almost the same but the Czech-born player was horribly out of touch and was lucky to meet somebody in worse form than herself.

Rosie Casals, the sixth seed, downed Tanya Harford of South Africa, 6-3, 6-1, while both Billie Jean King and 14-year-old Tracy Austin received first round byes.

Twelfth-seeded Kathy May, the other U.S. seed in action, recovered from 0-3 in her first appearance on center court to defeat Britain's Linda Mottram, 6-3, 6-1.

In other women's matches involving Americans, Janet Newberry downed Raquel Giscafre of Argentina, 6-4, 6-2, Julie Anthony stopped Naoko Sato of Japan, 6-1, 6-3, and JoAnn Russell ousted Briton Sue Mappin, 8-6, 6-2.

In men's opening round clashes, Tim Gullikson succeeded where his left-handed twin brother had failed Monday, reaching the second round with a 6-2, 6-4, 6-3 win over fellow American Steve Krulevitz.

Other American wins went to John McEnroe, who sidelined Ismail El Shafei of Egypt, 6-0, 7-5, 6-4, and veteran Dennis Ralston, finalist here 11 years ago, who disposed of Trey Waltke, St. Louis, Mo., 5-7, 6-4, 6-2, 9-8.

'The Bear' moans

An esteemed football expert from the Southeastern Conference says Alabama will be woeful this fall. He says the Tide will stink up the gridiron, embarrass its fans, shame parents and coaches — possibly beat Vanderbilt and finish No. 4 in the Bottom Ten poll.

But, before you bet the mortgage on Nebraska's Sept. 18 meeting with Alabama in the second game of the season, read on.

The "expert" is Paul 'Bear' Bryant, whom the Atlanta Constitution calls the original "Bad News Bear."

The Georgia paper recently talked to the Alabama coach about the upcoming season, now that spring practice is out of the way and he's able to take a realistic look during the summer about the upcoming campaign.

Bryant made a big deal out of the fact that The Tide lost its entire front five defensively. The two ends, tackles and middle guard are gone.

The paper says he conveniently forgot to mention that the other six defensive starters are back, as well as seven starters from an offensive unit that humiliated a fine UCLA team in the Liberty Bowl last December.

"We have probably the toughest schedule we've ever had," Bryant insists, pointing to both Nebraska and Southern California on the road.

The Bear denies he scheduled USC and Nebraska to quiet critics of past soft schedules. "The schedule was made 10 years ago. Southern Cal and Nebraska are both great teams," Bryant told the Constitution. "It's an honor to play them."

Sounds like a little Southern Gentleman 'Gamesmanship' is already at work. And the game is still three months away.

Arizona State

Reviewing the record book after the conclusion of another exciting and highly successful College World Series in Omaha, brought out an interesting sidelight.

Arizona State won the title — its fourth — by a 2-1 score over South Carolina when catcher Chris Bando broke a 1-1 tie with a home run.

The Sun Devils first championship came in 1965. The score was the same, 2-1, over Ohio State.

And who broke the 1-1 tie in that one to win the game for ASU? Sal Bando.

Speaking of Arizona State, and going back to football, many Sun Devil fans tried to make a perpetual national ranking out of ASU's Fiesta Bowl win over Nebraska two years ago.

The bubble soon burst. Arizona State couldn't keep pace in the WAC last fall, let alone against stronger outside competition. Now the Sun Devils are set to move into the Pac-8 Conference, which most folks presume will become the Pac 10 with the addition of the two Arizona schools.

Kush is quick to admit, "We're going out of the bass pond and into the ocean to fight the sharks."

Other notes

Clearing the desk before heading for the men's state amateur match play golf championships.

Randy York chastised the local radio folks for not broadcasting the Kansas City Royals' baseball games. Many complain that the only area station carrying the games KTAP-FM in Crete, is hard — if not impossible — to find.

A caller says he has the solution. Turn your radio to AM and tune in Lincoln's KFOR. Now switch the set over to FM and there's the ball game.

"On some sets, where the calibration is different," he adds, "you have to start with Omaha's KFAB. But, in one of the two systems, you can find the game easily."

A note of interest for oldtime Capital City baseball fans comes from Jim Miller of the Ralston Recorder. He says the recent death of John Kucab slipped by unnoticed by all the newspapers.

Kucab, who pitched for the old Philadelphia A's in the early 1950s, was a mainstay on the mound for several years for Lincoln's entry in the Class A Western League in the late '40s. He was only 57 years of age at the time of his death.

Trainers say Lively right in decisions

By Mark Gordon
Staff Sports Writer

Omaha — Take it from veteran horse trainers W. R. Morse and Louie Brandt — John Lively was absolutely correct in easing horses he thought were hurt.

"Absolutely, he was right," said Morse here Tuesday at Ak-Sar-Ben. "Anytime the rider doesn't feel the horse is 100 per cent sound, he should stop him. I wish he could have stopped him right in his tracks."

Morse and Brandt each trained a horse Lively eased recently.

Morse trained J.W. Chesnut's J.J. Battle who was eased the eighth race on June 8.

Brandt, Ak-Sar-Ben's leading trainer, trained the Dazoc Stables' Son Gary, who was eased during Saturday's 4-H Handicap.

The Saturday crowd booed Lively considerably after the race — something both trainers adamently felt was unjustified.

"I'm sure the fans just didn't understand what was really happening," Brandt said.

"Anytime anybody rides for me, I'd much rather have them pull the horse off rather than risk a serious injury. Lively did the right thing taking care of the horse first and then worrying about winning," Brandt said.

"He didn't know how badly the house was hurt," Brandt said.

Son Gary was believed to have pulled a leg muscle. He will probably return to competition here July 9 in the $100,000-added Omaha Gold Cup Stakes, the meet's featured attraction for 3-year-olds.

J.J. Battle, meanwhile, pulled a muscle over his right front knee. He will be out of action for about four months, Morse said.

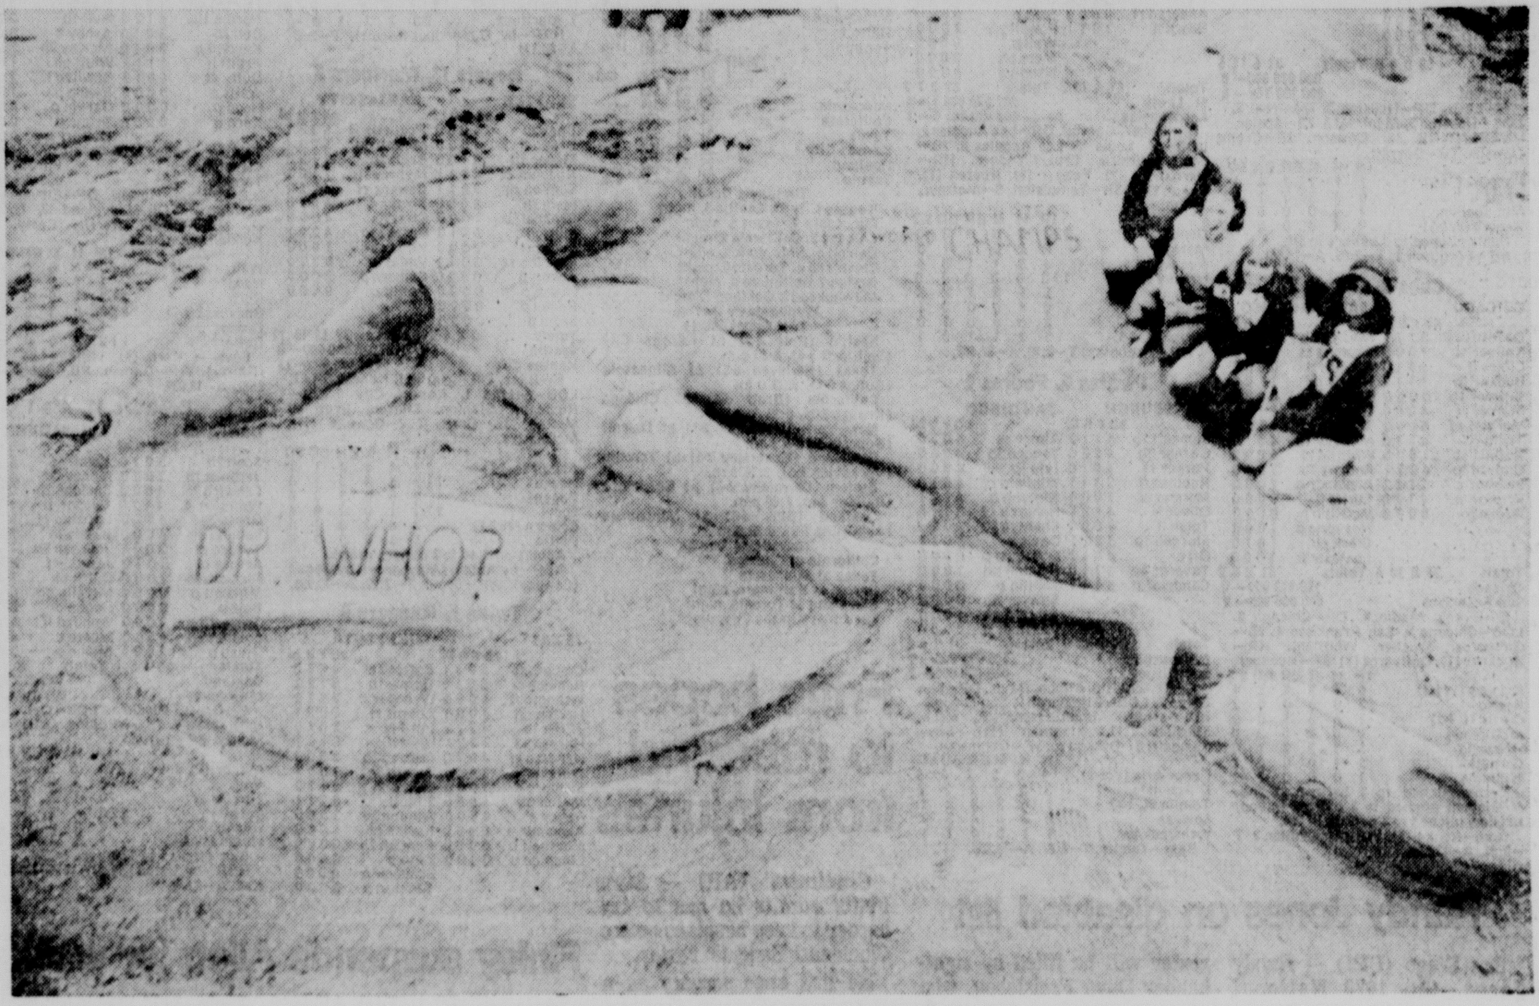
Morse said J.J. will stay here in Omaha until the Ak met ends on July 23 and then will be turned out in El Paso, Tex., for a rest before resuming his career.

While the injuries to Son Gary and J. J. Battle apparently were not that serious, Brandt revealed that the Dazoc Stables' Roger's Choice was found dead in her stall Tuesday morning at the Delta Farm in Arkadelphia, Ark.

"I got a telephone call this morning. It was really a shock," Brandt said of the 4-year-old filly.

Roger's Choice, voted Ak-Sar-Ben's top 3-year-old filly last year by newsmen, won five races and finished third in another here last year. She earned $73,625.

The Dazoc Stable is owned by Bill Rice of Cozad.



One View of Dr. Who

Rangers' Lucchesi apparently on way out

Dallas (AP) — Frank Lucchesi, the 48-year-old manger of the Texas Rangers, will be fired this week probably in the next two days — an unimpeachable Rangers source told The Associated Press by telephone from Minneapolis Tuesday.

The source was the same one who said Billy Martin wouldn't last out the week with the Rangers in July 1975. Martin didn't and Lucchesi replaced him on July 21, 1975.

Texas is in Minneapolis for a four-game series with the Twins.

The Rangers are close to the top in American League West but are some 100,000 behind in attendance from last season. Majority owner Brad Corbett, who had been a staunch backer of Lucchesi, now says "This road trip is crucial."

The Rangers have talked to Eddie Stanky, former Chicago White Sox and St. Louis Cardinals manager and now head baseball coach at the University of South Alabama. The job is apparently Stanky's if he wants it.

The Ranger source said Lucchesi would be offered a spot in the organization. Lucchesi has a year to go on his contract.

Fort Worth, Tex., radio station KRXV contacted Lucchesi in a Minneapolis hotel and he said: "I'm a little shocked and surprised but it sounds like to me there could be some panic in the upper levels of the Ranger organization."

Asked to be more specific, Lucchesi added: "I can't get into that right now. It's absolutely ridiculous to have all this talk going on while we are a contending team."

It's been a tough year for Lucchesi. The Rangers' skipper was beaten up in spring training camp by Lenny Randle, who thought he wasn't getting a fair shot at second base. Randle was sold to the New York Mets and has a threat of a suit hanging over his head.

Only two weeks ago, Lucchesi became dizzy at a game and was rushed to the hospital. He missed a series with the Boston Red Sox while he recuperated. Doctors said Lucchesi apparently was just suffering from heat exhaustion.

Some players on the team have been reluctant to go on record about Lucchesi. But several times during recent home games players were overheard at the batting cage making jokes about him.

Corbett has been receiving steam from the board of directors. William Seay, secretary of the board of directors, said he is "concerned" about the slumping attendance figures. The Rangers have projected they will be at least 300,000 fans below the estimated break-even point of 1.4 million.

"That's the big thing that killed Frank," said the source. "The fans were becoming disenchanted."

Rangers officials wouldn't comment on the possibility of Lucchesi's dismissal. Corbett's mother died Monday night and he was busy making funeral arrangements.

Both Rangers executive vice president Eddie Robinson and General Manager Danny O'Brien flew to Mobile, Ala., and talked to Stanky Monday night.

Lucchesi was third base coach under Martin before he was named Rangers manager. The San Francisco native coached 20 years in the minors before he was given a shot with the Philadelphia Phillies in 1970-71. He had records of 73-88 and 67-95.

The Rangers were fourth in the AL West last year but had climbed close to Minnesota in the wild 1977 scramble with Minnesota in the lead.

Defending champion Olson heads amateur field

Omaha — Defending champion Tom Olson of Omaha heads a field of 32 golfers into the Nebraska Amateur Men's Match Play Championships which open at the Omaha Country Club here Thursday morning.

Olsen, who won the crown at Lincoln's Hillcrest Country Club last summer, and Dan Bahensky of Kearney, who edged Olson for the title in 1975, are the only ex-champs who qualified for this year's tourney.

Stamina as well as good golf will be required. Morning and afternoon 18-hole matches are scheduled both Thursday and Friday to reduce the field for Saturday's 36-hole finals.

The eventual winner, if all matches were to go the distance, will be required to play 108 holes of golf in three days.

Four Lincolnites qualified for the tourney, but all drew spots in the same bracket. Rennie Sasse faces Omaha's Lee Tate in his first test, while Doug Smith will meet Stewart Grashoff of Omaha.

The other two Capital City golfers entered are Rick Reynolds and Mike Hughett. Reynolds meet Ken Dahl of Beemer in his opeing match, while Hughett will face Omaha's Ed Placek.

Other matches in that bracket for Thursday morning are: Olson vs. Dave Budd, Grand Island; Dave Williams, Omaha, vs. Dave Gross, Omaha; Randy Sock, Norfolk, vs. Mike Klein, Scottsbluff; and Matt McConnell, Norfolk, vs. Mark Winstrom, Omaha.

The eight first-round matches in the other bracket are: Bahensky vs. Jim Meehan, York; Gary Teel, Omaha, vs. Steve Stewart, Hastings; Dan Zadalis, Omaha, vs. Dave Hellbusch, Albion; Dick Bolin, Gering, vs. Gary Burton, Omaha; Jim Daley, Omaha, vs. Scott Fredstrom, Omaha; Steve Sergeant, Omaha, vs. Craig Moyer, Wood River; Kevin Chesnut, Omaha, vs. Steve Franke, Grand Island; and Jeff Haskins, Hastings, vs. Larry Sock, Norfolk.

Caddy tells of his start as Nicklaus' No. 1 bag-toter

By Chuck Sinclair
Staff Sports Writer

Omaha — While Jack Nicklaus captured the hearts of the vast majority of 6,000 spectators in the gallery Monday during the Nebraska Heart Assn. benefit, Angelo Argeo was doing some captivating of his own.

Argeo, the bushy gray-haired, mustachioed fellow who sports a deep tan, earns his living toting Nicklaus' golf clubs around the finest courses in the world.

But Monday, Angelo took advantage of a day off as Omahan Tony Pessavento carried the clubs and Argeo followed with a gallery of his own, moving in a little group from tee to green.

For the spectators who had paid $10 a ticket to see the match, being in the caddy's small group was worth the price of admission.

Carrying the clubs for the greatest golfer in the world is a far cry from being a cab driver and part-time caddy in Las Vegas.

"The first time I ever caddied for Jack was in Palm Springs back in 1963," Angelo said. "I was assigned to carry for Jack, and he won the tournament.

"There was the Tournament of Champions coming up in Las Vegas, so I asked him if I could caddy for him again," he added. "He said yes, and he won that one too.

"Every chance I could, I'd caddy for Jack," he said. "Through the next year, I caddied for him six times, and he won five of those tournaments."

Nicklaus had found himself a caddy he wanted to keep, but a rule that limited caddies to working for the same player no more than two weeks in a row kept Argeo from traveling with Nicklaus at that time.

Now, since that rule has been dropped, Angelo is employed full-time on salary, with a bonus for every win.

"I really love it," Argeo said. "The Nicklaus' are a great family. I almost feel like a part of it."

Being a caddy for someone like Nicklaus, you wouldn't think Angelo would have much time to enjoy the game himself.

"I haven't got to play very much in the past, but that is going to change," he said. "I shoot between 90 and 100, but it's getting better. And that's on some of the toughest golf courses around. I was really starting to hit it good at Muirfield when we had to leave for the U.S. Open."

With the name Angelo Argeo, he admits everyine thinks he's Italian.

"Actually, I'm Greek," he said. "I changed my name from Argeopolous. People are always speaking Italian to me. I just let them think what they want."

Argeo also admits that Nicklaus takes pretty good care of him financially, and has no plans of doing anything besides continuing his current employment.

"I'll caddy as long as Jack will have me," he said. "After that, who knows. Maybe I'll carry for the boy (Jack Jr.). He's a great kid and a pretty good golfer himself. I'd like to stay in the family."

Angelo's pride for Nicklaus was evident during a noon luncheon when Nebraska Lt. Governor Jerry Whelan presented Jack with a water color of the state capital signed by Gov. J. J. Exon with a note saying, "I bet you can't hit a nine-iron over this."

Angelo responded "oh, I don't know."

Nicklaus had his own retort for Exon.

"You can tell Gov. Exon that I'll have Angelo go over and stop off the yardage to the building right away," he said.

"If it's only 400 feet, Jack can do it," Angelo said.

Randy Jones on disabled list

San Diego (UPI) — Randy Jones, the 1976 National League Cy Young Award winner who has been bothered by recurrent arm problems following an off-season operation for a severed nerve, Tuesday night was placed on the 21-day disabled list by the San Diego Padres.

The 27-year-old left-hander, who posted a 22-14 record last year, has been ordered by doctors to rest his left arm and carry out a rehabilitation program. His spot on the roster will be filled by right-hander Dave Freisleben, who was recalled from Hawaii of the Pacific Coast league. Freisleben was sent down to Hawaii on May 1 with a 0-4 record. With Hawaii he was 4-4.

A year ago at this time Jones had a 13-3 record and was on his way toward becoming the starting pitcher for the NL in the all-star game. He currently has a 4-7 record and an earned run average of 4.61 in 84 1-3 innings.

Fritts hopes to rebound from injuries

Cincinnati (AP) — Stan Fritts admits he has to try harder to keep his place on the Cincinnati Bengals' roster.

He had knee surgery as a sophomore at North Carolina State in 1972 and then operated on again in February 1976.

Because his condition has been unpredictable, Fritts has often had to sit on the sidelines. Last year, he managed 200 yards in 47 tries and three touchdowns.

Two years ago, as a National Football League rookie, he carried twice as much and scored 10 times.

Fritts believes he will come to training camp this year in 100 per cent condition. He vows that his knee won't swell up like it did last year at this time.

"I want to become a football player again," said Fritts, in a telephone interview from his home in Oak Ridge, Tenn., near Knoxville, "one that doesn't have anything wrong holding him back. If not here, then somewhere else."

At the Bengals' request, Fritts was examined a week ago by orthopedic surgeon Donald O'Donoghue in Oklahoma City.

"He explained that the patella (kneecap) was a little loose and there's still some scraping inside," Fritts said. "But that happens to every knee following surgery. There's no cartilage left.

"The doctor just said he was pretty pleased with it and that he couldn't see any reason why I couldn't play this year and play effectively."

Finley suspends Allen for week

Chicago (AP) — Dick Allen has been suspended for a week without pay by owner Charlie Finley of the Oakland A's for leaving a game.

Finley announced the suspension Monday night after the A's had defeated the Chicago White Sox 7-1. Finley said Allen decided to take a shower and left the clubhouse while the game still was going on.

"I saw Dick Allen in the shower in the sixth inning and that was all I wanted to see of Dick Allen," said Finley. "I didn't say anything to him. I called the manager, Bobby Winkles. He's his man. It's beneath my dignity to say anything to him."

Finley said that if his slumping slugger "doesn't like it, he can take a hike."

"I don't care if he ever shows up again," added Finley. "I was trying to show the world I could work with him, but I found out I was like the rest of the suckers. I hope he never shows up again."

Allen was the American League's Most Valuable Player in 1972 when he was with the White Sox. Prior to that he played for Philadelphia, St. Louis and Los Angeles. In the final two weeks of the 1974 campaign, Allen announced his "retirement" from baseball and left the White Sox.

U.S. wins track triangular

Turin, Italy (AP) — The Americans scored a one-two sweep in the pole vault-with Larry Jesse winning at 17 feet, 8½ inches-and a young American track and field team dominated the men's triangular meet with Britain and Italy which ended Tuesday night.

Doug Laz was second at 17-4¾ as the U. S. team won seven of the second night's 11 events but failed to dominate as expected in some of them.

The Americans beat Italy 127-94 and Britain 135-86. The team continues its European tour against West Germany and the Soviet Union in the following weeks.

The American women's team, winning four of Tuesday's six events, beat Italy 85-61 in their two-day meet.

Ron Livers won the triple jump Tuesday with a leap of 54-10, clearly beating fellow Americans Milan Tiff, 54-4½, and Olympic silver medalist James Butts, 53-3.

Steinbrenner takes charge of his Yanks

New York (AP) — Owner George Steinbrenner has stepped in to take complete charge of the turmoil-wracked New York Yankees.

Asked repeatedly who made the decision to retain Billy Martin as manager, the Tampa shipbuilder responded: "I did. It was my decision entirely."

Steinbrenner and President Gabe Paul flew to Detroit Monday to meet with players and try to clear the atmosphere before the Yankees took the field before the Monday night game against the Tigers, won by Detroit 2-1.

The meeting took place amid rumors that Martin was going to be sacked and possibly replaced by coach Yogi Berra because of his dugout yelling and attempts to fight outfielder Reggie Jackson Saturday.

"We were headed for complete collapse," Steinbrenner said. "Dissension on the team was terrible. We were getting no leadership and no fire. Something had to be done quickly."

Steinbrenner insisted that he had no intention of firing Martin, whom he regards as an outstanding manager, but he added that Martin, along with some others, had been derelict in carrying out his responsibilities.

"I told Billy he had to shape up, that he had to pay more attention to his responsibilities off the field as well as on the field, and do it immediately. He was very subdued and he has promised to contact me every day.

"I plan to keep in daily contact with the progress of the team."

Steinbrenner, who had been pictured as favoring Jackson in clashes with his manager, said this was absolutely not true.

The owner said he upbraided his $2.9 million outfielder for recent remarks on racism and told him that if he brought up the subject again "I will beat your head off."

"Jackson listened and took it," Steinbrenner said. Jackson had been quoted as saying, "I'm a black man with an IQ of 160 making $700,000 a year and they treat me like dirt. The Yankee pinstripes are Ruth and Gehrig and DiMaggio and Mantle. I'm just a black man to them who doesn't know how to be subservient."

At the Detroit meeting, the owner also sought out Thurman Munson, the team's most valuable player in 1976 and captain, and told him he thought he was shirking his captain's duties.

"I thought Jackson was the captain," Munson told Steinbrenner.

"You're the captain," Steinbrenner replied. "When I want Jackson to be my captain, I'll tell him and you too. You're the captain. Now be the captain."

Jackson and Munson had been involved in personal feuds growing out of a derogatory remark about Munson in a magazine article, in which the outfielder said: "This team. . . it all flows from me. I am the straw that stirs the drink."

Several players contacted Steinbrenner afterward and said that they thought the stern dressing down would prove to be what the team needed.

"The bickering had caused the morale to go down a great deal," Steinbrenner said.

Lincoln Swim Club does well

Ten members of the Lincoln Swim Club competed in the Fremont Open Swim Meet over the past weekend. Two of them won seven events. J. B. Barr captured the 25-meter backstroke and freestyle titles plus the 100-meter individual medley race for boys eight-and-under, and Susan Graves claimed four championships for girls 11-12.

At 50-meters, Miss Graves won the backstroke and freestyle races in addition to winning the 100-meter freestyle and 200-meter individual medley.

Cox next Yank boss, not Berra or Howard?

By Bill Gleason
(c) Chicago Sun-Times

Chicago — As of Monday night, Billy Martin's sentence as manager and disciplinarian of the New York Yankees was extended by Gabe Paul, head of the Yankee parole board.

Martin was given extra time for bad behavior. It seems inevitable, however, that Martin soon would be freed of association with Reggie Jackson and others who are doing time in Yankee uniforms.

Almost everyone thinks the Yankees will give the job to Yogi Berra. They'll probably give it to coach Bobby Cox. They should give it to Elston Howard.

When Howard was reached yesterday at the Hotel Pontchartrain in Detroit where the fratricidal Yankees were awaiting a night game with the Tigers, Elston was not optimistic. He did not think that the opportunity he has awaited so patiently, the chance to manager in the major leagues, would be offered to him if or when Billy Martin was fired as manager of the Yankees.

Earlier in the day a close friend of Howard put Elston's chance of succeeding Martin in a word: "Impossible".

Why impossible?

"Because of the power structure," the friend said.

The baseball power structure?

"No, no, the Yankees power structure," the friend said. "I just don't think George Steinbrenner wants Elston as manager of the Yankees. Elston may manage a team in the majors, but it won't be the Yankees."

Howard did not argue against his friend's gloomy analysis. Elston the consummate catcher and sometimes outfielder was the first black to play for the Yankees and the first black coach in the American League. Those "firsts" had not helped his cause in the past and he wasn't hopeful that they would help him in the present.

"I think something is going to happen soon," Elston said, "But I don't know what. I saw George Steinbrenner come in here to the hotel last night."

Steinbrenner, tempestuous, garrulous and combative, is the owner of the Yankees. George is to baseball what Bob Irsay, owner of the Baltimore Colts, is to pro football. George is to ownership what Martin is to managing. At times Steinbrenner's strange conduct makes Charlie Finley seem calm and reasonable by comparison.

"Nobody in the front office has said anything to me," said Howard, who has grown accustomed to hearing nothing from any front office after a manager has been pushed out of his chair. "And I haven't told anybody I want the job."

Howard, who would have been a memorable Yankee if he were white or Latino, is a proud man. After a baseball lifetime with the Yankees, he didn't think it necessary to remind his bosses that he was a managerial condidate. Elston also is a nice guy. The second characteristic was the only clue that could be offered in the continuing mystery titled "The Passing Over of Elston Howard."

If "niceness" was the reason for Howard's rejection, that deserves a one-word reaction: Stupid. Elston is a very tough man. He was an amateur boxer in his youth and he probably can be as dynamic with his fists as Martin thinks he is.

"When the job was open last time, after Bill Virdon was fired, nobody in the front office said anything at all to me," Howard recalled.

That was on Aug. 2, 1975, Martin got the job the next day, on Oct. 1, 1973, the day after Ralph Houk resigned as manager, Howard was asked to come to Yankee Stadium. He thought he might be offered the job then. General manager Gabe Paul told Elston, instead, that the club was looking for someone with experience. The person chosen was Virdon, who had managed Pittsburgh of the National League through two seasons.

If there is such a thing as a career manager in the Yankee organization, which swings with the windmilling whims of Steinbrenner that man is Bobby Cox.

Often confused with famous Dodger Billy Cox, Bobby had only one thing in common with the other fellow. Bobby was a third baseman. He played two seasons with the Yankees, had a batting average of .225.

Cox started managing in the Yankee chain at Ft. Lauderdale in 1971.

Tiant gem peps Boston

Baltimore (UPI) — Luis Tiant fired a two-hitter while George Scott and Jim Rice, Boston's 1-2 home run punch, blasted their 19th and 17th respectively in the fourth inning Tuesday night to power a 7-0 victory by the Red Sox over the Baltimore Orioles.

Tiant, 5-5, struck out five and walked three. He did not allow a batter to reach third base as he extended Baltimore's scoreless inning streak to 23. Lee May's infield single in the fourth inning and Pat Kelly's two-out double in the ninth were the only hits for Baltimore. It was Tiant's second shutout but only his second complete game in 14 starts.

Rice hit a solo homer off rookie Dennis Martinez with one out in the fourth. After Carlton Fisk coaxed a two-out walk, Scott took over the American League lead in homers with a shot into the right field bleachers.

Enterprise wins twice

Newport, R.I. (AP) — Enterprise, skippered by Lowell North, pulled off a pair of victories over Independence on Tuesday by surprising margins in preliminary trials for America's Cup defense candidates.

The America's Cup Committee shortened the second race to 7½ miles and ended the contest as the two 12-meter yachts rounded the third mark with Enterprise winning by 2 minutes and 41 seconds.

It was by far the biggest winning margin of the preliminary trials. The second widest margin came in Tuesday's first race when Enterprise took Independence by almost 2 minutes on a 13½-mile course.

The pair of victories for Enterprise gave North a 3-1 record against Independence going into Wednesday's Enterprise-Courageous matchup with Courageous holding a 2-0 lead in that series.

On Saturday, Enterprise and Independence traded victories in a two-race match.

Winds off Newport in Rhode Island Sound were light Tuesday, ranging from six to 10 miles per hour. Enterprise made her best showing on the windward legs of the course.

Rain washes out golf round

The heavy rains that drenched the Lincoln area Tuesday morning washed out the second round of the junior city boys golf tournament at Hillcrest Country Club.

A decision will be made Wednesday as the tournament moves to Pioneers Park as to whether the Hillcrest round will be replayed Friday as the final round or cancelled completely.

Pat Higgins and Craig Sundberg shared the first round lead as both fired 78s at the Country Club of Lincoln Monday.

Husker crew members win

Philadelphia, Pa. — Two University of Nebraska women crew members won silver medals here last weekend at the national championships.

Lisa Rhode, Hubbard, won her silver in the pair without coxswain event while Ann Rains, a native of Franklin, Ohio, was second in the quad event.

Nebraska women's coach Mark Stormberg was selected to compete on the United States crew team this summer in meets in Europe. Stormberg will row single scull and also eights.

Cauthen anxious to get back

New York (AP) — "I just want to get back riding," Steve Cauthen said Tuesday on a visit to the jockeys room at Belmont Park, the track where he was injured in a spill May 23.

The 17-year-old Kentuckian, who led the nation with 276 winners when he was hurt, exercised horses Tuesday morning. He will exercise some more Wednesday and is scheduled to ride seven mounts in a return to action Thursday.

A Tiger on his tail

Tiger Campbell of Vinton, Iowa, prepares to dismount as his noose tightens around the neck of the calf in the calf-roping event of the Iowa High School Rodeo Finals at Albia.

Football Cardinals lose charity softball game

New York (AP) — So there was Dan Dierdorf, this rough, tough National Football League offensive guard, standing there on the pitching mound, looking mean.

He peered in for the sign, swung into the windup and threw the ball. Then he ducked as it zipped past him for another hit and these pretty girls in short pants kept running around the bases.

Dierdorf, who usually spends his autumn Sundays bumping heads with defensive linemen, handled the embarrassment nicely. His NFL St. Louis Cardinals were playing a charity softball game against the ladies and were getting their collective ears pinned back.

"We beat them 14-3," smiled Pat Guenzler. "They kept hitting long fly balls but they couldn't handle the fast pitch at all."

In deference to the football players, the women—who play this game for a living—agreed to divide the game, half slow pitch, half fast pitch. It made no difference to Miss Guenzler. "I got a couple of hits," she said, "one against (defensive back) Tim Van Gelder and the other against Dierdorf."

That was Pat's normal production. She may be the very best hitter in the International Women's Professional Softball Association.

"Oh . . . I'm really just a singles hitter," she said, blushing a bit so her complexion matched her flaming red hair.

Last year, she led the league with a .385 average which included a league-leading eight triples and 22 doubles. "But no homers," she said, a little wistfully.

Miss Guenzler, the center fielder for the St. Louis Hummers in the six-team league, is hitting .323 this season. She said the football players shouldn't feel bad about the way they lost to the ladies.

"There's no way a major league baseball player could hit fast pitch softball the first time, either," she said. "They'd need some time to get used to it."

On the other hand, Pat would love a chance to swing against a Tom Seaver or Nolan Ryan. "I'd go up there and relax and just try to hit the ball where it's pitched, just like I do in our league."

Besides Miss Guenzler's St. Louis team, the women's softball league has franchises in Buffalo, Connecticut and three in California—Bakersfield, San Jose and Santa Ana. The annual All-Star game will be played at Buffalo Tuesday, July 26.

Pat is a Pete Rose type. "I like the way he plays . . . the head-first slide and all that." Often the fans react to her the way fans react to Rose when the Cincinnati Reds play on the road. "Yeah, they boo me sometime," she said.

She has never been thrown out of a game but thought she would be once when she had a knockdown, drag-out debate with an umpire. "I can't repeat the worst thing I ever said to an umpire," she smiled. "But he didn't throw me out, so I guess it wasn't so bad."

The short shorts worn by players give a sexy look to the league. Pat, however, does not wear makeup when she's playing.

"I wouldn't want to have to worry about an eyelash falling off when I slide into a base," she said.

Knepper got his chance

San Francisco (AP) — The cry is heard throughout the minor leagues: "If they'd just give me a chance in the majors, I'd show them I belong up there."

The guys with miniscule batting averages or mammoth earned-run averages all feel that, put into a big-league uniform, they'd again be the world-beaters they were before taking the big step into professional baseball.

Judging from the record of San Francisco's Bob Knepper, maybe there's something to the theory.

Three weeks ago, the 23-year-old left-hander was the guy with the 7.41 ERA for Phoenix of the Pacific Coast League. His five-hit shutout Sunday against the Pittsburgh Pirates, one of baseball's hardest hitting teams, put his National League ERA at 3.82 through 33 innings.

"At the start of the season, I was throwing pretty well. I won my first two games. Then I went out and gave up five runs in the first inning of my next game without getting anyone out. I lost six straight," he recalled. "At that point, I figured I wouldn't get a chance to pitch up here until maybe September."

But on May 26, Giants pitcher John Montefusco suffered a badly sprained ankle and the team summoned Knepper and his 3-6 PCL record.

"I said to myself, 'Here's the chance.' It was my lucky break, John's bad break," said Knepper.

Giants Manager Joe Altobelli says, "We knew he still had the arm. At Phoenix, he might have been pitching half-heartedly. I think he has more confidence now in the organization, which he thought might have given up on him."

Knepper pitched in four games—25 innings—with the Giants last September, posting a 1-2 record and a 3.24 ERA, after ending the PCL season with marks of 14-10 and 4.30. But this year he was back in Phoenix.

"It didn't look like he'd make our starting rotation, and we wanted him to pitch, not sit around," said Altobelli. "I hope he's learned something now; if we feel a player has talent, we're not going to hold him down."

Thin man looks to gain

New York (AP) — "Flaco Explosive" — the explosive thin man to English-speaking fight fans — is a 5-foot-9, 133-pounder named Alexis Arguello. He would like to fatten his reputation by winning two more world championships.

He already has held the featherweight title, which he had to give up because he was having trouble making the weight limit of 128 pounds.

Arguello will weigh about 133 Wednesday night when he fights Juan "Cocoa" Sanchez in Madison Square Garden, the arena called "the Cathedral of Boxing" by Arguello's manager, Dr. Eduardo Roman and referred to as "the Big House" by Arguello.

Even though he has put on some weight, Arguello's height still makes him flaco (skinny) as the title of a book about his life published in his native Nicaragua proclaims.

He doesn't look the "explosive" part, but his record shows 41 knockouts in 50 victories against just three losses.

"Arguello is a better puncher than Roberto Duran," says Teddy Brenner.

Duran, the lightweight champion called "Hands of Stone" because of his punching power, figures in Arguello's plans.

"I would like to win three title," said the first Nicaraguan to become a world boxing champion. Another native of the little Central American nation, Eddie Gazo, currently is the WBA junior middlweight champion.

Amphetamines 'work drug'

San Diego (UPI) — Amphetamines were thought of as a work-related drug by professional football players in the early 1970s, a psychiatrist testified Monday in the 12th day of hearings on whether his medical license should be revoked for gross negligence as psychiatrist for the San Diego Chargers.

Dr. Arnold J. Mandell, cochairman of the Department of Psychiatry at the UCSD Medical School, told a hearing officer that the Chargers thought use of drugs was "a matter of hanging on the edge of survival."

Mandell was a team psychiatrist for the Chargers during the 1972-73 seasons, and is being charged with gross negligence and excessively prescribing amphetamines to players.

A hearings officer is assembling evidence for presentation to the California Board of Quality Assurance, which has the power to revoke Mandell's license.

Mandell's attorney, Robert Baxley, earlier told the hearings officer that the Chargers' pharmacy was "the equivalent of a combat medical kit." And in testimony Monday Mandell said the club's pill purchases in 1968 and 1969 totalled 63,200, including 20,800 amphetamines.

"It was difficult to believe the pain involved with this profession," Mandell testified. "Players suffered periods of amnesia. Whole sides would be blue. Joints were swollen. Ankles were badly twisted."

And the pressure to play — from coach, management, and fans, forced the players to ask for the drugs, Mandell said. "The football player does not think amphetamine use is drug abuse. It's a work drug. The player associates it with survival. He has children to support, a mortgage to pay. He has no other way to make a living."

NHL set to officially elect president today

Chicago (UPI) — National Hockey League governors are expected to take routine action to amend their constitution and elect a new president Wednesday before considering a possible merger with the World Hockey Association.

The league virtually settled upon John Ziegler, counsel and alternate governor for the Detroit Red Wings, as president succeeding Clarence Campbell, who is giving up the post by his own choice after 31 years.

Election of Ziegler had been deferred in order to give the Governors time to meet the mandatory 10 day notice of proposed constitutional changes so that they could vote the proposals into the book before Ziegler takes office.

The proposed changes generally are routine and designed to clarify the position of the president in league meetings.

There was some speculation the merger talks would be short, but there also was a possibility they could be so prolonged the meeting would run for two days.

In order for the leagues to merge, not only would both have to accept the proposition but the Players' Association of both leagues also would be involved and have the legal backing through previous court suits to give the players a voice in any decision.

Catching up on dogs

Dog control has been a problem in my neighborhood since moving to Lincoln five years ago. I've made a semiannual census on dogs, what with a semiannual female in season.

I've written a lot of bad words about Lincoln's dog control services. What can you expect with five dogs panting at your fenced-in backyard door? Now things are different. I counted two dogs this last time around. My hat goes off to the Lincoln City Health Dept's Animal Control personnel.

Craig Schainost and his people have been working with a difficult problem in Lincoln. Stray dogs are commonplace. It's a fulltime, seven-day-a-week job. Some 200-250 calls per week come into the office. Four vans with six animal control officers (ACO's) have racked up a lot of miles for the infant operation.

"We've had a pretty good response from the public," Schainost said. "Of the over 200 calls last week, we had 41 calls where we found no animal. That means there were over 160 where we did."

Animals found are either delivered back to the owners, if the animals are tagged or licensed, or they are taken to the Humane Society. At the Humane Society, they await a 72-hour claiming period. If unclaimed by that time, the animals are put to sleep and disposed of.

Lots of dogs

"The stray dog population in Lincoln is apparently very high," according to Schainost. "We're mainly concerned with the dog problem. We don't go so far as to be fully equipped to handle every situation, like getting animals out of culverts or well up into trees. We try but the dogs are a fulltime job."

The service may be taking a little cut in availability in the coming months, however. A sizable chunk of its budget was taken away recently.

"We're still going to try to give seven-day service," Schainost said, "but we'll go from two ACO's on weekends to one and we had to let our weekend dispatcher go. We'll also operate on eight-hour days instead of 10. We've worked out arrangements to dispatch from the Police Dept. after hours."

The peak period of complaints concerning stray dogs arose through the months of April and May, then slacked off a little, according to Schainost. He said the number of callers has come back up recently and has maintained a steady level in the past several weeks.

Problems of care

Schainost indicated the care of unidentified or untagged dogs is a problem, particularly if found dead.

"The Humane Society puts the unclaimed dogs to sleep and has incinerated them," he said. "This is a very costly method. Dead animals we cannot find the owners for are now being taken to the landfill site and buried. We're not being heartless. We're just trying to be practical. Omaha has done that for the past 10 years.

"Animals we can identify, we contact the owners and ask them what they want done with their dead animals. About half want to dispose of it themselves and half say take it to the landfill."

The live animals caught and identified are apparently getting the message back to their owners. Only about five percent of the dogs caught are repeat offenders.

Fine rates vary from $10-25 plus court costs, according to Schainost, so the lessons can be a little costly.

As a whole, the public response to the Animal Control Service has been good. With my neighborly dog census down from 16-20 to only two, I'd have to say someone merits a pat on the back for a job well done.

Franco Harris puts faith in 'pyramid power'

New York (UPI) — Oakland Raiders beware!

"Pyramid power," that 3,000-year-old mystery that may perform miracles, has a new sports star believer, Franco Harris of the former super bowl champion Pittsburgh Steelers. And Harris says he's eager to turn the power on full force for some "payback" when the Steelers host the Raiders on sept. 25.

Kansas City pitcher Jim Colborn and his teammates George Brett and Darrell Porter wore plastic pyramids on top of their heads on Friday the 13th in May and the next day Colborn fired his first no-hitter. Red Kelly, ex-coach of the Toronto Maple Leafs, used to have his players sit on top of pyramids during games.

Harris, like all athletes, is hoping Pyramid Power will give him that little extra edge in a ballgame. Some try transcendental meditation (TM), others are into hypnosis.

Harris suffered through a player's nightmare last December when he was forced to watch helplessly on the sidelines, clutching his battered ribs, while his teammates were stomped by the Oakland Raiders 24-7 for a Super Bowl berth. Oakland went on to win the Super Bowl.

"It was probably one of the most helpless times in my life," Harris said. "I'd have to say it was the biggest game of my career and I just feel bad that I missed it. It was a championship game, a chance to go into a third Super Bowl. That's never really been done before, to win it three times."

Harris, a bruising running back at 6-foot-2, 225-pounds, wishes he had known about Pyramid Power sooner.

"It was about four weeks after the season before I recuperated from my rib injury," said Harris, who hurt his ribs in the 40-14 divisional playoff victory against Baltimore the week before Oakland. "Maybe if I was into it then, I would have went under a pyramid because it's supposed to have just tremendous healing powers. It's supposed to make the recuperating period just so much faster on that sort of thing. Maybe I could have played in the Oakland game.

"You know, we just got a big new whirlpool last year, now maybe we should get a big new pyramid and see what happens."

Stressing that he didn't know why or how Pyramid Power supposedly works or even what exactly it is capable of doing, Harris was careful not to make any hard claims for the mysterious force. It may do this or it's supposed to do that. People say that such and such happens. Curiously, the outside package of a plastic pyramid selling as "Pyramid-Power," makes the following statements: "May improve sex, Reported to heighten your intelligence, May prolong razor blade life."

Harris, who doesn't need longer razor blade life, would be happy if it helps the Steelers win their second game of the year, the one against the Raiders.

"We have some payback to do," Harris said. "I don't know how other people feel, but I don't feel we're second to anybody. In the last five years you've seen some moments of great ball by the Steelers, but I have to say the best is still yet to come."

Trade rescues Reds' Auerbach

Philadelphia (AP) — Last Wednesday night, Rick Auerbach's baseball career was in a shambles. It has since been reborn.

The 27-year-old Auerbach, who went home rather than report to the minor leagues, was traded by the Texas Rangers to the Cincinnati Reds.

The Reds made the deal to fill the void left by utility infielder Doug Flynn's departure for the New York Mets.

When the Reds called Auerbach to tell him about the trade, he wasn't home. He was at a friend's house in Los Angeles.

"About midnight in Los Angeles, I got a call from my mother and she said (Reds Vice President) Dick Wagner was trying to get ahold of me," Auerbach said. "I told her, 'Don't be kidding me.' She wasn't. The Reds gave me a new life."

In 1976, Auerbach completed his third season as a member of the Los Angeles Dodgers, hitting .128.

Unhappy because he wasn't playing, he asked to be traded, and was, to the New York Mets.

"From the way the New York people talked I figured I had a pretty good chance to play," said Auerbach.

The infielder didn't figure on a spring filled with injuries. He wound up with a knot in his shoulder and then he pulled a hamstring muscle.

"I spent the whole spring on the trainer's table," he said.

The Mets sent him to Tidewater in the minors, but he was then sent along as the "player to be named later" in a trade with Texas.

Auerbach said he talked to the Rangers' front office and they assured him he shouldn't worry, they would eventually make room for him on their roster.

That meant, he worked out with the team, then sat in the stands to watch the games. Finally, Auerbach was informed he was being optioned to New Orleans, a St. Louis farm club.

"That's when I couldn't handle it any more. I'd been pushed around enough. I couldn't take it," he said.

He took the check given him for fare to New Orleans and used it to buy a ticket home.

He did not balk when the Rangers threatened to put him on the inactive list, then the disqualified list.

What Auerbach did was go fishing every day for two weeks. He was inactive for a month.

"The Rangers told me they'd asked waivers on me in both leagues and nobody wanted me. I didn't care," Auerbach said. "I was getting a little peace of mind. No money, but peace of mind."

Now, Auerbach has got money as the result of a trade he never thought would happen.

"I was not thinking about getting traded," he admitted.

Lincolnites sign for races

Des Moines, Iowa — Two veteran campaigners from Lincoln, Neb., have inked contracts for the running of the eight event racing program at the Iowa State Fairgrounds track here in Des Moines, June 29.

Lonnie Jensen and Lloyd Beckman are both seasoned drivers with an enviable list of racing credentials. Together they mass a total of more than 40 years of speedway competition many of which were spent in the tough midwest and southwest.

The $6,000 racing feature has drawn the top entries from throughout the midwest.

Cornbelt Racing promoter, Dave Van Patten, expects a full field of entries and a torrid night of racing. "The lineup for this special sprint program will be loaded with talented drivers and some of the best racing equipment in the nation," he said.

Qualification runs will start the evening off at 8 P.M. The Fairgrounds half mile track has a slight bank and is ideal for evening sprint car racing.

Nuernberger wants share of permit take

By Bob Reeves
Star Staff Writer

The city of Lincoln is pocketing too much money collected for building permits from county residents, County Engineer Marv Nuernberger said Tuesday. Nuernberger indicated he would like a share of the take.

Subdivision house inspection fees are far higher than inspection costs, he told the Lancaster County Board.

But when a subdivision wants the county to take over its roads maintenance, Nuernberger's office must inspect the roads to see that they meet county standards.

Rather than doing this at county expense, Nuernberger wants reimbursement from the city.

"We're dealing with apples and oranges," said Commissioner Jan Gauger, who said she could not see how building inspection fees are related to road maintenance.

"You earmark money for the city of Lincoln," Nuernberger said. The board could require that a portion of that money be turned over to the County engineer's office, Nuernberger said.

"No, we don't earmark funds," Mrs. Gauger explained. A building permit applicant pays for the inspection which is performed by the city. The fee is supposed to cover only inspection costs, she said.

Nuernberger turned his back while she spoke. He then reiterated his argument.

"We have a problem, and I thought we'd be big enough to solve it," he said.

Board Chairman Bruce Hamilton intervened. He agreed with Nuernberger that there is a problem if the city is collecting more money that it needs for the inspections, but he agreed with Mrs. Gauger that the building inspection money could not be used for roads.

"Maybe we need a separate fee" for road inspections, Hamilton said.

The board took no action on the matter.

In other business, the board approved an assessment on county land in Interstate Park on which the Highlands development northwest of Lincoln wants to lay a storm sewer.

A portion of the park is owned by the city. No easement is required on that land, but to put the sewer on county land will require either an easement or outright sale of the county's property to the city, according to the county attorney's office.

In either case, an assessment for sale value will be required, at a cost of about $200, Nuernberger said.

Until the easement was requested, members of the county board were not aware that the county owned this piece of property.

There are many other small parcels of land in Lincoln owned by the county, Nuernberger noted.

By board action Tuesday, eight square miles north and east of Lincoln which have lacked fire protection are now a part of the Waverly fire district.

The board voted to expand the district to include an area east of Lincoln city limits from Leighton St. to one-half mile north of Interstate 80.

There is still a small area north of Lincoln which is not in a rural fire protection district.

Residents of such areas cannot be assured of complete fire protection because they are not supporting a fire department with tax monies, Waverly fire chief Harold Nansel told the board.

Manor raising money to buy another bus

This is "Help us buy a bus!" week for Lancaster Manor. One of the nursing home's two buses is "totally shot," according to activity coordinator Bob Esquivil, so the Manor has launched a series of money-raising projects to buy a new one.

Monday there was a car wash. Tuesday was "Feed Your Face Day," with hamburgers and hot dogs donated by local merchants.

There will be an all day rummage sale Thursday and to 5 p.m. Friday there will be a bake sale featuring goodies baked by manor residents and staff, beginning at 2:30 p.m.

In addition, raffle tickets are being sold for a quilt sewn by a Manor resident.

Esquivil estimates approximately $500 toward the $8,000 needed for the bus will be collected this week.

Monetary donations also will be accepted, Esquivil said.

Lancaster Manor near limit

Lancaster Manor is operating at 98% capacity, according to Garrett Williams, director of the home.

Of 283 beds in the home, 277 are filled. During May, 27 patients were discharged and 27 admitted. In April, there were no beds available for additional male patients, Williams said.

"If discharges and admissions weren't equal, we'd be up to the limit," he said.

"We are approaching a bed crunch," he noted, but added that other nursing home facilities also have welfare beds, so there is no unserved demand at present.

Hampton gives up duties at airport

City Councilman-Airport Authority board member Joe Hampton has decided his dual identity is too much, so he's resigned as of July 1 from the airport board.

"The sheer work load is more than I anticipated," Hampton said. "If you do your homework and research on what's set in front of you (on the City Council) it's a tremendous amount of work."

Hampton resigned at the airport board's June meeting Tuesday.

His replacement hasn't been picked though a first choice is being considered for the job, said Mayor Helen Boosalis. Names have been considered for about three weeks, she said, since Hampton told her he would step down from the board.

Hampton, who has been on the board more than a decade, leaves with two more years of his term to go.

In other business, it was announced that a nonstop route between Denver and Sacramento, Calif., will open soon for Frontier Airlines, pending approval by the federal Civil Aeronautics Board.

The new route could mean one-stop service from Lincoln to California via Frontier.

Five jetliners were purchased by Frontier in anticipation of new business from the route coupled with the Lincoln-Chicago route set to open in November.

The board also approved $500 to bring the Nebraska Chamber Orchestra to the airport as part of the festivities surrounding the Aug. 12 landing of antique Spirit of America, a replica of Charles Lindbergh's airplane used for the first air crossing of the Atlantic Ocean.

Joe Hampton
. . . busy on council.

In other business, the board:

— Approved extension of leases for three occupant companies on airport properties.

— Budgeted $15,000 to prepare a building for the Corrections Department's new work release facilities for an annual lease rate of $48,900.

— Approved the lease for the new restuarant owners.

— Authorized sale of a chapel located on airport property and the possible auction of its facilities.

Juvenile center annoyed by non-resident vandals

Vandals from outside have been causing more damage recently at the Juvenile Attention Center than has been caused by center residents, director Jon Hill reported Tuesday.

Damage in May totalled $195, mostly accounted for by a large picture window broken by a BB-gun fired from outside, Hill said.

Prowlers have also attempted to break into windows in the girls' wing of the detention facility, he said, by unscrewing the window frames.

An additional $400 fence requested in next fiscal year's budget would help solve this problem, Hill told the County Board.

Rather than residents trying to escape, the center staff has had problems with teenagers from outside trying to break in, Hill said.

The Freeway Station next door has also experienced increased vandalism recently, Hill reported.

Elevator has fire with 75-foot flames

Emmetsburg, Iowa (UPI) — Fire that apparently was touched off by an explosion destroyed part of the Cargill Co. grain elevator, but no one was injured.

Witnesses said flames shot 75 feet into the air from the top of the elevator, located about a block from the downtown area. Firemen from Mallard and Graettinger were called to help Emmetsburg firefighters and they were at the scene for most of the day.

County boards limited on salaries

A county board can't deny a salary granted by another county official for one of his employes unless the pay proposed by the official is unreasonable, capricious or arbitrary.

That ruling was handed down by the attorney general's office at the request of Sherman County Atty. Frederick King of Loup City. King wanted to know to what extent the county board can regulate salaries of employes who work for another elected county official.

Asst. Atty. Gen. Gary Schneider cited a court decision in which a Saline County judge had set the salary of an employe at $225 a month. The county board, however, rejected that wage and set the salary at $190, in accordance with a salary schedule already established.

The court ruled the county board erred, however, since it could only disapprove of the salary if it was fixed in an arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable manner.

King also asked whether a county official has recourse should the county board refuse to adopt the budget submitted regarding salaries in the official's office.

Schneider admitted he couldn't answer that question "with any degree of certainty."

A county board may, he said, "revise, alter, increase or decrease the items contained in the budget but not without first having a hearing with the office or department affected."

The official could seek court relief if the county board didn't appropriate enough money to enable the hiring of necessary clerks and assistants at a reasonable salary. But, Schreider added, the reasonableness of the salary necessary might be determined from the standpoint of the county board.

The opinion dealt only with clerks and assistants employed by county officials since the authority to set the salaries of deputies is invested with the county board, the opinion stated.

Malone council will sponsor area workshop

Residents of the Malone neighborhood will have a chance to discuss their problems with a professional consultant at a day-long workshop at the Malone Community Center Saturday.

According to Craig Friedman of the center, representatives of Gerald Luedtke and Associates of Detroit will be at the 2030 T St. center to discuss plans including the Northeast Radial, housing, zoning and the expansion plans of the University of Nebraska-Lincoln campus.

The workshop, sponsored by the Malone Area Citizens Council, begins at 10 a.m. and lasts until 3 p.m., Friedman said. A lunch will be served.

Designers' fall clothing may be a health hazard

By Jeanne Lesem

New York (UPI) — Instead of designers' initials, fall clothing this year ought to carry this warning:

Wearing spike-heeled shoes with full skirts at mid-calf or lower can be hazardous to your health.

The tall, thin heels alone are hard enough to walk in, without the additional danger of catching them in hems going up and down stairs and bus steps.

But some slim and shorter skirts, pants and coats appeared in the collections of the four members of the American Designers group who kicked off the second and final week of fall and winter showings for 1977 for the nation's fashion reporters.

The colors and fabrics are lush and beautiful. Don Sayres for Gamut repeated the same designs in colors ranging from shockingly bright cerise to a silvery gray. The gray sometimes was paired with darker shades or contrasted with rich, periwinkle blue or other bright or dark colors in separates representing the strong trends for fall:

Paisley prints, big, fringed shawls, hoods, shirts belted to create peplums, gigantic turtlenecks and cowl tops, featherweight jerseys, flannels and challis, many with border prints.

Many shades of gray flannel are around, along with plaids ranging from big and bright to tiny and heathery.

Ultrasuede is often used along for coats, jackets or dresses, but it also appears as trimming, especially in Jerry Silverman's designs for Shannon Rodgers. Wool crepe de chine and silk are used for shirts and ruffled or lace-trimmed blouses. And there's enough gold lame around to outshine the lights on Broadway.

Most slim shapes are velvet theater suits with soft, silky, bow-tied blouses, or in Adele Simpson's daywear or Ralph Lauren's strapless, bias cut satin tunic in pastel pants outfits.

Simpson's slender costumes include a cocoa-colored ultrasuede suit with boxy, mole-lined jacket and narrow skirt and a slim, bright blue melton coat worn with a striped jersey dress.

Nostalgia notes: Miss Simpson's "Roaring '20s" black fringed disco dress with string straps and an optional sash and Sayres's below-calf-length fox and raccoon wrap coats with huge shawl collars, also reminiscent of the '20s.

Coty-award winner Ralph Lauren promised reporters a shock:

Classic tennis shorts and tops in black, bound or trimmed with bright, primary colors.

Lauren's jackets and skirts tend to be bulky, although made with lightweight tweeds and flannels.

Noting that we live in a porterless, self-service world, Silverman opted for tweeds and other normally bulky fabrics in weights so light many move like real silk. His colors: a rusty red called raisin, sage and forest green, ivory, cordovan brown, slate blue paired with pale blue, navy, beige, a bright red called paprika, purple, cocoa and, mainly for late afternoon into evening, black. "Dresses," he wound up, "really are here to stay."

Law enforcement said problem on federal land

Washington (UPI) — If you vacation on federal land this summer your chances of falling victim to crime are small but increasing. But if you are, investigators said Tuesday you may have trouble getting a qualified law enforcement officer to help.

A report by Congress' General Accounting Office said no single law gives police powers to employes of the National Park Service, the Bureau of Land Management, the Forest Service, the Fish and Wildlife Service, the Army Corps of Engineers and the Tennessee Valley Authority. The Army and the TVA permit boating at dam sites.

As a result, at least 178 federal employes carried guns and a number made basically citizens' arrests — without legal authority — the GAO said. In other cases, injured people were unable to get help from the employes, because agency rules specifically prohibited them from getting involved.

The GAO said it surveyed 1,216 enforcement agents and "about 85% . . . saw criminal activity as a problem." Park Service records say there were six murders, 15 rapes and 17 armed robbery cases — and a total of 5,200 serious crimes — among 226 million visits in 1973.

Administration officials were less worried. The Office of Management and Budget said a nationwide study found "the crime rate in the parks is one-fifth the nationwide rate."

The Justice Department said, "Crime in these areas is no more of a problem than it is in the rural United States generally, although visitors would do well to exercise extra care for their valuables when out sightseeing. In general, crime is less of a problem in recreation areas than it is elsewhere in the United States."

The GAO said a greater problem was that some agency employes overstepped their enforcement authority in order to provide visitors with police services and at some recreation areas "the prevailing practice was to shy away from law enforcement activities concerning visitors."

Gunman seizes cars at Gateway

Police are looking for a lone gunman who commandeered two cars during separate incidents Sunday afternoon at Lincoln's Gateway Shopping Center.

Steven Swartz, 26, of 5501 Adams, told police that the man pointed a gun at him, got in his car and forced him to drive a short distance before ordering him out of the car. The gunman attempted to drive the car away but was unable to do so, police said.

Apparently frustrated, he approached a couple in another car, forced them out of the vehicle at gunpoint, and drove off in the car which later was recovered. The second car was stolen from Norma Schulte, 18, 641 S. 49th, and Tim Sobotta, 17, of 5434 Lexington.

Astrological Forecast

By Sidney Omarr

Wednesday, June 22, 1977

Capricorn persists, responds well during times of crisis, is generally loyal, has long memory, works with time, blueprints destiny at an early age, suffers slings and arrows of shattered love affairs, coms back, eventually gains loyal followers and allies. Capricorn whispers confidences to Sagittarius, is drawn to Leo, talks money with Aquarius, is subject to nightmares, prefers cats to dogs, loves animals but is very selective when choosing a pet. There have been more heavyweight boxing champions born under Capricorn than any other zodiacal sign. In July, emphasis for many Capricorns will be on legal affairs, special documents, agreements, partnerships — and marital status.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Get affairs in order. Bring priorities into focus. Spotlight on practical matters, employment, services, health, co-workers, those who share special interests. Capricorn, Cancer persons figure prominently and so does the number "8."

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Good Moon aspect coincides now with change, variety, stimulation of creative abilities, urges. Member of opposite sex is in scenario. You get rid of burden, gain more recognition, find ways to obtain better display, distribution. Aries, Virgo are very much in picture.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You get support from established sources. You can take plunge in direction of more independent action. Stress creativity; get to heart of matters. Become thoroughly familiar with territory, land, property. Yes, love does figure into scheme of events!

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Movement, social activity, versatility, relatives, short trips, unusual mail — these are accented. Aquarius, Leo individuals figure prominently. Another Cancer may want you to "verify an order." Key now is to maintain balance — and to exhibit sense of humor, fitness.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Accent on payments, collections, protection of valuables, elevating personal possessions. Study Cancer message for valid hint. Gemini, Sagittarius persons help you to win major point. Expand horizons, but overcome tendency to be extravagant. Yes, social event could be exciting.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Lunar cycle high — take initiative. Make new starts, emphasize personal appearance. Judgment, intutition are on target. Accent details, fine points — build on solid base. Begin your climb to more elevated position. Aquarius, Scorpio and Taurus play key roles.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Communications open — what was a secret, restricted becomes available. Your ability to interpret, to solve puzzle is enhanced. One you "respond to" does share your feelings. Know it and cast aside fears, doubts.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Accent on friends, desires, fulfillment. Family member outlines plans, goals. Talk of redecorating, possible change of residence is in picture. Taurus, Libra persons figure prominently — and so does the number "6."

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Emphasis on reputation, achievement, relations with superiors. One in authority wants to be reassured. You may be "let in on" secrets. Key is to keep confidences, to see people as they are, to express feelings without becoming maudlin.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Moon aspect is favorable, depicts chance to communicate, to expand horizons, to travel, to elucidate philosophy. Another Capricorn figures prominently. More authority, responsibility and advancement are indicated.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You gain more than originally anticipated. Money, partner, could be affected by "unusual circumstances." Finish rather than initiate project. Deal with Aries, Libra persons. Concern with lost articles, hidden objects is evident. Yes, you'll succeed in ridding yourself of burden.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Lie low — deal with "legal entanglements." New approach brings best results. Love and marriage could be in picture. Accent on publicity, public relations, finding common meeting ground with those who oppose your views.

IF JUNE 22nd IS YOUR BIRTHDAY, you were on your own early, perhaps separated physically or psychologically from one or both parents. You succeed by being stubbornly independent. You fail by following the crowd. Scorpio persons play important roles in your life. October could be one of your most significant months of 1977, a year which sees you rediscovering principles, motives and getting a handle on who you are and your ultimate goal.

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Nebraska would benefit

(c) New York Times

Washington — Calculations based on government figures indicate that the industrial states of the Eastern Seaboard and the Middle West would not fare as well under the Carter administration's proposed revision of the welfare law as would the rural states of the South and West, including Nebraska

The calculations were made by The New York Times on the basis of computerized data supplied by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

Beer down the drain

Rochester, N Y (AP) — More than 6 2 million cans of Genesee beer and ale were opened up and their contents were dumped into the Monroe County sewer system earlier this year because the cans were defective, it was disclosed Tuesday.

The 584,400 gallons of beer and lager had a retail value of more than $1 5 million

Hijacker gives up

Mendoza, Argentina (AP) — A jobless Chilean bought a toy gun with the last of his money and seized a jet with 78 persons aboard Tuesday, forced the plane over the snow-capped Andes to this Argentine border city, then abandoned plans to fly to Algeria and surrendered, official reports said.

Radio stations in Santiago, Chile, said the pilot of the Lan-Chile plane convinced the hijacker to surrender. No passengers were harmed

Mondale's 1040 accepted

Washington (UPI) — The Internal Revenue Service has accepted Vice President Walter Mondale's 1976 income tax return as filed, his office said Tuesday

Cash rejected

Washington (UPI) — The House Agriculture Committee, moving toward a final vote on a bill overhauling the $5 6 billion a year food stamp program, Tuesday rejected a proposal to give eligible needy people cash payments instead of stamps

The cash-instead-of-stamps plan by Rep. Dawson Mathis, D-Ga., was defeated by a 32-13 vote after critics led by Committee Chairman Thomas Foley, D-Wash, said it might balloon program costs up to $8 billion a year.

Bias against age seen

Washington (AP) — The U S Civil Rights Commission said Tuesday it has evidence that federally funded social programs often discriminate against the elderly and that public jobs programs frown on applicants 45 and older.

The commission said a preliminary investigation turned up the evidence of age discrimination in the federal programs.

Alien hoods at work in U.S.

(c) Chicago Daily News

Chicago — A branch of an international crime family composed of aliens smuggled into this country from southern Italy has been operating here with the approval of crime syndicate bosses

The branch has from 40 to 50 members and has been most heavily involved in narcotics traffic — a racket that the mob's aging rulers have found distasteful

Existence of the international crime family, headed by Carlo Archino, has been confirmed by the Justice Department and Canadian law enforcement officials, who have exchanged information

The U S immigration and Naturalization Service has turned over documents on the alien hoodlums to federal prosecutors

In addition to Chicago, the new family has branches in New York City, Detroit, Miami and Albany, N Y The New York City branch has about 150 hoodlum "soldiers"

The hoodlum aliens call their family "the Honored Society," investigators said

The aliens used phony identification papers to emigrate from Italy to Canada and then to Chicago and other cities, investigators say

The Chicago mob is believed to have used the aliens as hit men from time to time because the aliens have no qualms about carrying out contract murders and "nobody knows who they are," a top federal investigator said

The crime family is based in Salerno, Italy, where Archino has his headquarters

Archino has a good working relationship with New York City crime bosses, including Carmino Galante and the New York chieftains cleared the way for the aliens to come to Chicago, investigators said

"Galante probably just asked (Chicago mob chieftian) Tony Accardo to leave them alone," the top investigator said "The aliens coexist with the Chicago mob"

The aliens have become entrenched in the Near West Side where many Italian-speaking persons still reside and have opened a number of pizza parlors, officials said

The pizza parlors have been used as front for the aliens' highly profitable narcotics traffic, investigators added

Galante, who has emerged as the new godfather of the New York mob has specialized in narcotics traffic for years Galante held secret meetings with Jack (The Lackey) Cerone, a top lieutenant of Accardo, in Chicago and Miami recently

Investigators said they suspect that stepped up mob involvement in narcotics traffic here was discussed Cerone and Accardo have told mob associates for years that they found narcotics a distasteful business and may elect to let the alien branch handle and increase in mob narcotics, investigators added

Investigators said they had suspected that for some time aliens in a number of cities were part of an organized crime group, but really didn t get details until one of the alien ' soldiers" in Canada agreed recently to cooperate with authorities there

In a 27-page handwritten document, the alien spelled out the international crime family s organization and its regulations The Justice Department was then informed of the new development

Investigators said Archino s family has a major role in the flow of heroin from France to the United States

SCC quits bidding battle

By Nancy Hicks
Star Staff Writer

Southeast Community College (SCC) has decided to give up the battle to build a new school in Lincoln using a controversial bidding procedure

But the college hasn't necessarily abandoned its dream of a Lincoln campus at 86th and O Sts

The SCC board will not appeal a Lancaster County District Court decision rejecting the design-build bidding system Under this system construction companies teamed up with architectural firms to submit both plans and cost figures for the $5 million building

By a 9-2 vote Tuesday, the board agreed not to pursue the legal battle unless one of the four individuals who filed the suit decides to appeal the case to the Nebraska Supreme Court

"It would not be in the best interest of the college to incur the expense of the appeal," said SCC attorney Doug Curry, who pointed out that the first to file an appeal to the State Supreme Court pays the cost of the district court trial transcript

Only board members Betty Schlaphoff and G Alan Dunlap voted against the no-appeal decision

"I would like to see it go to the Supreme Court I think we are depriving the people of Nebraska a means of building a building which has proved to be very economical," said Mrs Schlaphoff

The court decision does not bar construction of the new $5 million facility but only the bidding method used by SCC last spring, said Curry

But Curry and board members refused to discuss any plans for constructing that building, originally planned for use in 1978

"It would be very inappropriate to say anything at this point," said Robert Wekesser, board chairman, after a closed executive session on the lawsuit

The board also passed a conflict of interest policy during its meeting The policy goes beyond state law for community college board members and is intended to cover "substantial conflicts," said Curry

For example, if a board member owns some shares of IBM stock, he would not have to declare a conflict and abstain from voting on payment of a claim for IBM typewriters However, if he were an IBM salesman, he should declare a conflict and abstain from the discussion and vote, Curry explained

The board also renewed the three-year contract for area President Robert Eicher and named the women's dorm in Milford Pioneer Hall

Contract negotiations with the school's teaching faculty has delayed the 1977-78 budget proposal, normally approved at the June meeting Salaries make up about 75% of the college's annual budget.

Ms. Brauer, SCC board member for north Lincoln district, resigns

Southeast Community College board member Katherine Brauer has resigned from the SCC board after two years of representing the north Lincoln district.

Ms Brauer, 27, who will be teaching eighth grade English at Millard next year, plans to move to the Omaha area this summer She won her four-year seat on the SCC board in 1974

The board vacancy, effective July 1, will be filled through a majority board vote, according to SCC attorney Doug Curry. Procedural details for the replacement have not been worked out, but Ms Brauer encouraged community groups to submit names of possible candidates to the SCC board

The fourth district in Lincoln includes most of northern Lincoln and part of the near south side neighborhood, she said

U.S., Britain avert crisis in aviation at last minute

Washington (AP) — The United States and Great Britain approved a new air transportation agreement early Wednesday, avoiding an interruption of scheduled air service between the two nations a Department of Transportation official said

Failure of the two nations to reach a new commercial agreement to replace an expiring 31 year-old pact could have disrupted vacation and business plans of thousands of air travelers

"We're delighted that we were able to reach an agreement with the British and were able to avoid a cessation of service," said Chester Davenport, the department spokesman

He said details of the agreement would be made public later Wednesday

Davenport said U S officials received word of the agreement negotiated in London, about midnight when the old pact was scheduled to expire

Announcement of the agreement followed an optimistic prediction that chances were "extremely good" for a new pact The prediction, made by the chief American negotiator at the talks, came only hours after Transportation Secretary Brock Adams said he expected scheduled airline service between the two countries to cease Wednesday morning

A shutdown would have affected the scheduled flights of Pan American World Airways, Trans World Airlines, National Airlines and British Airways It would not have involved chartered airline flights or the scheduled flights of other airlines that fly between the two countries, such as Air India Iranair and El Al

The supersonic Concorde flights operated by British Airways between London and Washington under a U S -approved test program would not have been affected because the flights are involved in a test and are not considered scheduled flights

The four affected airlines had announced that if there were a shutdown they would reroute their U S London flights to airports outside the two countries Under that plan passengers would have been taken to their destinations on other airlines or by charter shuttle flights — a situation that could add hours to flight times

Before Boyd announced the breakthrough, Adams told reporters in Washington "Despite more than nine months of negotiations it appears more likely each hour that scheduled air service between the United States and Great Britain will end at midnight tonight

"The responsibility for this unfortunate action, if it occurs, rests with the British government"

He said it was his "responsibility to advise American travelers of the possible interruption of scheduled air service to London and Hong Kong (a British colony) and to be certain that contingency arrangements are being made by the scheduled carriers and the federal government"

Safety urged as Nebraska enters legal fireworks period

America's gala bicentennial celebrations last year apparently took some of the bang out of fireworks — 32 states now restrict their use — but Nebraska skies will start popping Friday.

That's the first legal day for fireworks sales outside of Lincoln, according to Chief Fire Inspector Dale Boettcher of the Lincoln Fire Department. Sales and use of fireworks won't be legal inside city limits until Tuesday, June 28, he added

Nebraska is one of five states which allows Class C fireworks as approved by enforcing authorities Sparklers, spray and Vesuvius (from the volcano of the same name) fountains, torches, fire cones, star and comet aerial shells and lady fingers of ⅞" length, ⅛" diameter and containing no more than 50 milligrams of powder, are legal in the city and state California, Kansas, New Mexico and Washington have similar restrictions

The smaller lady fingers (firecrackers) are the result of Consumer Product Safety Commission (CPSC) regulations passed in December 1976, Boettcher explained. The decision to make the popular firework less potent probably is the result of one of the bicentennial's least popular statistics — the number of fireworks-related injuries.

For 1976, CPSC said that about 9,000 people suffered fireworks-related injuries During the bicentennial celebration, June 23 to July 20, 5,600 people were treated in hospital emergency rooms throughout the country

Lincoln recorded 15 such injuries between June 28 and July 4, the legal dates The youngest was a four-year-old who "somehow lit some fireworks in his pocket," Boettcher said The oldest was a 77-year-old who "thought the particular firework was a dud and bent over to pick it up when it exploded," he added

Burns to the face, eyes and hands were the most common injury Lincoln hasn't recorded a fireworks fatality since the late 1960s and that was a suicide, Boettcher said But, numerous grass and brush fires, several small building fires, and a "lot of nuisance calls" have resulted

Gone are the 130 milligram firecrackers of the past, although some are "probably available, illegally," he added Retailers caught selling illegal fireworks are subject to a $100 fine and/or 10 to 30 days in jail, according to Nebraska law Users are subject to a fine of $25, Boettcher said

"Prevention is the best medicine" for eliminating the fireworks hazards, he added Adult supervision is high on the list of precautions, with a "bucket of water" ranked second That water should be used for the wires of dead sparklers, as well as "the final word" for suspected duds

With skyrocketing fireworks prices, everybody wants to get their money s worth but Boettcher strongly warns against "bending over or picking up duds" Dousing them with water is preferred

Boettcher also advises that the hours for fireworks use in Lincoln are enforced They are legal from 8 a m until 11 p m, and until midnight on the Fourth of July

Lincoln's fireworks stands must also pass a rigid inspection by the fire department The tents or stands must be treated with a fire retardant material, and owners and operators are advised to have a fire extinguisher on hand

Lincoln hasn t had a fireworks stand fire for a few years, Boettcher said "They are rare but when they do happen, they don't last very long," he added

Boettcher suggests the following checklist for fireworks safety

- Always read the directions
- Always have adult supervision
- Never experiment, take fireworks apart, mix anything with fireworks contents of attempt to make own fireworks
- Always light fireworks outdoors in a clear area away from houses and flammable materials
- Light one device at a time
- Keep a bucket of water nearby for emergencies
- Keep at a safe distance after lighting
- Dispose of fireworks properly, soak the duds
- Never allow small children to handle fireworks
- Always store fireworks in a cool, dry place and avoid rough handling that might damage fuses
- Always allow enough room for proper function, never ignite in metal or glass containers.

Brezhnev: Arms race most-burning problem

Paris (UPI) — Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev Tuesday said "there is no more burning problem" than stopping the arms race and warned that President Carter's human rights advocacy could renew the cold war.

Brezhnev game a somber toast at a state dinner given by French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing on the second night of the Soviet leader's three-day state visit.

"Peace in Europe," he said, "is threatened with numerous dangers . . . the arms race, which instead of stopping is speeding up, is the principal danger."

"There is no more burning problem," Brezhnev said, "no task more important than the cessation of the arms race . . . the prospect of the dissemination of nuclear weapons throughout the planet, as well as the creation of new systems of mass destruction, constitutes an especially grave danger."

In reply, Giscard said, "Detente does not claim to remove differences and it would be vain to pretend it can. But, with understanding and cooperation, detente offers the means of surmounting these differences and the hope, one day, of passing them by."

Earlier in the day Brezhnev, as quoted by a Soviet spokesman, warned that the Carter administration's statements on Soviet observance of human rights "do not help detente and contradict the Helsinki agreement."

While Brezhnev and Giscard exchanged toasts at the dinner, about 500 Jewish demonstrators chanted "Brezhnev assassin" outside the Soviet Intourist office near the Paris Opera.

Members of the right-wing "New Forces" Party roamed up and down the Champs-Elysees in small groups burning Soviet flags.

Police easily dispersed both demonstrations and no serious injuries were reported, a police spokesman said.

Soviet stubbornness brings conference to complete stop

Belgrade, Yugoslavia (UPI) — The Belgrade conference reviewing the 1975 Helsinki accords came to a "complete stop" Tuesday when Soviet and U.S. delegates deadlocked over rival agenda proposals.

U.S. and Western European delegates to the 35-nation conference blamed the Soviets for the impasse.

"The Russians aren't moving an inch," said Spencer Oliver, a member of the American delegation.

The nations at the preliminary conference are trying to set the agenda for a full meeting this fall to review enforcement of the accords' human rights provisions.

The United States and Western European nations favor an agenda specifically calling for a review of human rights

Moscow, which wants to keep human rights from becoming the top issue, wants the agenda to call for a review of all Helsinki provisions, including plans for increased East-West cultural and commercial exchanges.

Diplomats who attended the closed-door talks Tuesday said neutral countries were working on a compromise between the Soviet and Western proposals.

But Soviet delegate Yuly Vorontsov reportedly told the conference the Russians saw no reason to change their outline.

Finland suggested the meeting move onto other subjects and return to the agenda later. But the Russians and their allies objected strongly.

"That brought things to a complete stop," one Western delegate said.

Amin murder try sparks killings

Nairobi, Kenya (UPI) — Ugandan troops loyal to President Idi Amin have gone on a "rampage of killings" following an assassination attempt against Amin in which the mercurial dictator was wounded, the Kenya news agency reported.

The agency reported that Amin was wounded during an ambush attack against his car last weekend and quoted sources close to Amin as saying he had been hospitalized in Uganda, thus explaining his mysterious disappearance.

It said hundreds of Ugandans were fleeing to Kenya to escape "certain death" at the hands of Amin's troops.

In Luxembourg, British Foreign Secretary David Owen said Amin "is alive and well" but would not elaborate or give the source of his information.

Uganda radio mentioned Amin for the first time in three days Tuesday night, saying he had received last Saturday the Uganda delegation to an organization for African Unity meeting and thanked them for its work.

Grand Rapids, Mich. (AP) — Lee M. Woodruff, editor of the Grand Rapids Press for nearly 32 years, died Monday. He was 77.

Funeral bandits merit 'special place in hell'

Minneapolis (UPI) — To Corrine Nagovsky and Dexter Shultz, burglars who prey on empty homes during funerals are scum and deserve a special place in hell.

"To the person who broke into and robbed my mother's apartment during by dad's funeral, I'd like to say congratulations!" Mrs. Nagovsky wrote in a letter to the editor. "You go to the head of the class of scum."

Schultz saw the letter to the editor but didn't think much about it. His father died the same day. He had funeral arrangements to make.

Burglars saw the obit, too.

During the funeral of George Schultz, two young men kicked in a door at his mother's one-bedroom house and took a television set.

"There should be a special place in hell for people like that," Schultz said.

"Mother came through the funeral in good shape. We took her home. The door was open. Kicked in. She turned white as a sheet. I grabbed her. She almost collapsed. Drawers, clothes, everything was thrown on the floor. Her color TV — the only thing she had left — was stolen."

"We called the police. Then I remembered the letter to the editor."

Schultz then drove about five blocks to his house.

"Sure enough," he said, "they hit me too. Stole four shotguns, a .22 automatic rifle, some jewelery and an old gold pocket watch belonging to my grandfather. That was worth $500."

For Schultz, the break-in was the second in a week. Burglars took his boat, motor tools, and a couple of old guns from his fishing cabin on Mille Lacs Lake.

One neighbor saw two young men carry a tennis racket to a red pickup truck, but thought it was just friends of Schultz' son. He'd forgotten that the young man joined the Army two weeks ago.

"Going through a funeral is bad enough," Mrs. Nagovsky said. "Then go home and find your house ransacked. That's more that you can stand."

Both Schultz and Mrs. Nagovsky asked the mortuary operators to warn other people.

"But when you get ready for a funeral, a burglary is about the farthest thing from your mind," she said. "What a dirty thing to do."

Next time Dr. Barnard may use chimp's heart

Cape Town, South Africa (AP) — Surgeon Christiaan Barnard said Tuesday the baboon's heart he implanted Monday in a young Italian woman was too small to save her life and he may try a chimpanzee's heart in a future transplant.

The woman's husband collapsed after learning of her death at Cape Town's Groote Schuur Hospital. He was later released, but hospital sources said he was still "very shocked."

Hospital officials refused to identify the couple, citing a South African law prohibiting publication of names of persons involved in transplant surgery without family consent.

Barnard said that, in the absence of a human donor, he attempted the world's first implant of a baboon's heart into a human as a "last resort" to save the 26-year-old woman's life.

She regained consciousness but died 2½ hours after the 10-hour operation. Barnard said the baboon's heart proved too small to carry her circulation when her own heart failed completely.

"I think this is the last baboon transplant I am going to use. I think I will use chimpanzees next time," the 54-year-old South African transplant pioneer told reporters Tuesday.

Haldeman goes to California jail

Associated Press

H R. Haldeman, the second most powerful man in Richard Nixon's White House, went to prison in California Tuesday, surrendering nearly a day earlier than scheduled to be punished for his Watergate crimes

John N Mitchell, also ordered to report to prison Wednesday, stuck to the schedule and planned to surrender at the Maxwell AFB federal prison facility in Alabama by the noon deadline

Haldeman walked into the prison at Lompoc, Calif , at 3 55 p m CDT, donned a gray prison uniform and was placed in a dormitory with 30 other prisoners

But first, the man who once was gatekeeper to the Oval Office, was assigned a prison number, fingerprinted and photographed

"He will be routinely processed through the prison camp's receiving unit during the next couple of weeks," said Gary Aldinger, a prison spokesman. "He will receive a physical examination and be classified to determine his work assignment program "

Prisoners at Lompoc, as at Maxwell, are assigned to landscaping and grounds maintenance, a farm, or to a furniture factory

Both Haldeman and Mitchell are under 2½-to-8-year sentences for their parts in the cover-up of White House involvement in the Watergate affair

Never before have men who held such great national political power gone to prison Haldeman, the man who ran the Nixon White House, a convicted perjurer, Mitchell, the first attorney general in history to be convicted of criminal acts

By reporting early, Haldeman apparently tried to avoid reporters, but newsmen were on the scene

Haldeman was the 24th man caught in the Watergate web to enter prison Mitchell will be the 25th and probably the last

For Haldeman, it was exactly 28 months from the day he, Mitchell and domestic aide John D Ehrlichman were sentenced by U S District Judge John J Sirica

He and Mitchell carried their appeals all the way to the Supreme Court, where they were denied a hearing They have asked the court to reconsider, but chances of that are slim No one was closer to Nixon, the fallen president, than these two men Mitchell had been Nixon s law partner and the director of his two successful presidential campaigns Haldeman had worked in Nixon campaigns since 1956, devoting himself to the task so completely that people said if Nixon hadn't had a Haldeman, he would have had to invent one

"I'll try anything," said Lisa, who also swims, skateboards and bowls a 124 average "I can do anything anybody else can do — at least I'll try my best "

Moon's church not Christian

New York (AP) — A new study by top Roman Catholic and Protestant theologians says the Rev Sun Myung Moon's Unification Church has a right to exist but cannot be considered a Christian church

The study, released by the National Council of Churches, was begun a year ago "to clarify the claims to Christian identity made by the Unification Church," it says

'Although the 11-page report concludes that Unification beliefs depart from the basics of Christianity in many ways, it also said the church has a constitutional right to exist and warned against using the report "for arbitrary or punitive purposes "

The study said it found these differences between the Unification Church and traditional Christian doctrine

— While Christians believe redemption is possible for everyone, the Unification Church teaches that individuals and nations can be classified as "heavenly" or "satanic "

— Christians believe the Bible is supreme, but the Unification Church believes Moon s revelations supersede the Bible

— Members of the Unification Church believe that Jesus Christ failed as a savior because he died on the cross and that "The Lord of the Second Advent," who many believe is Moon, supplants Christ

The study committee was composed of members of religious faiths ranging from Roman Catholic to Southern Baptist The conclusions in the report were based on a study of Moon s book, "Divine Principle," which expresses his church's doctrines

$28 rebate approved by tax committee

Washington (AP) — The House Ways and Means Committee voted Tuesday for special $28 federal payments to most adult Americans to be financed by President Carter's new tax on crude oil

As approved by the committee, the "rebates" are likely to be extended through 1981 at amounts ranging up to $80 per adult A couple would receive $440 over the four-year period

The rebate scheme was approved, 19 to 17, over solid Republican opposition as part of Carter's energy-tax program

The vote authorized the special payments only for 1978 to adult taxpayers and Social Security and welfare recipients But the tax that will pay for the payments already has been voted for 1978, 1979 and 1980 as well as the first nine months of 1981

By voting the rebate for only one year, the panel would allow Congress to repeat the process again next year, an election year An administration official said he would be shocked if the rebates were not approved ultimately for the entire life of the crude-oil tax

The tax would bring in $4 6 billion for the special payments in 1978, and $37 3 billion over the 3¾ years The payments would be $28 per adult in 1978, $54 in 1979, $81 in 1980 and $57 in 1981

The "rebate" idea was proposed by Carter to prevent any severe effect on the economy as a result of the stiff tax he wants imposed on domestic crude oil The tax, starting next Jan 1, would be used to raise U S oil prices to the world market level.

The F18's engine is produced at a General Electric Co plant in O'Neill's home state of Massachusetts The F14 is produced by the Grumman Arrowspace Corp of Bethpage, Long Island

Senate committee votes to let U.S. pay for some abortions

Washington (UPI) — The Senate Appropriations Committee voted Tuesday to allow use of federal funds for abortions where the life of the mother is in danger and in certain other cases

Other instances where funds could be used would be

— Where the mother has multiple sclerosis or renal disease "or other diseases which would seriously deform or debilitate the fetus "

— For the termination of ectopic pregnancy, an abnormality which is fatal to the mother

— for victims of rape or incest

In all other cases the government would be prohibited from using federal funds for performance of abortions

By a vote of 16 to 8 the committee attached these provisions to a $60 7 billion appropriation bill for the Departments of Labor and Health, Education and Welfare, which is expected to come up on the Senate floor later this week

The House, in passing its version of the bill, included a flat ban on use of federal funds for abortions under any circumstances

House opposes saccharin ban

Washington (UPI) — The House voted Tuesday to block for at least one year the Food and Drug Administration's proposed ban on saccharin

Rejecting arguments the move was unwise because of new evidence linking the artificial sweetener with cancer, the House approved by standing vote an amendment which would forbid the FDA from using federal money to promulgate or enforce the ban through Sept 30, 1978

The provision was attached to a measure carrying $21 7 billion to fund the Agriculture Department and related agencies for the new fiscal year starting Oct. 1

The House then approved the overall bill, 380 to 35, and sent it to the Senate.

Senate favors tougher safety laws for miners

Washington (UPI) — The Senate voted Tuesday to toughen federal health and safety laws for coal and hard rock mines in a move proponents considered critical because of President Carter's plan to double coal production.

Final passage of the legislation came on a 78-18 roll call vote after the Senate rejected several Republican-sponsored weakening amendments

The legislation, which has yet to pass the house, would also transfer enforcement of federal mine safety laws from the Interior Department to the Labor Department July 1, 1978, and bring hard rock mines under stronger standards for coal mines

The administration and organized labor strongly supported the bill, which would affect an estimated 212 000 coal miners and 274,500 hard rock miners

Nebraska GOP no different: status quo hurts at polls

Former Nebraska Governor Norbert Tiemann, one of the better heads of the state in recent years, concluded on a visit in Lincoln that his old Republican party here is in a shambles. One might conclude from that that something has happened to the GOP to cause it to change, to run down at the heels.

Not much, really, has changed with the GOP and that is why it is in a shambles, if it is. We are not willing to concede the shambles bit but it is unusual that anyone would use such a term for Nebraska Republicans, as the party was king of the state for so long.

But it is a party that, in its leadership, has clung to the things and principles of the past. Maybe they were good things and good principles in their day but they have had it and will not be returning.

The GOP has suffered its recent defeats at the polls not because it has disintegrated, as Tiemann suggests, but because it has failed to change. It has been a party of old ideas, for one thing.

More importantly, it has been a party of intolerance. It has always been that, failing to welcome into its ranks any but those who swallowed its doctrinaire conservatism hook, line and sinker.

There was a time the GOP could win almost at will at the polls, despite its shortcomings. That was because it held such a wide margin of registered voters over the Democrats and because its principles were more in tune with more people than they are today.

The Democratic party, however, has narrowed the voter edge and the times have changed. The vast majority of state and national problems that exist today did not exist even 10 years ago but the Republicans have generally failed to address themselves to those problems.

It will be interesting to see the positions taken in coming months by GOP gubernatorial candidates in such areas as higher education, water conservation, environmental preservation, energy utilization, land use control, health care and others. And then it will be interesting to watch the GOP gubernatorial primary results.

Perhaps this is what Tiemann meant when he talked of the GOP as being in "a total shambles." Perhaps it is exactly what he meant — that the party is in a shambles as a result of its failure to address the times.

The 'bickering' goes on

Precious little leadership has been exerted recently by anyone on the Lincoln City Council toward the end of more harmonious relations between council members and the mayor.

Veteran council member Bob Sikyta, who prior to the recent city elections was one of those who decried "bickering" in city government, remains one of the chief mischief-makers.

As an example, Sikyta badgered Mayor Helen Boosalis Monday for allegedly failing to defend council members against critics and he told the mayor to replace her nominee for a City Personnel Board slot with his own choice. Apparently Sikyta's idea of harmonious relations in city government is for the mayor to take abuse with a smile, no matter the acrimonious provocations from some council members.

With regard to the personnel board vacancy, the council will vote to confirm or reject the mayor's choices — but it should be remembered that the mayor does have the power to propose appointments. And it is a general rule in civilized legislative-executive relationships that barring an obvious lack of qualifications or an objective finding of moral unfitness, executive appointments are confirmed.

If Sikyta wants to dictate his choices for membership on city boards and commissions, he should run for mayor.

For one of the two vacancies on the personnel board, Mrs. Boosalis has nominated Betty Wilhelm, who works for the University of Nebraska. The mayor thinks it is important to have a woman on the board "since large numbers of our work force are women."

Sikyta is joined in his opposition to Ms. Wilhelm's nomination by new council member Leo Scherer, who thinks all members of the personnel board should come from private industry. Scherer, who in a post-election statement last month said he could work with the mayor, has opposed her recommendation to extend Personnel Director Walt Mitchell's employment by a year, and now is crossing swords with her on the personnel board appointment for what do not appear to be valid reasons. These are not striking demonstrations of "togetherness."

We see nothing in Ms. Wilhelm's gender or place of employment which would disqualify her from serving on the city personnel board.

What we do see in the latest flap is disturbing evidence that some council members do not intend to let up in their attacks on Mrs. Boosalis, not for a minute. The heralded end of bickering will not come, it appears, before the next city elections.

Fatigue plagues truck industry

Jack Anderson

Washington — Those thundering, 18-wheel trucks you encounter on the highways may be driven by men who are physically fatigued from too many hours on the road.

A pounding tractor-trailer, with an exhausted man at the wheel, is a menace to the other traffic. The grim statistics indicate that the accidents he may cause will kill 30 auto passengers for every trucker who dies.

Yet the trucking companies, plagued by higher gas prices and lower speed limits, are driving their semi-trailers slower and their men harder. We have been bombarded with complaints from truck drivers who claim they're working 15-hour days and 70-hour weeks.

This is permitted, incredibly, by antiquated government regulations. Some companies push their drivers to the exhaustion point, a practice known in trucking circles as "maximum utilization."

"They wring every ounce of work from you," a North Carolina driver told our reporter, Tony Capaccio. "For every 70-hour week you log in, it might have actually taken 100 hours to accumulate."

Complained another veteran of the road: "They don't give you a chance to be rested. I was in the Korean War and had more time to myself than now."

Spokesmen for the trucking industry said the economic impact would be "ruinous" if the government should limit the work week of truck drivers. There is no evidence, they contend, that the long hauls pose a safety threat. They cite studies indicating that most trucking accidents occur in the first three hours of a shift.

This, however, is questioned by Transportation Dept. experts, who are worried about weariness on the highways.

Some 165 postal supervisors, with nothing better to do, have been shadowing postmen on their routes. The supervisors have been instructed to walk behind the postmen, presumably at a discreet distance, to evaluate the length of postal routes.

Thus, on some selected routes, householders have been getting two postal employees for the price of one. This has not, unfortunately, improved mail services. But it has given 165 supervisors, who had been declared surplus, something to do.

First, the excess supervisors were hustled off to Norman, Okla., for training in route examination. Then they were flown to scattered towns to follow postmen around.

To the best of our calculations, these supervisory walkathons have been costing the taxpayers about $50,000 a week. One supervisor provided us with his itemized expense account. Each week he drew over $100 to pay his hotel bill, another $90 for a weekend flight home, still another $90 per diem. This was paid, of course, on top of his $18,000 annual salary.

A spokesman acknowledged that the Postal Service has been shadowing postmen — the better to learn about their problems, he said. He would not confirm our $50,000-a-week figure but agreed our calculations appeared close to the mark. He insisted, however, there were not always 165 supervisors in the field. At this writing, he said, only 60 men are involved in the project. As for its value, he said: "It's better than having them sitting around in their post offices and doing nothing."

Congressmen are grumbling privately over the Federal Communications Commission's (FCC) failure to crack down on televised sports.

Both ABC and CBS have been implicated in alleged payoffs to athletes. A Baltimore grand jury is inquiring into the alleged rigging of a recent boxing tourney, promoted by entrepreneur Don King and televised by ABC. CBS has been charged with paying the losing players in a tennis tournament billed as "winner-take-all" matches.

Both networks maintain complete innocence; any illegalities, they say, were not their doing.

But behind the scenes, the House Communications subcommittee is critical of the FCC's handling of the investigation. The subcommittee has been informed that the FCC has left it up to the network executives to conduct their own internal investigations. The commission won't intervene, according to government sources, unless it is dissatisfied with the network's results.

"We won't accept any investigation like that," snorted a House staff member. The subcommittee, therefore, will conduct its own intensive probe.

Key posts affect lives of people

Tom Wicker

New York — President Carter is now confronted with two decisions, each of which is about as important as any he will make. He has to choose a new director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, presumably from a list of five names submitted to him by a special commission; and he has to decide whether to appoint a single director for all the various agencies loosely known as "the intelligence community."

Probably no two officials — should Carter decide to name an "intelligence czar" — would have more power over the lives of individual Americans. And at that, their power often would be invisible or unrealized at the time by those affected, and not subject to political check by the voters — unless at one remove upon the man who appointed such powerful officials. And at least the FBI chief, with his 10-year term, would serve more than one administration.

Of the two choices Carter must make, picking the FBI director is simple by comparison, though scarcely less important.

Obviously, for the FBI, Carter needs a man whose performance will restore public confidence in an agency once ranked with Mother and the flag, but in recent years wracked by charges of illegal procedures, improper political surveillances and invasions of citizens' rights. Just as obviously, the new director will need to rebuild agent morale and restore the bureau's effectiveness as an investigative agency. For many years, owing mostly to the rigidities and political obsessions of J. Edgar Hoover, the FBI simply has not been as good at its basic mission as it ought to be, or as it has pictured itself.

Both tasks will be complicated by the forthcoming trial of a former agent — and perhaps others — on charges of having broken the law while supposedly enforcing it. Yet, that seems necessary to the third major task of a new director — bringing bureau operations under the rule of law, while keeping them out of partisan or ideological political control.

While it was in some ways disappointing, there is one good thing to be said for the rather surprising anonomity, outside their own communities, of the five men the commission suggested to Carter. None of them appears likely within a 10-year term to build himself into the kind of public monument Hoover became, with bureaucratic and political power that made him virtually unchallengable even by presidents.

Very much the same considerations apply to the proposal of Stansfield Turner, the director of the CIA, that the intelligence community — including the National Security Agency and the defense and state department intelligence units — should have a single chief unaffiliated with any of the component agencies. The difference is that Admiral Turner presumably would get the post; Carter has to decide on the organizational principle rather than pick the man.

Disclosures of CIA misdeeds and illegal operations, plus some by the NSA, have given the whole intelligence community a bad name, and, no doubt, produced morale problems; so this, too, is a rebuilding job, both internally and externally. And as in the case of the FBI, the CIA and the other intelligence agencies must be brought within the rule of law but not the control of politicians.

Both the FBI and the intelligence agencies, not incidentally, may be facing much closer congressional oversight than in the past. Sen. Daniel Inouye has set a good example by announcing that he will resign after this year as chairman of the new Intelligence Committee; a rotating chairmanship will help guard against co-option of the committee, which is engaged in writing new charters for the FBI and the intelligence community.

Two objections to Turner's "czar" proposal are obvious. One is that such a prestigious and powerful position might produce another unchallengeable ikon in the Hoover and Allan Dulles mold; the other is that such a "czar" might suppress dissent and unorthodox views within the intelligence community, thus limiting the advice and information reaching the President.

But Sen. Gary Hart, for one, believes from his work on the Intelligence Committee that the community probably has been speaking with too many voices, through too many channels. And the single-director concept does offer the possibility of more efficiency, greater control, less duplication and a more useful synthesis of all available intelligence information.

Carter should beware, however, of relying too much on his apparently high regard for Turner. There will be other directors in administrations to come; so important a job, if it is created, should not be tailored to one man but to the intelligence needs of the nation.

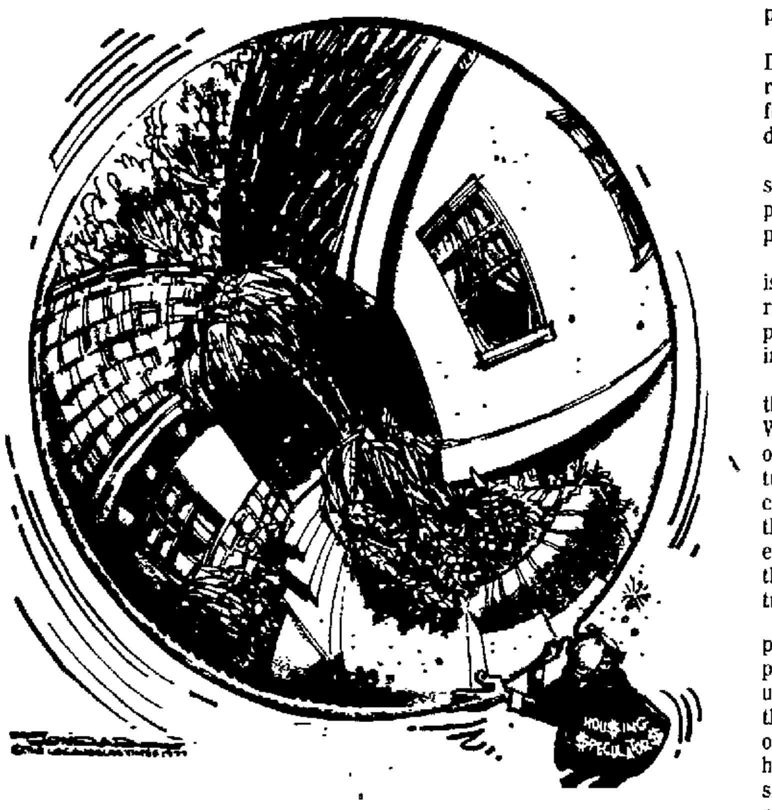
Disturbing news on inflation front

By Leonard Silk



New York — Geoffrey H. Moore, director of business-cycle research at the National Bureau of Economic Research and former U.S. commissioner of labor statistics, thinks most economists are being too optimistic about the trend of inflation. The common view, inside and outside government, is that the current trend of inflation is about 6 per cent; and the standard forecast is that, prices will rise somewhere between 5½ per cent and 6½ per cent in 1978.

But Moore estimates that consumer prices are now trending upward at an annual rate of 8 per cent. And, on the basis of his analysis of past business cycles, he believes that the rate will rise further — until the economy slides into its next recession.

Consumer prices tend to lag behind the business cycle. The current business-cycle expansion is now in its 27th month. But inflation has been rising for only 14 months — an unusually long lag — and presumably has a way to go yet.

Moore uses as his basic measure of the rate of inflation a six-month moving average of consumer prices, centered on the third month.

By this measure, the rate of inflation of consumer prices reached a double-digit peak of 12.6 per cent in July, 1974. The inflation rate then dropped to a trough of 4.7 per cent for the six-month period centered on April, 1976. It has since climbed back to 8 per cent for the six month period centered on January, 1977.

"We've come a long way from the bottom," says Moore. "In fact, we've covered more than a third of the distance back up the downhill road that we traveled from July 1974 to March 1976."

This does not mean, he adds, that the current upswing must move the inflation rate all the way back to the "unseemly" double-digit levels of 1974. "It may or may not," says Moore.

But most of the eight upswings in the inflation cycle since 1948 have lasted two or three years, so this one may have a year or two to go.

Skeptics about Moore's 8 per cent and moving up estimate question whether he has not overestimated inflation in the past six months because of the unusually severe winter and the run-up of food prices. He doesn't think so. He asserts that, in the upswing of a business cycle, rising demand lifts highly sensitive food prices. He sees no early downturn in prices of food at the retail level.

United States Department of Agriculture forecasters agree. They expect food prices, which rose by 5 per cent from December 1976 through April of this year, to increase by 8 to 10 per cent in 1977, measuring from last December to next December.

Of that rise, they predict, about half will be due to higher costs for imported foods and fish; one-fourth to increased marketing charges, rising costs of labor and petroleum, and one-fourth to higher prices for domestically produced foodstuffs.

Harold Hjort, an economist at the Department of Agriculture, says it's really too early to predict how much food prices will go up in 1978. Much depends on the weather.

If the weather in 1978 is good, Hjort said, food prices might go up only 5 to 6 per cent; if the weather is bad, food prices could soar at double-digit rates.

Moore's anxiety about the economy is intensified when he looks at the relationship between total unit costs of production (including labor costs) and industrial prices.

That cost-price relation was one of the key tools developed by the late Wesley C. Mitchell, the founding father of the National Bureau, to explain upturns and downturns in the business cycle. When prices were rising faster than costs, he found, the economy expanded; and when costs rose faster than prices, profits fell and expansion turned into recession.

Moore's calculations show that the prices charged by nonfinancial corporations rose faster than their total unit costs through 1975 and the first three quarters of 1976, as profits and output received. But total unit costs have been rising faster than prices since late 1976. Measured against the same quarters a year ago, units costs rose at an annual rate of 6 per cent in the first quarter of 1977, while prices of nonfinancial corporations rose by only 5 per cent.

When these cost-price relations are measured as changes from the preceding quarter, the results are even more discouraging. In the fourth quarter of 1975, unit costs rose at an annual rate of 9.3 per per cent, while prices went up only 5.4 per cent. In the first quarter of 1977, costs outclimbed prices by 7.1 per cent to 5.6 per cent.

Double standard strikes raw nerve

Ellen Goodman

Boston — This is not one of those issues I've been dying to jump right into. Like any other World War I buff, I get nervous around people who are sure that God is on their side. I'm always afraid that somehow or other they'll send me to the trenches.

In any case, there were some advantages to having been an observer while the argument over gay rights rotted away in the Florida sun. When the vote was in, I remembered why the founding fathers never held a referendum on the Bill of Rights. Since then it's become clear that Anita Bryant's main victory has been to single-handedly coax the bigots out of the closet.

As an observer, it's also been fascinating to compare the attitude of the homophile electorate of Dade County, Florida with that of the sexist judge of Dane County, Wisconsin.

In Florida, a civil rights question — did homosexuals have equal rights to work and housing? — deteriorated in public to a sexual pervert question: Should homosexuals be allowed to convert or seduce small boys? Having so redefined the question, it's no wonder that the voters came up with such a definite answer.

But wrapped inside the hysteria were some odd assumptions, not the least of them being that all homosexuals were male. (At issue was clearly the vision of a flamboyant, promiscuous, and dangerous gay male. The children to be saved were boy children.)

The Save Our Childrenettes seemed to have accepted the idea that sexuality is a matter of choice. This is an idea pushed, curiously, only by the most ardent gay activists. They feared that heterosexual boys could be converted by the mere presence of a gay coach of the high school football team. Their attitude suggested that sexuality, one of the most deeply rooted aspects of personality, was as trendy, as open to chance and change, as taste in clothes.

The facts, of course, are to the contrary. Dr. Mary Calderone, the president of the Sex Information and Education Council of the United States, says that "no one who was programmed by five years of age to be heterosexual can be seduced to be homosexual any more than the reverse. Think of the efforts that have been made through the ages by heterosexuals to seduce homosexuals."

But the second gut fear promoted in Florida was that the average male homosexual was at least a potential child molester if not a downright rapist. In fact, child molesters and rapists are pariahs to the gay community, just as they are to the "straight" community.

Moreover, the homosexual child abusers just don't hold a chance against the heterosexual competition. Statistically speaking, child molesting begins at home. But even outside the family, the victims are, by a vast majority, girls, abused by men.

I would have been a great deal more impressed with the sincerity of the Save Our Childrenettes if they had been more concerned with the major sexual crime in the country: heterosexual rape.

Which brings us back to Dane County, and the courtroom operated by Judge Archie Simonson. While the referendum beat went on in Florida, in Madison, Wisconsin, this purveyor of blind justice let off a 15-year-old rapist who had joined with two others in assaulting a 16-year-old girl.

His reasoning, if you may call it such, was that the misguided young fellow had merely been reacting "normally" to the provacative, scanty clothed lasses frolicking about these days. As he told People magazine: "My gosh, even in court they appear in see-through blouses without bras. You can see their nipples!"

In short, the judge ruled that girls are asking for it. Now, close your eyes for a moment and imagine him still on the bench if the victim had been a 15-year-old boy well known for wearing his jeans too tight.

The comparison between the northern and southern counties tells us something. In Dade County, a homosexual is considered a pervert in the act of looking for a job and he's a potential rapist if he wants housing. In Dane County, a heterosexual is considered normal even if he's a rapist.

This double standard is explained most appropriately by our friendly neighborhood judge, who is, of course, convinced that God is on his side. "I've struck a raw nerve," he admitted. "But women are sex objects. God did that; I didn't."

I guess it's back to the trenches.

IRS challenge: millions would applaud

Ralph De Toledano

Washington — There has been some less-than-kind talk in this gossipy city about the audit being made by the Internal Revenue Service of President Carter's tax returns and those of his mother and brother.

The assumption is that IRS would not be poking its long and insensitive nose into the affairs of the President of the United States unless there were something pretty obviously wrong with his return.

I do not know — and neither does any other Washington reporter — what prompted IRS to act. But I am not particularly impressed by the mere fact that the President is undergoing an ordeal which so many of us have been subjected to — sometimes merely to satisfy the bureaucratic ambitions of an IRS staffer who feels that the way to rise is to make the life of as many taxpayers as possible unhappy.

The last time I was audited — and I devoutly hope that it will be the last time — an unpleasant young man presented himself at my office, questioning one item in my return. This could have been disposed of in perhaps a couple of hours. But he proceeded to rummage through all of my records, attempted to determine my net worth, and at one point asked me how much money I usually carried around in my pocket.

He also wanted to know how much I spent for food and other expenses which are of no concern to the Internal Revenue Service. I told him politely that none of this was any of his business, whereupon he presented me with a questionnaire, prepared by IRS but highly improper.

At the present time, I am watching with some interest IRS shenanigans involving a woman who has been deprived of her tax refund. It is the position of IRS that it will not budge until she gives them facts she does not have about the tax return of her ex-husband.

Unless the ex-wife is in some way involved in how he filed his return — and IRS knows that she is not — she cannot in any way be penalized for her former spouse's alleged improprieties.

But since IRS takes the position that it is above the law, very little can be done.

It is basic to American law that an individual is innocent until he is proved guilty. But when IRS moves against a taxpayer, he is presumed guilty until he has demonstrated his innocence — and the courts have justified this on the basis of a unique and intolerable concept that the burden of proof rests on thee and me because otherwise the tax system would not work.

If IRS jumps on your back, you cannot point to the due process clause of the Constitution. And if IRS challenges you and then takes two or three years before it gets around to your return, you pay interest on the money it claims.

If, however, IRS proves to be wrong, it pays you no interest on the money it has withheld.

So I am not impressed by the audit of Jimmy Carter's 1975 return. And I hope that if he proves to be right, he will knock some heads together. But, of course, he won't. Should he do so, there would be outcries that he is using the power of the presidency against our tax inquisitors. His advisers will tell him that to act against IRS is bad public relations, but they are wrong. Millions of Americans would applaud.

Dr. Omniscient answers the mail

Russell Baker

Dear Doctor: What has become of the generation gap? I haven't seen it for years and suddenly discover that I miss it.

(signed) Over 40.

Dear Over 40: The generation gap died ignored and heartbroken in the poverty of an East St. Louis flop house four years ago. An autopsy ascribed death to an onset of 30th birthdays on the gap's younger side, which drastically reduced the vital flow of contempt juices necessary to keep the over-30 population inflamed. As the younger side of the gap begain finding it increasingly ludicrous never to trust anybody over 30, the gap became languid and idle, lost its sense of purpose and started drinking.

Simultaneously, the gap's older side developed a violent seizure of Watergate syndrome, characterized by an insatiable craving for titillation about government corruption. In alarmingly brief time, the gap lost all interest in itself and expired of acute pointlessness.

Fortunately, it was saved from a Potter's field burial and has been removed to the Smithsonian Institution in Washington for stuffing and mounting. It will eventually be displayed between two other distinguished relics of the American past, the incredibly boring leisure-time crisis of the early 1960s and the Metrecal-for-lunch bunch.

Dear Dr. Omniscient: Is the sexual revolution now over, and if so, who won?

(signed) Really Out Of It.

Dear Really Out of It: Despite a few mopping up actions still in progress, such as Mayor Beam's campaign to bottle up massage parlors at Yorktown, the sexual revolution is now history. There were two important results.

One, if you are a girl and insist that the boy marry you, you are now a counterrevolutionary. From this point of view, the boys won.

Two, the birth rate has dropped considerably, indicating that sex is becoming a social time-killer like television. From this point of view, both sex and television lost.

Dear Doctor: After 30 years of not reading the comic strips, I have recently resumed and am appalled to see that Dick Tracy seems to be wearing somebody else's mustache. Is it Mutt's or Jeff's. And what does it mean? Has Tracy sold out to the hippies?

(signed) American.

Dear American: The mustache Tracy is wearing used to belong to Major Hoople. It is composed of fabric taken from the tassel of Major Hoople's fez.

Dear Dr. Omniscient: I see where Ramses II, the well-known mummy, has had his fungus infection cured by doctors in Paris and has been sent back to Egypt with a clean bill of health. What kind of a society is this that can cure fungus in a 3,000-year-old mummy but can't even cure the common cold?

(signed) Disgusted.

Dear Disgusted: The answer to your question is quite simple. The mummy didn't have the common cold. It had fungus. If it had been suffering from a cold, how do you know society couldn't have cured it? Vintage mummies may not be as resistant to cures as you are.

If my reply seems curt, it is because your phrasing of this query shows a profound ignorance of the proper way to ask disgusted questions. The only approved form for asking questions of this variety is as follows:

"How come a country that can go to the moon can't even cure the common cold?" There are millions of variations. "How come a country that can go to the moon can't even keep the streets clean?" for example. Or, "How come a country that can go to the moon can't even get the mail cross town in less than three days?" Et cetera.

The answer to all these questions is that there is absolutely no correlation between skills required to go to the moon and those required to clean streets or deliver mail, just as there is none between the skills required to cure a mummy's fungus and your runny nose. If all Dr. Omniscient's correspondents asked questions as dumb as yours, the march of knowledge would soon become a sore limp.

Mike Royko

Chicago — This was the scene a few nights ago in the Glenshesk Tavern, a place that sometimes features Irish singers, and is popular among off-duty policemen.

Four men were sitting together and talking at the bend in the U-shaped bar.

Sheldon Waxman, lawyer and former federal prosecutor, was having a drink with a friend a few stools away from the four men.

A few other lone drinkers were scattered down both sides of the bar.

The place was quiet. Waxman recalls what happened next.

The door opened and a little guy walked in, took a seat, and ordered a drink.

A few minutes passed. Then one of the group of four men got up and walked over to the little guy. He was much bigger. He bellowed:

"What are you staring at me for?"

The little guy looked surprised and said: "Huh?"

The bigger guy said: 'What in the f - - - are you staring at me for?"

The little guy, obviously flustered, got off his stool. Suddenly they were pushing and shoving and wrestling around, although no punches were being thrown.

The little guy, clearly being out-tussled, pulled away and headed for the door. As he went out to the street, he turned and shouted:

"I'll be back you mother - - -. Who the hell are you to bother me, you - - -?"

And out the door he went.

Sure enough, he was back in a few minutes. But this time he wasn't alone. He was accompanied by a pistol, clasped in his right hand.

He burst in, waving the pistol, in the direction of the four men, and said:

"You mother - - -, I'm going to kill you."

The four men obviously believed he was sincere. They scrambled off their stools and almost knocked each other down in their rush to get out a back door.

A couple of other customers who weren't even involved hot-footed out the front door.

Waxman said he, too, would have left, but he was too scared to move. So he just sat there and hoped the angry little man would forget about shooting someone.

The little guy shoved the pistol in his hip pocket and said:

"That - - -. Who does he think he's shoving around?"

Then he apologized to the bartender and the other customers for the disturbance, sat down, and resumed having his drink.

Waxman slowly began to relax.

Then the door opened again. This time it was one of the men who had rushed out when the little guy came in with his gun. Not one of the four men who started the whole thing. This was one of the bystanders who had ducked out.

And now he had a big black pistol in his hand. Waxman says it was the most massive pistol he ever saw in his life.

He walked over to the little guy, pointed the gun at the little guy's forehead, and yelled:

"This is a REAL gun. This is a 357 Magnum. That's a REAL f - - - gun!"

The little guy stared at the huge gun and said: "Who the f - - - are you?"

The other guy said: "I'm a cop."

The little guy said: "I'm a cop, too."

The other guy said: "From where?"

The little guy said: "I'm from the 20th District. Where are you from?"

The other guy said: "I'm from Lincolnwood."

The little guy said: "Lincolnwood! Then you don't have any f - - - jurisdiction here. Get your ass out of here."

So the other guy shoved his 357 Magnum into his belt and left.

When Waxman was satisfied that nobody else was going to pull a gun, he got up and quietly left.

Before he did, he noticed one other thing.

"Nobody phoned for the police."

I don't blame them. It might have touched off World War III.

Long-time Malone resident worried

Wants to stay

Lincoln, Neb.

We are Malone area homeowners. Homeowners should be allowed to keep their homes.

About 10% of the homeowners in the Malone area are close to retirement age or have already retired. Most of our homes are paid for and are tax exempt. We absolutely cannot start over buying another home on Social Security income. Some of us get a small retirement income, but it is still impossible to start over again.

My wife is ill with chronic bronchitis and sinus. If every precaution is not taken she will develop emphysema. She must live in an air-conditioned, humidity-controlled, electronic air filtered home. I am sure that there are other people in the Malone area who have their homes prepared, remodeled and maintained for a special purpose as our home is.

We selected and bought this home 31 years ago because it was close to schools, church, grocery store and walking distance from the main part of town.

Careless carriers?

Lincoln, Neb.

Why doesn't the circulation department watch their newspaper carriers?

I have been in several parts of Lincoln and the paper carriers leave the paper wrappers or the wire laying on the sidewalk. The wire could hurt someone.

Some wrappers and wires are stuffed in the storm sewers. There are trash cans. Why don't the carriers take their trash to them?

Let's keep Lincoln beautiful.

L.N.

Editor's note: The circulation department has a regular and ongoing program of instruction for carriers in the proper disposition of wrappers and wires. Additionally, route supervisors make routine checks of all routes in an effort to encourage such proper disposition of waste material.

With 980 carriers, explained the department, it is difficult to guarantee that none of them will ever improperly handle this material.

Warrant needed to open luggage seized in arrest

Washington (UPI) — The Supreme Court ruled 7 to 2 Tuesday that law enforcement officers must get a search warrant before opening luggage seized during an arrest.

Chief Justice Warren Burger, speaking for the majority in a Boston case, said once narcotics agents had seized a double-locked footlocker, it was "unreasonable to undertake the additional and greater intrusion of a search without a warrant."

"No less than one who locks the doors of his home against intruders, one who safeguards his personal possessions in this manner is due the protection of the Fourth Amendment warrant clause," Burger wrote.

Justice Harry Blackmun, in a dissent joined by William Rehnquist, charged that such rulings "make criminal law a trap for the unwary policemen and detract from the important activities of detecting criminal activity and protecting the public safety."

Blackmun said the court should stop making "hairline distinctions" that are litterally impossible for officers to apply in the field, and adopt instead "a clear-cut rule permitting property seized in conjunction with a valid arrest in a public place to be searched without a warrant."

Amtrak officials in San Diego who watched Gregory Machado and Bridget Leary load a 200-pound, double-locked footlocker on a train May 8, 1973, told federal narcotics agents it was leaking talcum powder, often used to mask the odor of marijuana.

When the train reached Boston, a police dog detected marijuana inside the footlocker.

After Joseph A. Chadwick joined Machado and Miss Leary, and they placed the footlocker in the truck of a waiting car, agents arrested all three and seized the footlocker. Without obtaining a search warrant, they opened it 90 minutes later and found marijuana inside.

The three suspects were indicted, but a U.S. District Court and the 1st U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled evidence against them had been obtained improperly and could not be used at trial.

Prices rise, but no so fast

Washington (AP) — Consumer prices went up last month at a slower pace than in April, and the Carter administration said Tuesday it expects further improvements in the pace of inflation in the coming months.

The Labor Department reported prices rose 0.6% in May, down from April's 0.8% pace, as the rise in food prices moderated.

"We consider that improvement to be good," said White House Press Secretary Jody Powell "We expect to see further improvement in the coming months."

Powell called the May figures "a significant decline" from the first four months of the year, and said it shows the administration's projection of a 6.7% inflation rate this year will be pretty much on the mark.

But the Republicans saw it differently, with GOP Chairman Bill Brock calling the price report "more devastating news" and said the figures showed "galloping inflation again in the month of May."

Prices increased 4.8% in all of 1976, but surged at an annual rate of nearly 10% during the first quarter of this year. Prices rose at a 8.4% annual rate in the latest three months.

In January, consumer prices rose 0.8%, followed by a 1% jump in February, a March rise of 3.6% and 0.8% in April.

The administration had said the earlier acceleration of inflation was only temporary, resulting mainly from the effects of the severe winter weather on food and energy prices.

Food prices rose 0.7% in May, about half the 1.5% rise in April. The Labor Department said this was largely due to a 13.5% drop in fresh vegetable prices last month.

Analysts predict a further slowdown in food price increases as summer crops come in, provided farmers have favorable weather.

Coffee prices have begun declining in recent weeks at the retail level, but the drop came too late to be reflected in the May reports. Instead, the figures showed ground coffee jumped another 10.3% in May while instant coffee rose 7%.

In a separate report, the government said real spendable earnings — that is, take-home pay adjusted for taxes and inflation — increased 0.1% last month. Over the year, however, real earnings were down 0.4% because of higher taxes.

Drugs sold as daytime sedatives to be banned; you risk drowsiness

Washington (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration announced Tuesday it intends to ban the sale of drugs packaged as non-prescription daytime sedatives because they cause dangerous drowsiness.

However, an FDA spokesman said consumers would be able to buy the same ingredients under different labels, such as nighttime sleep aids.

"Users of these products run the risk of being drowsy during the day, when they may be operating automobiles or other dangerous machines and need to be alert," said FDA Commissioner Donald Kennedy.

"Given this risk and the absence of any demonstrated medical benefit, there seems to be no justification for the continued marketing of these products," he told a Senate subcommittee investigating non-prescription daytime sedatives.

An FDA spokesman, Wayne Pines, said, "We're not removing the ingredients, we're removing the claim from the labels."

Pines said the brand names of the products could still be used, if they were relabeled as nighttime sleep aids.

Kennedy said he knows of no evidence that the non-prescription daytime sedatives lessen anxiety or otherwise provide sedation other than drowsiness.

There are several hundred daytime sedatives sold over the counter. Among the major sellers are Compoz, Cope, Miles Nervine, Tranquium and Quiet World.

Labeling and advertising for daytime sedatives usually describe them as a "calmative," for the relief of "simple nervous tension," or a "sedative."

An FDA spokesman said daytime sedatives are similar chemically to nonprescription sleeping aids. "The difference is the way they're promoted," he said.

Twins get sentence

Flint, Mich. (AP) — Harold and Darold Burton, who look alike and like to do things together, have matching problems.

Both have served prison terms for burglary and their police arrest records are nearly identical.

Now a judge has sentenced them almost identically.

The Burtons, 24, are identical twins.

Urban sprawl target

Sacramento, Calif. (AP) — A California phenomenon almost as famous as the state's freeways and smog — its suburban sprawl — is drawing fire from state planners.

In a report one official calls a "blueprint for saving California cities," they are recommending controls on suburban-oriented building that has caused the state's metropolitan areas to mushroom since World War II.

The report is the most recent criticism of urban spawl, which has been a prime target of environmentalists who see suburbs posing an increasing threat to California's prime agricultural land.

Critics also say that it's more costly and energy wasteful to provide services for suburbs, which in California often creep out over deserts and mountain areas far from the center of cities.

Prepared by Gov. Edmund Brown Jr.'s Office of Planning and Research, the draft "Urban Development Strategy" contends that continued population growth is inevitable in the Golden State.

But it says much can be done to save open space and farm lands and avoid the severe decay that has hit some older Eastern cities.

"This is a managed growth report, not a no-growth report," said Bill Press, OPR's director. "We do not say stop it, but better manage it."

The plan cites estimates that the state's 21 million population will jump by four million to eight million by the year 2000, with much of that growth in urban areas.

Without controls, the San Francisco Bay urban area is expected to be three times as big in 1990 as it was in 1970. During the same period, the size of the Los Angeles metropolitan area is expected to double.

Both urban areas were five times as big in 1970 as they were in 1945.

In an attempt to slow that expansion, the plan recommends three priorities: Maintaining existing neighborhoods, developing vacant urban land and then developing land immediately adjacent to urban areas.

To carry out its priorities, the plan recommends 46 steps, about half of which require legislative action. The others could be done with an order from the governor or a department head, Press said.

Probably the most important of those is one that would require cities and counties to direct construction to vacant land within urban areas and contiguous to it in an effort to avoid "leap-frog development."

Local government can do that, Press said, "just by the way they exercise their building permits and secondly by which areas they are willing to provide public service — streets and sewer hookups."

Press says he thinks enforcement of such a law should be left to citizens and environmental groups instead of requiring the state to monitor local actions.

"I don't see the role of the state as being the policeman for every local planning decision," he said. He added that cities and counties that did not follow the law would be "open season for citizen or environmental groups who want to take them to court."

Other recommendations include:

— Giving top priority to transportation needs in already urbanized areas.

— Allowing a five-year moratorium on property tax increases for housing rehabilitation.

— Requiring cities, counties and special districts to put greater emphasis on maintenance and rehabilitation of their facilities.

— Boosting taxes on profits made from the quick resale of housing, a step designed to discourage speculation which many officials blame for much of the sharp increase in housing prices.

— Encouraging industry to develop in designated areas and studying the possibility of pooling part of the property tax revenues from such new development among surrounding local governments.

Such industry centers could also help slow urban spawl by discouraging industry from joining the flight to suburbs along with urban workers, Press said.

If boss likes golf, don't play tennis

Minneapolis (AP) — If the boss plays golf, don't take up tennis

If you're a woman, look feminine but not provocative in most organizations

In an ad agency, dress far out but expensive

If you're a bank employe, wear traditional, conservative clothing

Those are some of the tips given by Blaine Cooke, professor of management at the University of Minnesota, on how to make the most of office politics

He and a colleague, Prof. Bruce Erickson, have designed an experimental night course for masters of business administration students and may offer it to day students later

Cooke, a former vice president for marketing with Trans World Airlines, says that sometimes the infighting can cost a person a job For instance, he said, one executive for a major national corporation was credited with much of the firm's success

Cooke said the richest, largest companies often are more political because there is more money and power tied to advancement He also gave these views:

—Companies involved in reorganization and those regulated by government are apt to be intensively political

—Universities, hospitals, schools and government agencies usually have more politics than businesses.

—Highly competitive businesses are less political.

Sagan sure somebody's out there

Ithaca, N.Y. (AP) — Carl Sagan is a pioneer in the search for life beyond Earth He s pretty sure somebody is out there, he has even written messages to residents of other worlds

Sagan is no fanatic who believes flying saucers are about to land The Cornell University astronomer is probably the world's best known exobiologist, or expert in the study of extraterrestrial life

The articulate, long-haired professor in a turtleneck is familiar to millions of television viewers as a commentator on space efforts In a recent interview he said

—The first discovery of life in other worlds probably will be made by radio

—The most likely places to find life in the Solar System are Mars, Jupiter and one of Saturn s moons But we may have to explore one million stars by radio to locate other life

—He is worried about a "dreadful gap" in the space program in the 1980s, because no efforts were planned in the 70s

Even though no extraterrestrial beings have been found, Sagan said this is the most exciting time for an explorer like himself

This is by far the best time to be alive, ' he said "Two centuries from now it will all be discovered It will all be dull In two centuries we will know everyhting about the Solar System Except for a few out of the way places, it will all really be discovered

' Now we don t know We are the only generation in hisotry to start out not knowing to wind up knowing? '

It's important to know if there s life elsewhere in the universe Sagan said insisting it s not farfetched to expect to find thousands of advanced civilizations in the Milky Way alone

Associated Press

Carl Sagan

. he's no fanatic

But no matter how many civilizations might exist, discovery of life elsewhere should not lower its value here, he said The reverence we are taught as children to have for all life has a very good basis The best way to drive that home is to find life elsewhere "

Intelligent creatures from other planets probably would not look much like Earthlings but they might think the way we do, Sagan said "To survive you have to come to grips with the universe as it is "

At 42, Sagan is widely recognized in scientific circles Although best known as an astronomer, he recently completed a book on the evolution of human intelligence, "The Dragons of Eden

A Brooklyn native, Sagan holds four degrees from the University of Chicago He was awarded the Medal for Exceptional Scientific Achievement by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration

Recently, he headed NASA's team that analyzed data from the Viking landing on Mars He also helped select the landing sites And it was Sagan who convinced NASA to include messages in its space probes in case they were recovered by intelligent beings on planets of other stars

Sagan helped design the messages, using mathematical and scientific symbols he hoped would be universally understood

But Sagan said now he is worried about the slowdown in the nation s space program ' At the end of this decade and the beginning of the next decade, we re just not going to be going anywhere, he said "The Soviets have been pretty much alone in exploring the moon since Apollo "

The cost of sending men into space may be too expensive to justify and may not be efficient, Sagan said

"Manned exploration of the moon was a tremendous technological achievement, a credit to the heroism of the astronauts, and, I am sure, a political victory But it is not in my mind, the most cost-effective wav to find out what the moon is about

"Ever since I was a little kid, I wanted to go to Mars and see what it was like Nobody knew I would dearly love to visit Mars and lots of other places But it is not socially conscionable to spend one Viet nam War s worth of money to do it," Saga said

"It's the next best hing to send an intelligent, capable and obedient machine to do your exploring for you, and it's a hundred times cheaper "

An even cheaper way to search the stars for life is the radio waves, he said "We have perfectly adequate technology to receive messages from thousands of light years away That is a distance which encompasses hundreds of millions of stars It is far and away the most effective method we have of detecting advanced civilizations

"But they have to wish to communicate with us," he went on "They have to be sending messages our way, and those are big ifs But the point is that only one has to have that motivation "

So far, scientists have radio-explored about 1,000 stars, Sagan said, explaining that a million stars should be radio-explored before an adequate sample is considered

Meanwhile, Earth has been sending radio waves into space since the beginning of the television era, Sagan said Broadcasts of "Howdy Doody ' reached the nearest star years ago, he said

Sagan has become a popular spokesman for the scientific community in its dealings with the public on complex space issues He says it is important that the public understand scientific issues

There are a lot of borderline, pop pseudo sciences around — I think in part due to the unsatisfied curiosity and a need to understand things which I think science provides, if only it were taught better

"Astrology I've looked at it It doesn t make any sense It is simply wrong There is no data for it Mv feeling is that the survival of the species depends on a tough-minded acceptance of the world as it really is, Sagan said

Clean burning of coal possible

Des Moines (UPI) — Pollutant-free coal burning is a real possibility says Dr V Stephen Krajcovic-Ilok

Krajcovic-Ilok, Washington, said he has developed a process with which he can produce a coal which will burn residue-free

"Under my grinding process, it is possible to remove most of the pollutants from coal including much of the organic sulfur It would make it a form of super-fuel," he said

This "super-fuel ' is obtainable by crushing coal down to 4 microns in size, he said

Carter says he may use veto

Washington (UPI) — President Carter advised congressional leaders Tuesday that he may well have to veto some bills this year, and expressed displeasure over a Senate move to add $880 million to the money bill for the Labor and Health, Education and Welfare Departments

"He said he hoped he didn't have to veto anything this session, but he doubted" he would be able to avoid it, Senate Republican leader Howard Baker told reporters after congressional leaders conferred with Carter

Praising the President for "sort of singing our song" on reduced federal spending, the COP leader said Carter asked Congress "to use restraint" in passing legislation that exceeds administration spending goals

Administrative, interim appointments at UNL are recommended

By Nancy Hicks
Star Staff Writer

Zatechka

Lovitt

Schwendiman

Hedges

Andrews

The University of Nebraska Board of Regents will consider a series of interim and new administrative appointments for the University of Nebraska-Lincoln at the Saturday meeting in Scottsbluff

Douglas S Zatechka of East Lansing, Mich , is being nominated as UNL director of housing effective August 1

Zatechka, who has been serving as associate director of residence hall programs at Michigan State University, holds a Ph D in higher education administration from Michigan State

Zatechka, 34, began his career in student housing as a residence hall advisor at Wisconsin State University in Oshkosh He has served three summers as head counselor for a National Science Foundation residential program for 135 gifted students in natural and social sciences

The author of numerous articles on residence hall operation, he taught a course on the fundamentals of student leadership and leadership management at Michigan State

Robert L Lovitt, UNL comptroller since 1974, will be recommended for an appointment as assistant vice chancellor for business and finance as a part of a reorganization plan

Under Dr Miles Tommeraasen, vice chancellor for business and finance, Lovitt will work in the areas of fiscal and business operations management, including physical plant, personnel-risk management, business management, comptroller, budget operations and analysis and auxiliary enterprises

The regents will also be asked to name Dr Gary Schwendiman as the interim dean of the College of Business Administration and Dr Ned S Hedges as interim vice chancellor for academic affairs

Schwendiman, now assistant dean, earned his Ph D. in social psychology and M S in experimental psychology at Brigham Young University

Current Dean, Ron L Smith, has been named dean of the School of Business Administration at Georgetown University in Washington, D C

Hedges, assistant vice chancellor for academic affairs since 1972, joined the UNL staff in 1959 as a graduate assistant in English He holds a B A degree from Nebraska Wesleyan and an M A and Ph D. from Nebraska

Vice Chancellor Adam C Breckenridge, announced his intention last fall to return to teaching and research in the political science department

Larry Andrews, currently associate dean of the NU graduate college is being considered as acting assistant vice chancellor for academic affairs in place of Dr Hedges

And Russell C Nelson, professor of mechanical engineering, will succeed Dr Andrews as acting associate dean of graduate students Dr. Nelson served in a similar capacity in 1976

The regents will also consider the appointments of four new departmental chairmen

The nominee for chairman of the Marketing Department, is Ira J Dolich, a faculty member at the University of Pennsylvania

Robert H Hurlbutt III professor of philosophy, is being considered for chairmanship of the Philosophy Department in the College of Arts and Sciences

Sheldon Stick, associate professor of speech pathology and audiology, is nominated as chairman of the Speech Pathology and Audiology Department in the College of Arts and Sciences

Robert D Brown, professor of educational psychology and measurement, is being considered for the chairmanship of that department in the Teachers College

Several organizational changes at UNL being proposed to Board of Regents

Some old programs may get new names at the University of Nebraska Regents meeting in Scottsbluff Saturday.

The Regents will be asked to approve several administrative changes including a combination of health with physical education and recreation and abolishment of the Department of Poultry and Wildlife Science, both at UNL

The Nebraska Center for Health Education, which contains both academic teaching and research programs in the public health area, will be moved into a new school of Health, Education and Recreation, under the UNL reorganization plan

The programs will not be changed according to Ned Hedges, assistant vice chancellor for academic affairs, who said that the move was merely an administrative change to put the Center under some UNL structure.

In the past the Center has not been aligned under any college on the UNL campus, though there have been ties with the NU Medical Center, he said

The new school, which will replace the Center and the department of physical education and recreation, will be a part of the Teachers College

Under a plan to discontinue the Department of Poultry and Wildlife Science, the poultry personnel and budget would be merged with the existing Department of Animal Sciences, while the wildlife staff and programs would join the existing Department of Forestry

The UNL administration is also recommending a name change to Department of Forestry, Fisheries and Wildlife under this new plan

This reorganization will eliminate some teaching duplication, reduce administrative requirements and imporve working relationships among scientists according to information given to Regents by the UNL Institution for Agriculture and Natural Resources

Regents will also be asked to designate the state forestry services provided by the state forester through the UNL Department of Forestry as a separate entity

The state forestry program, which includes information and action programs like rural community fire protection tree production and forest pest control is part of NU by state law and the state forester is an NU employe

This program would be called the Nebraska Forest Service and would be a division of the forestry department under the new plan

The new designation will improve state-wide visibility of the program and understanding of the program, according to information supplied the Regents

The Regents will also be asked to approve another merger of five similar programs in the Teachers College under a Center for Business and Vocational Teacher Education

The Center will contain the Department of Business Education, Department of Industrial Education, the office of the Coordinator of Vocational-Technical Education, the Research Coordinating Unit and the office of the Nebraska Advisory Council for Vocational Education

A 10% increase in student fees at UNL and allocation of student fees for both the Lincoln and Omaha campuses is on the Regents' Saturday list

The Regents have already approved $3 50 of the proposed $7 50 increase in UNL student fees for use in paying off the debt on the new Nebraska East Union

The 1977-78 student fee schedule, if approved, will be $70 50, and the $233 475 raised will be distributed among 46 organizations

The $200 500 in student fees at the Omaha campus will be divided among 16 student organizations

Regents will also be approving individual salary increases for alla university faculty and staff The increases, averaging 5½% for faculty and administrative employes and 3% plus $240 for office and service staff will be effective July 1

'Drought' pine tree marketed

Los Angeles (AP) — Garden store sales of fast growing pine trees by the "drought six-pack — and sales to government and business by the millions — could make a jet age Johnny Appleseed of Lloyd Tupper The tree he markets is adopted from an area of the world where drought is the rule

Anywhere rain is sparse and trees are scarce appears to be fertile selling ground for the president of Arizona-based Tupper Tree Farms, who flies out of Los Angeles almost every week to some corner of the world to extol the potential of his special breed of pine tree

He maintains that green vistas, and even forest industries, can be developed rapidly on land where dry and brown are the dominant conditions

Jim Story, a tree wholesaler in Southern California, says that in sales to homeowners, "we had assumed that rapid growth rate of this pine was its strongest suit But the most positive feedback has been on the tree's drought tolerance "

Tupper s trees have the trade name Mondell Pine with a retail cost of $5 to $6 for a 12- to 18-inch tree in a one-gallon container, or about $30 for a larger tree rooted in a seven-gallon container

Strong smog tolerance also is a selling factor, says Story, whose Pomona Wholesale Nursery distributes containerized trees supplied by Tupper Tree Farms of Sedona, Ariz

Up to now, most of the business generated for the Tupper operation has been in the Middle East, not far from the Asian deserts and hillsides where the Mondell pine originated "In Arab countries, which have experienced drought for thousands of years, they are more willing to take a chance on a new tree," says Tupper

Tupper, 37, no relation to the plastic kitchenware family, thinks there is high potential for "creation of a paper and pulp industry in the southwestern United States " He says his variety of pine needs far less moisture than Douglas fir and Ponderosa pine, but grows to maturity two to three times as fast

His firm planted 4 million Mondell seedlings last month When they are lifted in a dormant stage sometime between November and January, most of them are "earmarked for planting in Morocco, Tunisia and possibly Egypt and Jordan," Tupper says

He's also working on sales to Mexico, where "they are using up their trees so fast they won't have a single stand left in 10 years," he says.

Anti-Ericson forces didn't have cabinet votes firmly in hand

Editor's Note: President Sven Ericson, under pressure for his ouster by his political rivals, is forced to disclose that he suffered temporary blindness during his election campaign. Vasily Nikolayaev, Soviet Foreign Secretary who plotted an assassination attempt in which the President was permanently blinded and the head of the Kremlin killed, now has been removed from office in Moscow. Ericson's collusion with the Russians is charged. This is the eighth excerpt from William Safire's "Full Disclosure".

By William Safire

Mike Fong, Secretary of Natural Resources, seated in the West Wing hallway outside the Cabinet room on the day that had already been dubbed "Black Friday" by an expectant press, was not so sure that this cabinet meeting had been a good idea. He had expressed his reservations to Roy Bannerman: the twenty-fivers did not have the votes securely in hand.

Full Disclosure

The positive decisions of four out of six Cabinet members were needed to remove the President. Fong's vote was one. Curtice's vote, to expiate his growing sense of guilt for the Yalta deceit, was a second. A possibility of the third was Emmett Duparquet, the advocate for the President on the last go-around who had been taken for a fool by his client.

But where was the fourth? Not Lucas Cartwright, now in Reed's place as secretary of defense. Not Zack Parker, a forthright Bannerman-hater from square one, who had succeeded T. Roy Bannerman, Ericson's arch-rival, as secretary of the treasury. And Andy Frangipani at human resources, voting his constituency of the handicapped and the compassionate, was an Ericson stalwart.

"Where's the sense in it?" Fong had asked Bannerman. "If we go in and lose again, Ericson will fire me for sure, along with anybody else who goes against him. Then what hope do we have?" Fong was not looking forward to losing his government job, Bannerman's private guarantees notwithstanding.

"Impeachment, for one," Bannerman had replied. "That's what they impeached Andrew Johnson for — firing a cabinet officer. We'll need every legal ground we can find, if it goes impeachment. Firing you after an abortive 25th Amendment move would be a fatal mistake for Ericson. We have to force him to make mistakes."

For ten days, the Ericson administration had been under a bombardment in the press, in the Congress, and now in the courts, with this morning's indictment of presidential aide Mark Hennessy following Arthur Leigh's testimony, Bannerman inspired, before a grand jury. Suicide, scandal, cover-up, international blundering, deceit, deceit, deceit — the polls showed the American people were fed up with Ericson and his mess. They were no longer sorry for him — after all, hadn't he had brought on his own blindness? Mike Fong was convinced any normal man, under those pressures and with an ounce of patriotism left, would resign.

But Ericson hung in there, politically paralyzed, and stubbornly paralyzing the country. Nichols was no bargain, Fong thought, as the vice president appeared in the hallway for the 4:00 p.m. meeting, but at least the country could operate. Ericson in office was like having no president at all.

"Shall we have another go at it?" the vice president said, leading the others into the room. Nichols took his place at the table, opposite the empty chair of the President's; as the other chairs were filled, Fong was startled to see a strange face sitting

Pagan, Burma (AP) — With water buffalo carts and the same kind of primitive labor that built it centuries ago, the Burmese government is trying to restore this earthquake-damaged city to its ancient Buddhist grandeur. The project is being financed by donations from a faithful poor.

More than 5,000 monuments rest on 32 square miles of hot, thirsty plain in central Burma, many dating back to a time when there was "no America and the English were eating raw meat," as one Burmese official put it.

About 1,000 of the structures were damaged or destroyed in an earthquake on July 8, 1975. Deep fissures and cracks ravaged the foundations of temples as old as 900 years. Thousands of square feet of priceless wall paintings crumbled. The tops of towers housing Buddhist shrines broke off.

Hardly had the earth settled when work crews appeared to take emergency measures and people throughout the country offered meager savings and family jewels to help pay for the restoration work.

The neutralist policy of the government of Gen. Ne Win prevents the Burmese from asking for foreign financial help.

A United Nations cultural officer in Bangkok, Thailand, says the restoration effort has been impressive, given the primitive tools and Burma's impoverished economy. But it also has been slow and the Burmese admit that for the foreseeable future only those temples regarded as having special religious, historical and archaeological value can be worked on.

"The salvage of these monuments, which are exceptionally important . . . is a duty for all mankind," wrote Pierre Pichard, working more than a year ago for the U.N. Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO). He surveyed the damage in late 1975 and recommended equipment be provided the Burmese on a bilateral basis or through UNESCO.

Britain, The United States, Australia, Japan and West Germany were subsequently solicited but Burmese archaeologist U Bo Kay said that thus far the only foreign assistance received has been one Land-Rover from the West Germans.

UNESCO's director-general, Amadou-Mahtar M'bow, who visited Pagan last month, later told reporters about his organization's desire to help and talked about Pagan's heritage to the world but came out with no concrete international aid project.

The carts hauling bricks and mortar and men hoisting a bucket to the crumbled top of the famous Shwezigon Pagoda with a pulley wheel seem more like the builders of the 11th century than restorers of the 20th.

But working under a special government committee, the 250 or so laborers and supervisors already have patched up sizable portions of the most famous buildings, sealed wall cracks and taken initial steps to strengthen foundations. The government has set aside some funds for the project and voluntary contributions, many from religious groups, have amounted to 4 million kyat ($570,000), a considerable sum in Burma.

A.J.C. Bone, who has spent most of 30 years studying Pagan, argues that UNESCO's 1976 aid proposals are unrealistic. In a country where even getting a simple spare part for a car is a major task, the cranes and other mechanical devices suggested by UNESCO for the repair work would soon stand idle.

Bone, an Englishman who became a Burmese citizen, suggests that with no modern infrastructure available, a truly comprehensive restoration of Pagan would require a fleet of vehicles, repair shops, new roads, possibly computers and a large number of foreign experts.

President's opponents argue urgency

in treasury's chair Not Zack Parker, the replacement for Bannerman, but a tall, pasty-faced man he had not met.

"Meeting will come to order," said the vice president.

Lucas Cartwright immediately said "the meeting is out of order until the secretary of the treasury arrives."

"I'm informed that Secretary Parker has been taken ill," said the vice president. "Severe attack of gastroenteritis, which he has suffered from for some time. Since there is no deputy secretary as yet, sitting in his place is the under-secretary for monetary affairs, Albert Hay."

Cartwright argued that the meeting be laid over until the following Monday. The vice president said the meeting could not be postponed without the consent of the calling member, which Fong would not give.

"I suspect foul play," Cartwright said dramatically. "There is going to be at least a suspicion in the public mind that Secretary Parker's food was tampered with. That will cast a shadow over whatever dicision is taken here, especially since it is being railroaded through with such unseemly haste."

"It wouldn't kill us to wait until Monday," said Fragipani, "out of respect to Zack Parker. After all, Zack has never even been to a Cabinet meeting."

"I move the question," said Fong. Why hadn't bannerman told him about the new man, Hay? Was this why Bannerman was so ready to call the meeting, knowing that Parker would be sick? Was Cartwright right about foul play? Fong was just as glad he didn't know.

"Would the attorney general give us a legal opinion?"

Duparquet shrugged it off. "IF Mike doesn't want to accept a delay, that's it "

"I don't," said Fong, "because there is an urgency. Just this morning, to cap off an incredible series of revelations, the President's chief of staff has been indicted on six counts of perjury. The government is in paralysis. The President is not in a condition to act "

"The attorney general presented the case for the President last time," said the vice president.

"I'll defer to Secretary Cartwright," said the attorney general "He was chief of staff and knows the President's condition better than any of us."

"What are the charges?" Cartwright demanded.

Fong, feeling more confident each moment, said "There is only one 'charge,' as you put it That is, the President of the United States is unable to fulfill the functions and duties of his office "

"I would like to hear from the attorney general," said Cartwirght. "No evidence has been presented to show the medical incapacity of President Ericson. The burden of proof is surely on the one who makes such a motion."

"Actually not," said Duparquet painfully "This is not an adversary proceeding. The amendment does not say anything about a 'reasonable doubt ' It's a matter of the judgment of the men here assembled."

"You mean they could take a normal, healthy president, and with no evidence, declare him disabled and replace him with the vice president?"

"They would surely not, nor was that the intent of the legislation," the attorney general said. "But theoretically, they could If the President objected, he has a remedy in law — he could ask for a reinstatement by the Congress "

Fong looked at Cartwright, pale, shaking, as that good man looked across the table at Duparquet. "Does the attorney general wish to repudiate all he said at the previous meeting of this cabinet?"

"My evidence repudiated me," said Duparquet. In a resigned tone, he ticked off the reasons why he was deserting Ericson· "I told the cabinet last time that no voter could anticipate an act of God, and there was nothing in Ericson's record that would have led the voters to believe he was more prone to blindness than anybody. I thought that was the truth, but it was false. Perhaps someone voted not to remove the President on the basis of that lie. I feel the need to correct that now."

"I move the question," said Fong

"Wait " Cartwright looked desperate, nearly ill "Would everyone just wait one moment, to consider with great solemnity the enormity of the deed we are discussing? History does not deal kindly with regicide You are striking down a president — a president, gentlemen For the first time in more than two centuries, a small group of men is taking the most awesome powers on this earth from the elected leader of our people and deliberately handing it to another man "

"If we are wrong," said Curtice, "the president has recourse in the Congress If we are right, and do not act, the people have no recourse "

Fong looked at the vice president, who said "To the vote to remove the President The secretary of state "

George Curtice said, "I vote Yes "

"The secretary of defense "

Cartwright said wearily, but in a strong voice: "I vote No "

"The treasury secretary."

Albert Hay said, "I did not think this was a decision I should make myself, so I reached Secretary Parker in the hospital just before the meeting Treasury votes No "

Fong couldn't believe it The last-minute substitution for Parker, the Bannerman-hater, was not a Bannerman ploy The treasury secretary must have just been taken ill, that's all there was to it, and nobody in Bannerman's camp had a chance to work this undersecretary over

"I withdraw my charge of foul play," Lucas Cartwright said mildly

'Yes " Thank God we didn't try to pressure him, Fong thought, this is one of those guys who responds badly to pressure Two to Two We're dead We need four, and that would leave it to Frangipani

"The secretary of natural resources."

"Yes,' said Fong to his own motion That's twice he voted on this, and the first time to strike the President down He cast his vote with the certainty that it would cost him his job.

The secretary of human resources "

'Yes," said Andy Frangipani

Silence. "A vote of 'Yes' is a vote to remove the President," said Lucas Cartwright, as if perhaps Frangipani did not understand

"I know," said the Big Flower, with no expression. "The vice president is now the acting president."

Nobody knew what to do next Finally, Duparquet said to Nichols, "Mr Acting President, you have the power to veto the action taken this day by this cabinet Do you choose to exercise your veto?"

"No," said Nichols

"Then I would advise you to declare this meeting . ."

"Wait," said Cartwright again ' In the light of the vote, I would like to propose that we give President Ericson the opportunity to step aside voluntarily, under the provisions of the 25th Amendment Perhaps that would be more seemly "

They all looked at Fong He knew that Bannerman would expect him to stick the sword in the loser, to make certain that the world knew Ericson was ejected from office against his will "I think that s a compassionate suggestion, Lucas I have no objection Why don't you go see if that's what President Ericson wants, and he can put it in the form of a handwritten note to the secretary of state "

Cartwright left the cabinet room by the door that led toward the Oval Office The rest of them sat there, saying nothing, for three minutes Cartwright returned, a note in his hand, looking oddly cheered·

"President Ericson has given me this message 'Earlier today, I turned down an offer to purchase the presidency Now I am turning down your offer to let me resign the presidency. The deed you have done this day — to usurp my constitutional power — will link your names with Benedict Arnold. I will fight your action in the Congress until the powers of the president are once again in the hands of the person the people elected to that post ' "

After a moment, Nichols said, "He isn't disputing our right to take this action, is he?"

"No," said Cartwright "But he has ordered a mattress to be brought to the Oval Office If you want the President off the premises, Mr. Acting President, you're going to have to throw him out "

Days full of beer and baseball

Postcard

By Stan
Delaplane

San Francisco — These are the summery days of beer and baseball. (And Anita Bryant's people say San Francisco is a "cesspool of sex"?)

I bought a six-pack of Anchor Steam beer yesterday. Iced it up and drank it, feeling all-American, heterosexual and other good things approved of by the voters of Dade County, Florida.

Having cleaned up Miami, Anita Bryant is about to zero in on the Golden Gate. The gay community is up in arms. And even the sad straights are feeling a shiver of anticipation.

When the Bryants cast their thunderbolts, the innocent may be slain with the guilty.

"Stand up and be counted." A gay groupie carried the sign up and down in front of City Hall. It's a challenge.

☆ ☆ ☆

Steam beer began in the days of gold in the golden West. (When all men were all man, man. If you believe what they say.)

It can be brewed without refrigeration. Thus it became the prime brew of the Gold Rush latter days.

Now they give courses — and credits — in brewing in some of our better colleges.

"Nobody offered me course or credit in beer making," I told the children. "I had to learn by myself."

This was the Prohibition era. And while many of the young beer makers had no taste for the brew, we knew a home chemistry trick or two. We took over and made it for the grown-ups.

It was powerful stuff. Oh, we added a few touches to the recipe. A few raisins here. A little more yeast than the instructions called for.

☆ ☆ ☆

This material was easily purchased. You bought a five-gallon stone crock. And you bought a lot of sugar and a can of malt.

You mixed this up with plenty of water and a few cakes of yeast.

Next morning, your mixture was covered with a head of brownish foam.

You could watch the stuff work. Little yeasty bubbles rose on the surface and went pop!

After about 10 days, you siphoned this all off into bottles. We bought beer bottles and a capper and caps.

You let it stand for two weeks and you had beer.

You had beer but it took plenty of nerve to open it.

The blooming stuff often turned out explosive. You would be sitting around peacefully, thinking of ways to ease off the homework.

Up in the attick, the brew would reach a pressure point. Bang! Bang!

☆ ☆ ☆

Well, this is exactly what we were looking for. A certain excitement. It was the extra yeast or the extra sugar made the critical mass.

"If you put in too little, the beer was flat," I said.

"Put in too much and bang! It didn't blow the cap. Blew the whole bottle."

☆ ☆ ☆

It took a lot of nerve for people to open our beer. The question was would you get the cap off before it blew up in your hand. It was like pulling the pin on a grenade.

Anyway, just as I was getting educated to be Mr. Rheingold, the people elected Mr. Roosevelt.

The first thing he said was that beer with 3.2 alcoholic content was not alcoholic at all. Therefore it was legal. Some people said how could it be alcoholic but not alcoholic. But Mr. Roosevelt just said who was President if he wasn't? And don't obstruct justice.

So the breweries went back to work. And the last of the homemade beer blew up. And the glass was swept up. And our education was over.

Mennonites settling on Texas plain

Seminole, Tex. (AP) — The men toil in the fields, urging crops from the West Texas plain. The women dress plainly and wear no jewelry. The children do their lessons in a one-room ranch house school.

And these pioneers of 1977 speak German. The 600 Mennonites left homes in Mexico and Canada last fall and bought more than 7,500 acres in Texas near its border with New Mexico.

They weren't looking for a new life, said their bishop, Henry Reimer, rather a return to their traditional way of life.

"This is why we come to Texas," the leader of the Old Colony Mennonite Church said. "To get back to the old ways and to keep the kids on the farm and keep their German."

The Mennonites are Protestants, using a German version of the Bible. Mennonites began arriving in this country nearly 300 years ago, settling first in Pennsylvania and later in the Midwest. The larger Mennonite Church, with headquarters in Pennsylvania, lists about 100,000 members in this country.

Texas' new settlers said they hope to bring thousands more to the vast property.

In addition to crops, the colonists have begun a dairy herd and plan to build a cheese processing plant, machine shops and a furniture factory.

Seminole's mayor, Bob Clark, said the Mennonites are welcome. "They take care of themselves, control their children and they are work-oriented," he said. "And for that reason, I am glad they are here."

Dwayne Herman, president of a bank in Seminole, said, "The only negative comment I've heard is that they might not spend as much money here because they are self-sustaining."

The Mennonites have said they will pay local taxes, although they could claim a religious exemption for their church-owned land, until they build their own school system.

Bishop Reimer said he hopes Texas will provide the right atmosphere for the Mennonite children to "learn like we grew up."

"We have to work for our kids — what else do we have to work for? In the Bible it says we should keep them in their mother's language," he said.

In the small schoolhouse, the children (ages 6 to 13) sit on wooden benches, the boys on one side, girls on the other. The Bible is the only textbook. Lessons are in German, with English a second language.

Police forbid women to dress

By Jim Camden
Star Staff Writer

A 23-year-old former Lincoln woman testified Tuesday in federal court that five local law enforcement officers burst into her apartment and forced her and her roommate to remain partially undressed while being questioned.

Cindy Sue Cavender, currently of Portland, Ore., told a jury of five men and one women in U.S. District Court that on the night of July 28, 1975, she heard a dog barking outside her home at 3063 T St. As she started down the stairs inside her apartment to check on the dog, she saw a flashlight shining through the window. She heard the door being broken in as she was running back upstairs.

Miss Cavender testified she was wearing only a T-shirt at the time. Her roommate was wearing a T-shirt and panties.

Law enforcement officers entered the apartment and ordered the two women to go downstairs.

"There was a rifle looking right at me," Miss Cavender said. Both women asked to be allowed to dress, but the officers refused, she said.

Miss Cavender is suing Lancaster County sheriff's deputies Joseph Splichal and Kenneth Jackson, Lincoln policeman Ron Tussing and Nebraska state patrolmen Ron Osborne and Gary Garidori for violating her civil rights. She has asked for whatever damages the court will grant.

One of the main questions to be decided by the jury is whether the officers knocked on the door and announced their presence before kicking in the door. The officers had a valid search warrant, but it was not a "no-knock" warrant.

Miss Cavender and Miss Childs testified that they did not hear the officers knock, even though there were no radios or television on that would have prevented their hearing it.

Earl Garnas, 68, of 3069 T, testified he was outside on that night near the women's apartment when he saw two men "scamper" up the sidewalk in front of the home.

"The man in the suit opened the screen door and the man in the light shirt lunged at the door and went through," Garnas said. He added that he did not hear the men call out before entering.

Under questioning from attorney Richard Sievers who is defending Tussing, Garnas said he was not hostile to law enforcement officers.

But Sievers introduced a 12-year-old letter from Garnas to the Lincoln Police Department offering "$1,000 to the man who successfully blasts the police station." Over objections from Miss Cavender's attorney, Patrick Healey, U.S. District Court Judge Warren K. Urbom allowed the letter to be entered as evidence.

"I guess I must've been drunk then," Garnas said about the letter, and added he was not hostile to the police when the incident occurred.

Another important point in the trial is whether Miss Cavender's rights were violated when she was forced to remain partially undressed while being interrogated by Deputy Splichal.

Both girls testified they were told they could not get dressed until the apartment was searched. Both also testified that the officers were courteous and did not make any lewd comments during the search.

On that raid, the law enforcement officers were looking for drugs that recently had been stolen from K-Ray Pharmacy. They had conducted a raid earlier that night at 745 Washington and arrested six persons.

All five policeman testified they knew the warrant was not a no-knock warrant.

The two women were taken to the police station after the search, but later were released with being charged. None of the drugs from the pharmacy burglary was found in the apartment, although Miss Childs did have some marijuana in her room.

Job rate might shut off funds

By Nancy Hicks
Star Staff Writer

Lincoln may lose $1 million in federal money because too many residents have jobs, George Chick, city urban development director, told members of the Lincoln City Council and Board of Education Tuesday.

Without success, the department has tried to gerrymander neighborhood lines to come up with a 4,000 neighborhood population and an 8.5% unemployment rate — the requirements for spending the public works money — Chick said.

The two government groups met to discuss mutual problems ranging from future parks to slower speed limits over coffee and breakfast toast Tuesday morning.

Subcommittees were set up to spend more time on several areas including drug and alcohol education, counseling in junior and senior high schools and Lincoln Electric System (LES) in lieu of tax payments.

City administrators want to rewrite the city charter eliminating the skyrocketing in lieu of tax payments LES pays to government subdivisions.

Under the current city charter, 5% of the LES gross revenues are divided among the city's taxing districts. As utility prices rates have soared so have these payments.

The LES payments rose by 25.4% in 1975, by 34.3% in 1976 to more than $1.6 million. The school board, with the largest mill levy in the city, gets the lion's share of this money.

City administrators would like to see the dollar amount of the payments frozen at a specific amount, said Mayor Helen Boosalis.

The perennial question of lowered speed limits in front of schools was given the perennial answer by Dick Erixson, director of public works. Lowered speed limits are not effective in reducing speed and do not lead to fewer accidents. Traffic safety education and practices are the answer, he said.

Other items included:

— School owned land at 40th and Adams St. can fit into city plans for a neighborhood park in that area.

— Coordination between school districts and the city on urban developments occuring outside the city are needed.

Common OKs funds for agencies

By Gordon Winters
Star Staff Writer

Pastor Jerry Dunn didn't even get a chance to show his pretty chart.

In fact, he had barely settled in his chair when the show was over and his request for $30,000 to operate the People's Mission emergency family shelter was approved.

The speedy action was enough to produce smiles all around as the City-County Common reviewed requests for tax funds by 10 agencies outside government in a two-hour, 40 minute session.

In all, the common approved spending $699,163 on the agencies next year. What portion will be borne by the city and what will be borne by the county has yet to be decided.

The sum tentatively granted the agencies is an increase of $45.447 over that granted the same agencies last year, but it is $199.981 under the amount requested by the agencies.

Most of the decisions were in line with the recommendations of a joint budget committee, which had pared the budgets earlier in lengthy sessions.

Two agencies received pleasant surprises, however, when the common voted to add money which the committee recommended cutting.

Benefiting from the common's generosity was the League of Human Dignity, which received an additional $8,000 after executive director Steve Slaikeu said an expected $14,000 federal grant had fallen through.

Also getting an additional $7,829 was the Lincoln Indian Center. Sikyta suggested the amount be restored to give new director Marshall Pritchard a vote of confidence for his improvements in the center's operations.

In another move which might lead to changes in an alcohol and drug treatment "independent center" at Lincoln General Hospital the common voted that the Lincoln Council on Alcoholism and Drug (LCAD) study the possibility of moving the center's administration from the hospital to the City-County Health Department.

The common also voted to extend funding for the LCAD community awareness program for two additional months at a cost of about $4,500 while a federal grant is sought.

The committee also backtracked on two decisions postponed earlier and approved a $46,175 budget request for the Human Services Department and turned down a $8,226 request from the Region II Crime Commission.

Decisions made during the session are not final and separate action must be taken by the council and county board. Voting were County Board members Jan Gauger, Bruce Hamilton, ,Bob Colin, council members Joe Hampton, Dick Baker, Bob Sikyta, Bob Jeambey, Steve Cook, John Robinson and Mayor Helen Boosalis. Councilman Leo Scherer was absent.

Listed below are the budgets approved by the common, showing the amounts budgeted last year, compared with the amounts tentatively approved for this year, followed by the names of the officials who voted against adoption of the budget, if any:

Bryan Mobile Heart Team ... $60,000 ... $60,000.

Family Service Association ... $42,551 ... $42,551, Baker, Sikyta.

Houses of Hope ... $47,905 ... $47.095.

League of Human Dignity ... $11,614 ... $19,000, Baker, Jeambey.

Legal Aid Society ... $50,248 ... $40,740, Colin, Baker, Sikyta.

Lincoln Action Program ... $50,000 ... $0, Hamilton, Robinson.

Lincoln Council on Alcoholism and Drugs .... $52,984 ... $39,463 (plus extension of community awareness).

Lincoln Indian Center ... $19,500 ... $28,302.

Full Circle ... $159,037 ... $181,000, Sikyta, Colin.

People's City Mission ... $30,000 ... $30,000.

Southeast Nebraska Health Systems Agency ... $11,084 ... $11,804.

Youth Service System ... $152,464 ... $198,938.

Lawsuits pending against 400 water polluters

Washington (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency said Tuesday that more than 300 industries and 100 municipalities face probable enforcement actions such as lawsuits for failing to meet the forthcoming July 1 deadline for cleaning up their water pollution.

The agency refused to identify specific industries or municipalities before enforcement actions actually are filed against them.

With the July 1 deadline only days away, a new EPA policy of stepped up enforcement was announced at a news conference by Thomas C. Jorling, designated but not yet sworn in as assistant administrator for water and hazardous materials.

Under the 1972 water pollution laws, industries were required to apply the "best practicable" techniques to reduce discharges of pollution into the nation's waterways by July 1, 1977.

Municipalities were required to apply "secondary treatment" — essentially filtering and disinfection — to sewage discharges, or more stringent treatment measures where necessary to protect water quality.

Jorling said, "Significant progress has been made in cleaning up the nation's waterways. As proof of that, we expect that only about 600 of the approximately 4.000 major industrial dischargers will fail to meet that deadline.

Laetrile proposal rejected

San Francisco (AP) — The American Medical Association rejected Tuesday a proposal that Laetrile be made available without a doctor's prescription, saying that could "open the floodgates of quackery."

An AMA committee had recommended to the organization's House of Delegates that by advocating over-the-counter sales, doctors could avoid being asked to prescribe the substance.

Some people claim Laetrile combats cancer, but most physicians believe it is worthless.

Instead of the recommendation, the AMA's policy-making body adopted a statement that said, "It is the position of the American Medical Association that Laetrile is a substance which has no proven value as a drug."

The committee had not ascribed any value to Laetrile, and its chairman, Dr. Alfred J. Faber, said, "We thought we were taking away the profit motive from the people who sell Laetrile."

However, Dr. Jack Schreiber objected that such a position could be misunderstood by "the lay press and headline writers."

"The danger would be that the public would then understand that we had somehow lowered our standards on Laetrile," he said

Federal scientists say animal tests have shown repeatedly that Laetrile has no effect against cancer tumors, and the Food and Drug Administration has banned it from interstate commerce. The American Cancer Society also opposes any exemptions for Laetrile.

The substance is extracted from apricot pits, peach pits and bitter almonds.

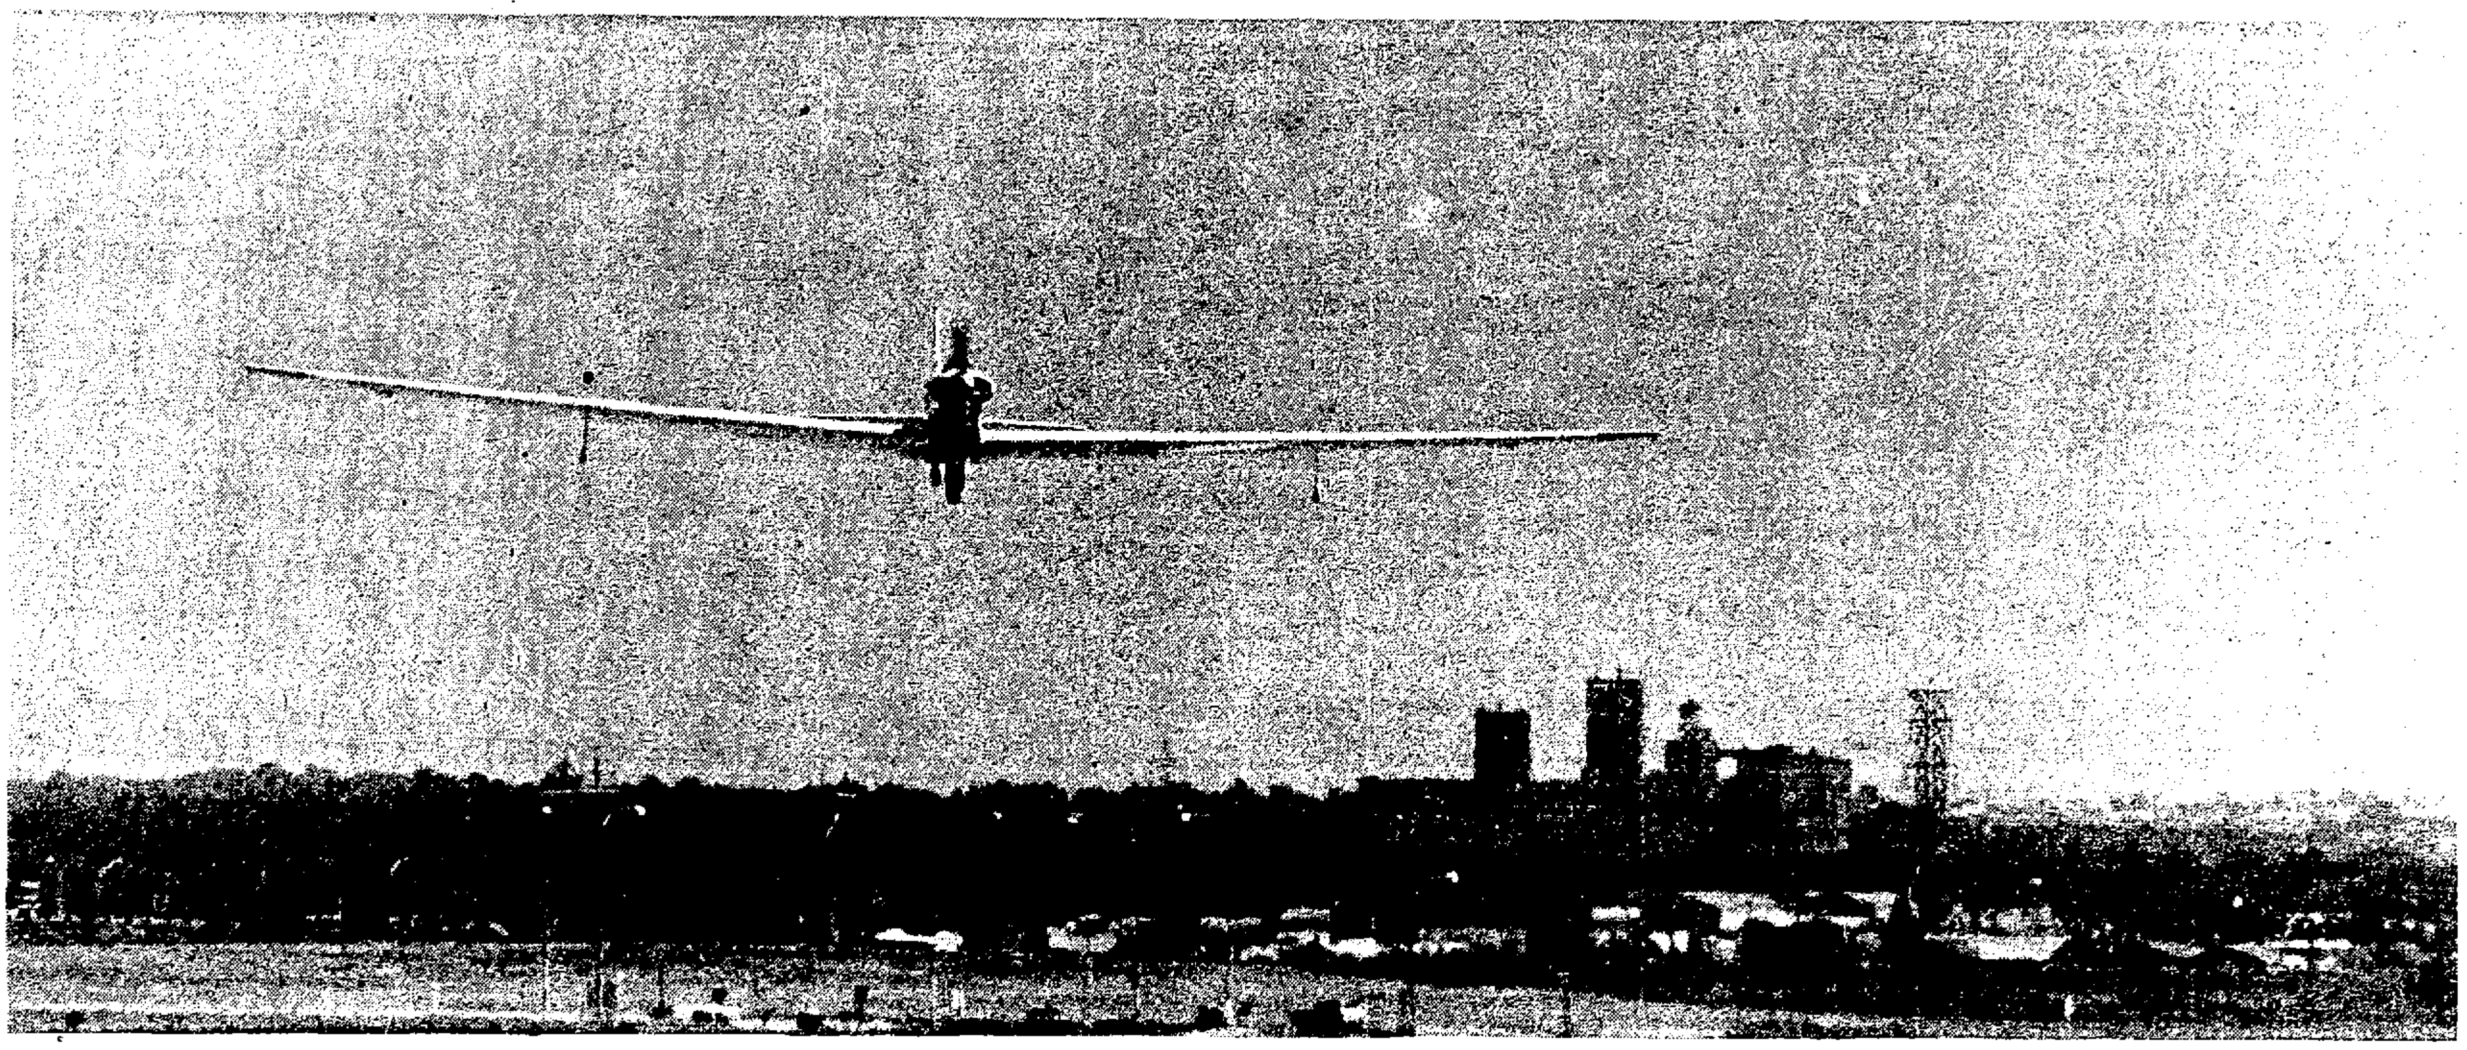
Sailplaning thrill —soaring on air

Sailplane flies over Branched Oak Lake.



The altimeter read 3200 when the propeller in front of Glenn Hattan slowed and finally became motionless.

Time to panic? No. Time for fun. Time for Hattan to match wits with the elements to keep the motorized sailplane aloft.

He craned his neck, looking up at the bottom of the puffy cumulus cloud blowing along a few hundred feet above us.

"Now we're riding without any expense," said the vice president at Commercial Federal Savings and Loan.

He purposely positioned the craft beneath the small cumulus cloud. A developing cloud of that type is a signal that warm air has risen into the colder air above.

Rising warm air, a thermal, is what sailplane pilots look for. By staying in the rising air, a sailplane gains altitude.

Hattan banked from side to side, practicing the sailplane pilot's art of locating the invisible lumps of warm air rising. The only sound was the whoosh of air slipping past the clear plastic cockpit of the two-seater sailplane.

For 15 minutes Hattan guided the sensitive craft. At one point the sailplane was 300 feet higher than when the engine was switched off. When it was time to return to Lincoln Municipal Airport the craft was only 200 feet lower than when the soaring began.

Sailplane pilots have stayed aloft without power for more than 50 hours. The distance record is more than 900 miles and the altitude record is 46,000 feet.

• • •

The Frelin Soaring Club, of which Hattan is a member, is a name coined by combining the names of Fremont and Lincoln. Five of the 10 members live in Lincoln, five in Fremont.

There is room for two more in the club, said Hattan, who is treasurer. President is Ed Weaver and vice president is Duane Funk.

To join, a person must invest $2,000. Dues are 20 per month and flying time is charged at the rate of $12 per hour the engine is used. (Hence, Hattan's comment, "Now we're flying without any expense" when he turned off the engine.)

• • •

The club sailplane is a German-made Sportavia RF5B Sperber, powered by a 68-horsepower Limbach engine, which is actually a modified Volkswagen car engine. It costs $32,000 when new. The club's was purchased used for $24,000.

It has a wingspan of 56 feet, compared to the 25-foot wing span of an ordinary single-engine light plane. The Sperber weighs only 1,040 pounds.

Some sailplanes are so efficient they travel about 40 feet for each foot they sink. For comparison, a single-engine light plane travels about 10 feet for each foot it sinks.

The Sperber travels about 27 feet for each foot it sinks, which puts it in a relatively high performance class, according to Hattan.

• • •

"Thermals are usually only about a hundred feet in diameter," according to Hattan, and the pilot's skill is measured by his ability to extract the most lift out of that pocket of air.

Aboard the sailplane over northeast Lincoln, Hattan pointed out the concrete and sand of the Burlington Northern railroad shops as the sort of terrain that heats air and causes it to rise in columns or bubbles.

Black fields and stubble fields also generate thermals, Hattan said. Water and green fields are no help to the soaring pilot. High in the air, however, air currents become confused and the source of the rising air is often unknown. "There's no one sure thing that guarantees you'll get it," Hattan says of clues to a thermal.

Boy came home a man

By Patricia Hughes

Write-On

The spatter of raindrops on the wide expanse of concrete runway grew to a roar as the rain came down faster and harder. My heartbeat seemed to keep pace with it as the time grew near for flight 416 from the West Coast to arrive As I watched the darkening sky, waiting for my first glimpse of the plane, I remembered the night some three months ago when my son left home.

It was a dark, cold Sunday evening as we waited for the bus which would take him away from home and hearth to meet whatever the future had in store for him. He tried to bluff his way past the Fear, which stood shoulder-to-shoulder with him and tried to push it's way past him, as he shifted from one tennis shoe-shod foot to the other, fingering the already limp bus ticket in nervous hands He laughed a little too loudly at comments which the rest of us really didn t think were funny and it seemed to echo back, also too loudly, from the big room of the depot

All too soon the bus for Omaha, Des moines and points East pulled into the station. Tears formed in the eyes of his little sisters who didn t want him to go A friend gave him a handshake, two boys trying to be men, and then growing up was momentarily put aside as they threw their arms around one another. Embarassed at their lapse of dignity, they parted An arm around mom, a quick kiss and he was gone

The house was too quiet without him the first few weeks Too much food was cooked as I was used to trying to fill the always-empty stomachs of four teen-age boys and now I had only three I hadn't realized just how much food one fairly thin teen-ager can consume. Slowly we adjusted to life without him although there was always a void which couldn t really be filled, even by the letters we received, read and re-read until the next one came

Now he was coming home. I knew he would have changed and I wasn't at all sure I was ready for what he might have become. I was eager to see him — as eager as the brothers, sisters and friends who were also watching the skies with searching eyes — but I was a little afraid, too After all, he was my first-born, the little guy I had depended on so much to be the man of the family, and he was the first to leave the nest and try his wings. Had he been successful in this first attempt? I would soon know the answer.

Suddenly a cry arose from the crowd around me. The blinking lights of the plane had broken through the cover of dark clouds and the rain slackened as if on purpose as those two winks became a tiny plane which grew larger and larger and finally approached the runway. My heart jumped into my throat and tears welled up in my eyes. He was home at last!

Impatiently we watched the now huge silver plane taxi up to the building. A ramp was driven up to the door and a blue-clad stewardess took her position beside the open cavity from which people carrying various bags, boxes, etc. were starting to emerg. Anxiously our eyes watched the stream of passengers as we searched each new face, looking for a sign of something familiar to us.

There' Was that him? Was this the long-haired boy, always dressed in blue jeans and tennis shoes, who had left me; this neatly dressed young man who walked so tall and erect, his hair neatly trimmed and his shoes shined, eyeing the crowd as if looking for someone — was this my son? It was! Pride rose inside me as I watched him stride across the runway, making his way through a small knot of people, carefully avoiding a collision with a small child who darted from her mother's reach.

As he reached the waiting group the tears rolled down my cheeks and I hugged him gratefully. This was my boy; no, this was my son — he was a man. He was more than that — he was a United States Marine and from the pride in his eyes, he was as proud of it as his mother was — and is.

Negative-sounding mother needs some understanding

By George C. Thosteson, M.D.

To Your Good Health

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My mother, who is 91, lives with us. For the past seven years she has lived in a negative world. Her mind is rational and excellent except that everything is viewed negatively and she utters ugly remarks.

It begins to affect my children and my husband and our relationship to each other. Mother is loved and wanted (although she denies this to all). I could not sleep at night if I had to put her into a nursing home.

Isn't there a drug on the market that would make her see the happier side of life, one that would not injure her? I am literally at wits' end.—R.C.

Tranquilizers might quiet her down and perhaps make her see the "happier" side of life, but I wouldn't go on record as favoring them for her. For one thing, tranquilizers are notorious "maskers" of real ills.

Before you push any panic buttons, have your mother examined for possible nutritional deficiencies These are not uncommon among very elderly persons Diet or vitamin supplements often correct the situation.

Too, there can be a subtle circulation impairment, and there are medicines to improve that. Perhaps what your mother really needs is a massive dose of TLC (tender, loving care).

Negative personalities usually reflect insecurity or anxiety At 91, she should be allowed some eccentricities. I'm sure you will agree When she gets overly negative, avoid arguing Just toss it off with, "Oh, I don't think you really mean that," and let it pass. The children can be taught to understand, and I'm sure your husband can learn to forgive an elderly mother s outbursts

Dr. Thosteson welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters Readers' questions are incorporated in this column whenever possible.

Health Tip

Heat exhaustion and heat stroke are both by-products of too much time in the sun. Heat exhaustion is more common. Its symptoms are pale and clammy skin, a weak, rapid pulse, and complaints by the victim of weakness, headache or nausea. The victim may have cramps in the abdomen or limbs.

Move the victim to a cool place, but protect him from chilling Have the heat exhaustion victim lie down with head level to, or lower than his body. Give him salt water (one teaspoon of salt to one quart of water) to drink if he is conscious, and call a physician.

Hot, flushed skin and a strong rapid pulse are symptoms of heat stroke. The victim is often unconscious.

In cases of heat stroke, call a physician first, then cool the victim's body by sponging it with cold water by cold applications. If the victim is fully conscious and can swallow, give the above salt water solution, do not give alcohol in any form, and keep your cool.

Powder is good martini

Seattle (AP) — It's a powder much like those which turn into soft drinks or juice when you add water — but this powder could make a powerful martini.

Federal and state government officials say the powder isn't legal now. But investors here and in Portland, Ore., hope to get approval to market it in pouches which will produce popular cocktails, beer and wine

"People aren t going to expect Mouton Rothschild out of a sack but they won t be disappointed " says Mike Hill, a Seattle public relations man and marketing chief for Global Marketing Services

"One of my dreams has been to open a package like Kool-Aid and beer come out of it

Sato Food Industry Co., located near Nagoya Japan, holds patents on the process which traps alcohol in the powder form Sato says the raw powder contains up to 30 per cent alcohol by weight

Sato has sold the powder in Japan as an additive, used in jellies chocolate and foods enhanced by a liquor taste The Japanese say they haven t used the powder for beverages because liquid liquor is readily available

Individual health plans can be shock

It's Your Money

By
Jane Bryant Quinn

New York — Every year, millions of Americans who felt safe from medical bills — thanks to their group health plan — suddenly lose that insurance. Overnight, and without guidance, they have to find a good individual or family plan. It's hard to imagine this happening to you, but here are some of the ways you could be left out in the cold:

(1) You could lose your job and not find a new one right away, or leave your job and try a business of your own. (2) You might be a woman formerly covered under your husband's plan who lost her insurance because of separation or divorce. (3) You're a young person grown too old to be included in your parents' plan, but aren't working for an employer with group coverage. (4) Perhaps you took early retirement, and have to wait several years before qualifying for Medicare. Many other things could happen, as well.

If you were paying little or nothing for your group coverage, the price of comprehensive medical insurance will be an awful shock

The cost of Aetna Life & Casualty's comprehensive policy for a middle-income couple aged 35, with two small children, runs $908 a year in North Dakota, $1,021 in Washington, D.C., and $1,255 in San Francisco.

When you're looking for coverage, there are four main avenues to explore. (Even if you're not in the market for a plan right now you might want to clip and save this information, because you never know when you're going to need it.)

—Is group coverage really out of the question? Your employe plan may not be the only group available to you. Some trade, professional and fraternal associations offer group health plans, which may not be as comprehensive as your employer provided but at least offer the advantage of a group rate. Take a minute to think about all the groups you could join and ask if they have health plans.

If you've started your own business and it employs someone besides you, the company qualifies for group coverage (even if the two employes are you and your spouse). But note: Rates on group policies are assigned according to the type of business, and some businesses are more expensive to insure than others. If you've started a fast-food place, for example, you might find it cheaper to insure yourself individually rather than under a group plan.

—What about the Blues? Anyone shopping for individual or family coverage should certainly get copies of the policies for Blue Cross (for hospital bills) and Blue Shield (for doctor bills). The Blues often provide the largest number of health services for the dollar.

Some plans, however, don't have major medical insurance for prolonged and expensive illnesses.

Generally speaking, you will turn to other insurers for more extensive coverage than is available from the Blues, or for less-expensive, limited-coverage policies.

—Which private insurer? The companies are all so different you'll have to compare their policies point by point. There's simply no substitute for a good health-insurance agent who isn't tied to a particular company. He is familiar with the policies of several companies, and can help you choose the best one for you. If you're uninsurable, the company that carried your group plan is generally required to offer you an individual policy.

Not many companies offer comprehensive health plans for individuals. Three leaders in this area are Aetna, Prudential Life Insurance and Washington National. But many other companies do provide major medical insurance, which is less expensive. This kind of coverage leaves the less-expensive illnesses to you, but protects against health problems that are serious and prolonged.

—What about hospital indemnity plans? These pay a certain number of dollars for each day you're in the hospital, but the amount is generally so low that the policies won't do for primary coverage. You might buy one, however, to supplement other hospitalization insurance. Travelers Insurance Co. has a new indemnity policy that offers broader benefits, and other companies may follow suit.

Be warned that this branch of the industry has been plagued with tricky clauses and misleading advertising. Be sure to know exactly what you're buying.

Dentist travels often to take care of horses

Fairview, Pa. (UPI) — Horses, like people, need dentists.

That's where Dan Propes comes in. He's one of about 200 equine dentists who service the teeth of horses from coast to coast.

"In my opinon, a horse's teeth and his feet are the most important things that must be sound before he goes into training," Propes said.

A native of Detroit, Propes trained horses for nine years before becoming a horse dentist

Because his speciality has so few practitioners, Propes works in Maryland and Kentucky in addition to handling horses at Pennsylvania tracks.

Propes said he picked up a lot of knowedge from Dr. Alex Harthill, a Louisville, Ky., veterinarian, who was called to New York in an effort to save the life of Ruffian, the outstanding filly who broke down in a match race with Foolish Pleasure.

"One thing about horses, they don't get cavities," Propes said "But their teeth are growing all the time and they get abscesses."

Propes said he is called upon from time to time to extract a horse's teeth.

"It's not an easy job," he said. "The knack is how to do it without getting hurt."

From his dentistry, Propes has a large collection of bracelets and necklaces made from horses' baby teeth and the caps of their regular teeth. Some people in racing consider such trinkets good luck.

"If that's the case," said Propes, "I should have been wearing one of them the day I got kicked "

It happened last March, when Propes was serving as an assistant starter at a track. A horse kicked him in the stomach, sending him to a hospital.

"They told me I stopped breathing twice in the hospital," he said. "I don't remember the name of the horse, but he might just as well have been Joe Frazier "

Land, not people, prevails

By Jim Camden
Star Staff Writer

Book Review

There are some books in which one person is the most interesting character. In other books, two or three or more characters share the spotlight.

But the star of Colleen McCullough's "The Thorn Birds," is not a person at all — it's the continent of Australia.

Anyone who thinks Australia is nothing but aborigines, kangaroos and koala bears should read "Thorn Birds," to get a lesson in geography while reading an absorbing novel. The plot centers around a family of Irish immigrants, the Clearys, and a local priest who tries very hard at remembering his vows of chastity but fails.

The Clearys take over one of the largest ranches in Australia on land that would make the Sandhills look like a rain forest. From the 1920's to the 1960's the father and eight sons run a large, profitable sheep ranch, and the single daughter manages to tie herself to an unhappy marriage.

But before long, it becomes apparent that the land runs the ranchers, and not the other way around. The demands of running 250,000 acres sap the family to the point that thy can really do nothing else.

"Thorn Birds" is a sad book in two respects. First, there seems to be a tragedy around every corner and little unbridled joy in the story. One son leaves home and winds up in jail, two others go off to war, there is a drought, a fire, and a depression. But such is life, and in these respects Miss McCullough does a good job of story telling.

But the book is also sad because although it is good, it is not as good as it could be. The author understands the land, she understands her three women characters and she seems to understand Ralph de Bricassart, a Catholic priest caught between his church and a woman.

But she does not lend enough understanding to the other men in the book. Instead, she tends to lump them all together as well-tanned workaholics who have nothing on their mind but tending sheep. Anyone who doesn't fit into that mold she adroitly kills off or banishes from the land.

This may not be a major flaw, however, for those men are really only minor characters. And Miss McCullough does an excellent job of conveying the major character — the continent — to the reader. From the grasslands to the rain forests to the tropical islands, the reader gets a feel for the land which in turn gives a feel for the people.

This Australia without aborigines and boomerangs (there are none in the book). It's the Australia of large cities, small towns and large ranches, of sheep and sugar cane.

After a short five weeks on the best seller lists, "Thorn Birds" has moved to the number one spot which gives an indication of how well a book about Australia can succeed in America.

Opening lead - four of diamonds.

Assume you're East and partner leads the four of diamonds. You cash the K-A, West playing the three on the second round. You now know that partner started with five diamonds, declarer therefore with two. What would you play next?

You could make the lazy man's play of a spade at this point, but, if so, you might have some explaining to do to partner after declarer took the rest of the tricks.

South would win the spade and play the A-K of clubs, learning that you had four trumps to the jack. It would then be easy for him to enter dummy with a heart, return a trump, trapping your jack, and so take the remaining tricks.

Oddly enough, the proper return at trick three is a low heart! This has all the earmarks of an insane play, but it is the right play nonetheless.

Let's consider the bidding first. South is sure to have 5-5 or 6-5 distribution for his bids, and it therefore cannot harm you to lead a heart into dummy's A-Q. The heart trick you bestow upon declarer will be of no earthly use to him, and at the same time it may do you a world of good.

In the actual case, your generosity pays off very well. No matter which way South turns, he cannot make the contract. He loses a trump trick even if he stands on his head.

Furthermore, the heart return is likely to stop the contract even if West has a low club instead of the ten. Declarer would be unlikely to attempt a finesse at trick four if he had the A-K-Q-10-x

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Whoever invented the CB radio sure invented a road monster. My husband, a once law-abiding citizens, now gets into his car, turns on his CB and starts looking around for other CB antennas. He then identifies the color and make of the car and asks if they have their "ears" on.

Next he gets a "front door man" and a "back door man" so he can exceed the speed limit without getting caught by a "Smokey" or "bubble gum machine" (police).

Meanwhile, everybody else with a CB is speeding, looking for road buddies and driving with one hand on the wheel and the other holding a speaker. By the time we've reached our destination I'm exhausted.

We just returned from one of those "fun" weekends, and I am ready for a straitjacket. Four hours over and four hour hours back with breakers 1 to 9, and that's it for me.

Before my husband got a CB we enjoyed a leisurely drive listening to soothing FM music. No more!

Next time I'll stay home. My handle?

STEAMED BEAVER

DEAR BEAVER: Don't sell the CB'ers short. When you need help on the road you might have a long wait before a Tijuana Taxi (sheriff) or Smokey (police) happen by, but those guys in the 18 wheelers (big trucks and trailers) are great in a 10-33 (emergency) situation.

DEAR ABBY: Please settle a debate between by gentleman friend and me.

I just turned 28, at which time Jim informed me that I am now an "old maid."

Jim's definition of an old maid is any woman who is 28 and single, regardless of whether she has been previously married.

My definition of an old maid is a woman who is 30 and has never been married.

Which of us comes closer to your definition?

I am a divorcee, so even though I am unmarried at age 28 I do not consider myself an old maid.

Answer in the paper. The loser owes the winner a dinner.

LINDA

DEAR LINDA: Jim owes you a dinner. (P.S. The term "old maid" went out with the buttonhook. I prefer "unclaimed jewel.")

African play aimed at U.S. conscience

[illegible] Calif (AP) — For [illegible] observer recent [illegible] demonstrations [illegible] United States ties to [illegible] South Africa are [illegible] disruptions

Sebetso Maredi, a black playwright in self imposed [illegible] South Africa hopes [illegible] will blossom into [illegible] of national outrage [illegible] opposition to the Vietnam war eventually forcing American businesses from Africa s southern tip

Aided by a repertory company [illegible] fellow countrymen Maredi has begun a [illegible] to prod America s conscience

Their play "Survival" is currently on a nationwide tour With offbeat harsh satire it portrays life in a nation where [illegible] million whites dominate 18 million blacks

I saw the kind of news South Africa was selling to people on the outside Maredi said in an interview between performances here explaining [illegible] he chose to travel thousands of miles to [illegible] this country [illegible] what I m doing here [illegible] in the [illegible]

Most of the play takes place in a prison cell Early scenes depict how a new inmate is brutally initiated when cellmates refuse to indoctrinate him to prison practices

They finally tell him "Say thank you Bass (boss in Afrikaans) when they hit you

It is concentration-camp humor The audience titters but in the end must ask itself how funny are slaves' jokes about massa ?

For a time one of the prisoners is set free and returns to the checkerboard life at home where no one jumps from the black squares to the white

He is so dismayed by the racism he confronts that he asks authorities to put him back in jail "for doing nothing

On his return he and his cellmates decide to take on the system ' We ve decided to resist to make a grab for the light at the end of the tunnel they proclaim

James Bertholf chairman of the Theater Arts Department at Orange Coast College in Costa Mesa Calif discovered the production last year on a visit to South Africa

Maredi 35 claims he will never return to South Africa but insists I will go back to Azania the name blacks have given their homeland

After an appearance this summer in Baltimore the group plans to resume the tour in the fall with a swing through East Coast campuses

Murder counts dropped against Omaha couple

Omaha (AP) — First degree murder charges against an Omaha couple were dismissed Tuesday after alleged eyewitnesses to the beating of Harold Hay refused to testify at a preliminary hearing, a deputy Douglas County attorney said.

It was the second time first degree murder charges in the slaying of Hay, who was found beaten and bleeding in an abandoned cattle chute May 19, have been dropped.

Two teenagers who had been jailed more than two weeks, charged with murder, were freed early this month after police said eyewitnesses implicated two other persons.

The two arrested at that time, Homer and Joyce Smith, had been in jail until Tuesday, when the murder charges against them were dropped at a preliminary hearing in District Court.

Deputy County Atty. James Jansen said the charges were dismissed because of insufficient evidence. Homer Smith was released from jail but Joyce Smith is being held on an unrelated misdemeanor charge, according to jail officials.

The hearing had been continued from Friday, Jansen said.

Jansen said three persons he described as eyewitnesses to the slaying of Hay "refused to cooperate. Our hands are kind of tied without the cooperation of any witnesses."

Jansen said County Atty. Donald Knowles had talked with one of the alleged witnesses "and the witness refused to talk. He said he was going to deny any statements he had given police."

Jansen said notices to appear at the preliminary hearing had been sent to the three alleged witnesses. "All you can do with a subpoena is get them in court," he said.

He said he "presumed" police homicide detectives would continue the investigation.

Hay, 38, was found bleeding and unconscious in an abandoned cattle chute in South Omaha and died the next day without telling police what had happened.

Authorities have theorized that Hay was lured to the cattle chute by a prostitute, beaten and robbed. Hay reportedly had the reputation of carrying large amounts of money and was believed to be due to receive a large inheritance from his father's estate.

But authorities said he was carrying less than $100 when he was beaten.

A week after his death, two youths were arrested and charged with killing Hay. They had been in jail without bond when the Smiths were arrested and charged.

Today's children are Santa believers — poll

Lucy Benjamin, Nebraska Wesleyan University psychology department head, has found that more children today would teach their own kids to believe in Santa Claus.

Nearly 900 Lincoln fourth through eighth graders in 14 schools were surveyed to see how their views matched those of Lincoln children surveyed in 1896 by a student of UNL professor Harry Kirke Wolfe. The study was found in an extinct UNL education journal.

The survey was duplicated and Benjamin enlisted Weslean graduates Rosalie Hall and Jacqueline Langeley to help.

One sixth-grade daughter of missionaries said Christmas is more for sharing that for giving. She said she was shocked when she found out Santa is fictitious. "If you can lie to me about Santa Claus, you can lie to me about God," she said.

A fourth-grade boy thought his parents were Mr. and Mrs Santa when he saw them in the living room shadows with presents. "I was very sad to find out the truth," he wrote.

It was found that more children today than in 1896 said it disappoints kids if they learn there is no Santa Claus.

Yet, Benjamin found that about three-fourth of today's children said they would tell their children there is a Santa, compared to half to two-thirds of the children survyed 81 years ago.

The survey also revealed that more children today learn from their parents that Santa is not real. In 1896, they learned from other children

Fewer kids today, only a third to half, think Santa is the supernatural type who can shinny down stovepipes, eat cookie and read letters. More kids now see him as an actual man, generous and kindhearted.

The survey showed, Benjamin said, that children's attitudes haven't changed much in 81 years.

Home inspected for gas leak before explosion

Omaha (AP) — The owner of a South Omaha house that was destroyed by an explosion and fire Sunday said Metropolitan Utilities District (MUD) workers inspected his home for a gas leak more than two weeks ago.

James Wiggins said he called MUD after smelling gas but workmen inspected the kitchen and told him nothing was wrong

David F Barber, spokesman for MUD, confirmed that MUD employes were at Wiggins' home June 2. He said they checked the kitchen's gas range and found nothing wrong with it

Fire officials have not ruled that the explosion was caused by a natural gas leak. Capt. Don Brunken said he will wait until MUD completes tests at the house before he rules on a cause.

Wiggins, his wife and their children were on vacation when the explosion occurred.

Crounse lived on the rails.

McCool Junction — If the railroads of yesteryear had been run like today's Amtrak, "We'd all be driving a horse and buggy," according to John Crounse, retired railroader.

Crounse, 77, practically grew up in the Burlington railroad yards in Lincoln, in the days of lanterns, steam engines, and zephyrs that lived up to their name.

"I put in six months with the MOP (Missouri Pacific Railroad) in Kansas City back in '22," Crounse said, "but then I was broke."

He wound up in Lincoln in March that year and "walked about two miles to the yard office (on West O) and asked for a job. The boss told me to go see the doctor, and I was hired," he added.

Switchman Crounse managed a 40-year career with the railroad, retiring in 1962. During the latter years he was also an Otoe County farmer, "mostly on nights and weekends." He bought a place near Douglas in 1956 and managed pasture, cattle and round trips to Lincoln until his retirement.

He moved to McCool Junction that year, in an effort to stay in touch with the farm, he said.

During his railroad years he survived, among other things, the railroads' first attempts at electronic communication.

The yard master brought four walkie-talkies into the yards and they tried to use them to put a train together — switchmen giving instructions to the engineer to back up, or pull forward.

"After about an hour he (the yard master) came up to me and told me to get my lantern and go back to the old way," Crounse said.

He doesn't deny that modern technology has worked some wonders for the railroad. "You know, they can push a button in Hastings and get the train to pull onto a siding in Fairmont. That's really something," he added.

Crounse had an opportunity to ride Amtrak from Denver to Lincoln several years ago, and decided that the railroads aren't what they used to be.

"We got started late, they refused to put on another car to handle an overflow of passengers, and during one of the stops they took our car off completely, and we had to hunt for our overcoats. We finally got into Lincoln at four in the morning," he said.

In the days of the Zephyrs (from the Greek for west wind) they used to travel at "more than 100 m.p.h. across the Plains," Crounse added. "They can't even keep 'em on the tracks now."

Crounse remembers the day when it took him 25 minutes to add a passenger car to a train in Lincoln. He had to call Omaha to get clearance and then wound up hooking up the car himself.

"I really got chewed out for the delay," he added, something which should be done today, "considering how often the passenger trains run late."

Crounse also has some ideas about routing coal trains around Lincoln, a topic of some controversy in recent months.

"They don't have to run all those trains through the old Russian Bottoms (now the South Salt Creek neighborhood). They could build some new track out west (near the Burlington switching yards on West O) and route some of them up north and around east," he said.

He is sure enough of his plans that he added, "I wish some of those fellows in Washington would ask me what I think."

But, Crounse isn't ready to tackle the railroads. "I'd rather mind my garden and play the ponies now and then," he said.

Crounse owns seven lots, and all of the land that isn't covered by house and garage is in garden. Beans, corn and peas take up most of his time now, but occasionally he gets off his tractor long enough to drive his Cadillac to Grand Island's Fonner Park.

"I had to borrow $2 from a friend (during a recent track visit) byt I won $500 on the race," he grinned.

Crounse also keeps an eye on the growth of the small York County community of 260. "They're building a new $90,000 park and the grain elevator is building a new addition," he said.

But Main Street, albeit quiet, hits a dead end against the Blue River. "They don't even have it (the dead end) marked and I'm afraid some guy is going to run off into the river some day," he added.

Chadron tax gains 2nd-round OK

Chadron (UPI) — The city council Monday night gave second-round approval to a proposed 1% sales tax ordinance that is vigorously opposed by business interests.

The council had scheduled a final vote July 5 but postponed it until July 18 to allow more study.

Chamber of Commerce Manager John Gericke, presented poll results from 100 of 250 chamber members. The results showed a 2 to 1 plurality against the sales tax.

On his ballot, one chamber member urged the council to "cut out programs and not commit retail suicide."

The second-round approval vote was 4 to 1, with Councilman Ron Busch casting the lone nay.

Proponents have argued the sales tax is necessary because of inflation and a potential $9,000 loss in federal revenue-sharing benefits.

If the tax is approved, Chadron would be the fifth — and smallest — city in Nebraska to levy one. The others are Omaha, Lincoln, Bellevue and North Platte.

Smith's opinion of OSHA unchanged

United Press International

Rep. Virginia Smith, R-Neb., Tuesday said a meeting with Dr. Eula Bingham, new director of the occupational Safety and Health Administration, has failed to change her thinking about the federal agency.

"I am very concerned that she will continue to oppose any exemption for farmers and ranchers from the OSHA regulations, even though she (Bingham) admitted it was very difficult, if not impossible, to conduct on-farm inspections," Mrs. Smith said in a news release from her Washington office.

Mrs. Smith said Dr. Bingham told the task force on the reorganization of government that she was surprised to learn that only seven-tenths of 1% of the OSHA budget was used for education efforts.

"She also stated that many OSHA health and safety inspectors are inexperienced and have little knowledge of practical application for the various rules and regulations," Mrs. Smith said.

She said Dr. Bingham also indicated that OSHA has responsiblity to offer small businesses assistance and consultation.

Grand Island (AP) — The Mid-Nebraska Community Mental Health Center board has approved an increase of about 5% for the center's 12-county operating budget. The $554,000 budget proposal for fiscal 1977-78 represents a $26,000 increase. Final action on the matter will come at a Friday meeting of the Region III Mental Health Board.

Official fined for assault

Omaha (AP) — Robert P. Dworak, a member of the Papio Natural Resources board was fined $25 in Municipal Court for assault and battery. He pleaded no contest to the charge in connection with a May 13 incident in which a bicycle rider said he was forced off the road, beaten and sprayed with Mace by a man he identified as Dworak.

Pope commends Boys Town

Boys Town (AP) — Pope Paul VI has commended Boys Town for remaining faithful "to the vision of Father Flanagan" the institution said Tuesday. The pope "is especially pleased with the recent support given Boys Town for the scientific study of adolescents' psychology, in particular, the program located at the Catholic University of America," according to a letter sent to Boys Town Director Father Robert Hupp by the U.S. Apostolic Delegation in Washington D.C.

College begins energy moves

Kearney (AP) — Kearney State College will use smaller light bulbs, take longer vacations, stay cooler in the winter and warmer in the summer as well as renovate some of its buildings under a three-phase energy conservation play announced Tuesday. College President Brendan McDonald said the plan will encompass all areas from "the most elementary conservation steps to levels of increasing sophistication."

Committee wants a peek

Omaha (AP) — A committee has recommended that the Douglas County Courthouse cornerstone, seated since 1908, be opened in September as part of the formal dedication of the new plaza connecting the courthouse with the new City-County Building. John Goodsell of the Douglas County Public Affairs office suggested after the inspection that the cornerstone be replaced with additional recent historical items.

Discharged men are rehired

Hastings (AP) — The Adams County Board of Supervisors voted Tuesday to hire three men who had been discharged by the sheriff and to turn over to them operation of the county's ambulances from the courthouse. Dick Wenske, Ken Catlin and Jerry Grinstead had been fired by Sheriff Robert Anderson in April after a dispute over whether the ambulance service should be separated from the sheriff's office. The board voted May 27 to separate the service.

Residents will get pay for dead trees

Omaha (AP) — The Norris Public Power District intends to compensate residents for trees and shrubs mistakenly poisoned when district crews spread a herbicide along roadsides to kill trees which interfere with power lines.

District officials said they have received about 25 complaints, mainly from persons in Lancaster County, but with some from Gage, Jefferson and Saline counties.

Norris General Manager Glen Schmieding said district employes and an independent authority are investigating each complaint to determine if it is valid and to assist in reaching a settlement.

He said compensation will be in the form of replacement trees, money or other aid.

The Norris Public Power District Board also reported it will consult with state wildlife and environmental officials before applying any more of the herbicide along roadways.

The district spread pellets of Tordon 1 OK along about 4,000 miles of the 4,500 miles of line it operates. Schmieding said some workers inadvertently laid down excessive amounts.

The State Department of Environmental Control and the State Game and Parks Commission investigated, along with Norris, when citizens complained of dying trees and bushes and possible water contamination.

An investigator says no water contamination was found.

A spokesman for the Nebraska Public Power District said NPPD makes limited use of Tordon 1 OK, but has had no problems with it.

Flood control project receives public support

Central City (UPI) — The 45 persons attending a public meeting showed "near unanimous support" for the proposed $3.4 million Silver Creek watershed flood control project, according to Ron Bishop, Central Platte Natural Resources District manager.

Bishop said about 400 farmers are involved in the 90,000-acre drainage area in Merrick County.

"The main concern of the individuals in attendance seemed to center around whether fencing would be required to keep livestock away from the channels," he said. "There seemed to be a considerable amount of concern that the fencing would make the grazing of pastures unfeasible and would provide hardship on the landowners."

Bishop said a representative of the Omaha consulting firm which devised the plan told the farmers that, if flatter slope sites are put on the channels, grazing without fencing could be permitted.

The Central Platte NRD will take formal action on the proposal at a meeting Thursday night in Grand Island.

Hastings power group has closed session

Hastings (AP) — The Hastings Power Supply committee met for just over two hours in executive session Monday night negotiating contract agreements with the engineering firm Sargent and Lundy of Chicago for Hastings' planned power plant.

Committee chairman Dennis Mullen said no final decision was reached and that it would be premature to give any dollar amounts of the contract.

Following the closed session Bill Beavers, a representative of financial consultant Chiles Heider of Omaha, outlined the official statement to be provided for bond sales to finance the coal-fired generating plant.

Beavers estimated that the earliest date the city could enter the bond market would be four to five months.

He said before entering the market, the committee must consider fuel, design, costs, permits, environmental regulations and site selection to determine if the bonds are economical to ratepayers.

He said work must begin as soon as possible on the necessary licenses, permits and environmental procedures.

Unity among veterans sought in proposed bills

Associated Press

An effort will be made to unite veterans organizations behind a package of legislation to be presented to the 1978 Unicameral, the commander of the Nebraska Veterans of Foreign Wars said Tuesday.

Wayne Andersen of Stuart said he hoped "to present a strong case to the legislature, through a series of bills, that will see to it that veterans don't have to come begging every year."

At the top of Andersen's list of proposals will be one to increase the Veterans Aid Fund by "at least $2 million," he said.

Late in the 1977 session, senators rejected a proposal to increase the $10 million fund by $1 million, Interest from the fund, administered by the state, is used to help needy veterans, Andersen said.

Andersen is working with Neligh Sen. John DeCamp to help put the proposed legislative package together.

"They came in at the eleventh hour in the last session and there really was no way we could help them," DeCamp said. "Between now and January 1 I think a program can be worked up that can win legislative approval."

Andersen said the effort "will need the support of every veterans organization," and said he would try to organize the VFW, the American Legion and other groups to support it.

"The principal in the Veterans Aid Fund can't be touched, only the interest can be used, and inflation is eating it up," he said.

"We would like a program that would automatically make what you could term cost of living increases, or whatever, in the fund automatically," Andersen said.

The fund paid more than $500,000 to needy veterans in the last year, he said.

"We also would like to see part of the Norfolk Regional Center devoted to the care of veterans," Andersen said. A bill aimed at that goal was stalled in the last session.

"I would hope the entire area of veterans legislation could be re-examined next year," Andersen said. "But we have learned that we have to make ourselves heard and that is what I'm going to be working at."

DeCamp said he hoped a series of joint veterans group meetings could be arranged, "so that we can get a picture of what the veterans need and want, and get those bills off the ground early in the next session."

"I want veterans to show up for committee hearings and I want every senator to be aware of what the veterans want," DeCamp said.

Douglas County valuations hit record

Omaha (AP) — Douglas County has a record $94 million increase in personal property valuations this year, Lois Callahan, personal property director and chief auditor in the assessor's office, said.

The valuations increased to $650 9 million this year, she said Tuesday, and could climb higher after audits are made on some businesses.

Much of the valuation increase was in business inventory, which climbed by $50.9 million to $339 million, Mrs. Callahan said.

She credited publicity about the "assessor's air force" in large part for the increases

"I'm certain it made some businesses file more accurate reports," she said. "I plan to be out again Jan. 1, 1978, not only by air, but by land"

Last Jan. 1 Mrs. Callahan flew over the county in a plane, taking photographs of feedlots, auto dealer lots and other businesses which had considerable inventory. The pictures were compared with personal property reports filed by the businesses.

Top level salary raises OKd

Omaha (UPI) — The Douglas County Board Tuesday approved a $225,000 salary increase package for 66 top bracket and professional employes.

The 12.9% increase in the wage package, effective July 1, matched that given earlier to other county employes covered by union contracts.

Commissioner Richard Fellman objected to the raises because he said nine of the employes involved earned more than $25,000 annually.

"We are more than matching private enterprise," Fellman said.

However, Commissioner Michael Albert responded, "show me a private hospital administrator who is paid only $39,000 and I'll give you a bucket of apples."

None of the county employes received wage increases last year because of the county's fiscal crisis at the time.

Millard board eyes different school systems

Omaha (AP) — The Millard School Board decided Monday night to start a study concerning alternative school systems, to be presented to the board by January for possible implementation by September of 1978.

Discussed most frequently at the meeting were the traditional system and the free or new school system.

Dr Robert Ackerman, a board member, said he "favors the concept" of alternative systems in a rapidly growing district like Millard.

He said he doesn't think "the basic school is a bad option at all," but many parents may prefer free schools where students have more options about what they study.

Job·doesn't give theft immunity

Omaha (UPI) — Al Veys has proven even being mayor of Nebraska's largest city won't prevent someone from attempting to make a fast buck.

Veys told police his car was parked at the University of Nebraska-Omaha parking lot Monday when someone stole his police radio antenna off the trunk.

Veys valued the antenna at $25.

Exon firm, assessor clash over tax matter

Omaha (UPI) — The Douglas County Assessor's Office said Tuesday a firm controlled by Gov. J. James Exon failed to comply with personal property valuation requirements for its Omaha office.

Lois Callahan, chief auditor and personal property director, said the J.J. Exon Co. was sent two forms asking the amount of inventory and office equipment on hand at its office at 7397 Pacific St. and both forms were returned and marked "not applicable."

Mrs. Callahan said the assessor's office has estimated the value of the equipment at $75,000 and whatever the value ends up being, Exon's firm will be assessed a 50% penalty because it failed to voluntarily file a valuation report.

Exon owns a majority of stock in the company, but hasn't taken an active role in it since being elected governor.

In Lincoln, the firm's accountant-controller, Dale Lilyhorn, said the firm keeps all its inventory and equipment in Lincoln and pays taxes in Lancaster County.

"We don't have any inventory in Omaha, we don't have any warehousing there," Lilyhorn said. "If they sell a machine, we pick it up in Lincoln and deliver it."

However, Mrs. Callahan called the firm's Omaha office and was told the firm had a copying machine on hand and could deliver it immediately.

"If they have someone answering the telephone in Omaha, they have at least a chair and a desk," she said, "and those are not listed under office equipment."

Lilyhorn said "there may be one or so copy machines" in the firm's Omaha office but "I can't say for sure."

"But if there is," he said, "then it is reported in Lancaster County and we pay taxes there."

Mrs. Callahan said state law requires the tax be paid in the county in which the equipment is located.

If Exon's firm fails to prove to the assessor the value of its Omaha office equipment is different than the $75,000 estimate, it will be billed for an estimated $2,750 in taxes in November, Mrs. Callahan said.

Proposed G.I. school budget gets early O K

Grand Island (UPI) — A proposed $10.4 million Grand Island School District budget sailed through a public hearing Monday night without opposition.

Albert Stelling, Chamber of Commerce Tax Committee chairman and the only person to testify, praised the school district administration for doing a "fine job" in assembling the budget which is up 7.6% from last year.

The school board is expected to vote on the proposal during its July meeting.

Dr. Cliff Dale, school superintendent, said because of more revenues from several sources, including state aid, the increase in local taxes for the proposed budget would be $84,000 or about 1.4%.

The total mill levy will be 60.5 mills, a decrease of more than 6 mills from last year. Dale said the mill levy figure was based on an estimated tax valuation of $113 million.

The largest single category in the budget was an estimated $6.3 million primarily for salaries, an increase of 7.5% over last year.

Rains flood lowland areas

Heavy rains spread across central and western Nebraska Tuesday, leaving extensive lowland flooding behind.

The Little Blue River at Ayr overflowed onto Highway 74 Tuesday night and was carrying a heavy load of water.

A flood warning was extended until Wednesday morning for persons living along the river from Ayr to Hebron, with the river expected to crest at DeWeese early Wednesday at 12 feet.

Portions of the Crystal Lake area were under water and some of the minor streams that feed into the Little Blue had backed up and some overflow had occurred.

Afternoon showers were steady over the southeast portion of the state, as the rest of the storm activity drained out from the west.

Severe sewer and street flooding problems were reported in Hastings. City engineering crews placed barricades in northwestern parts of the city where water was reported near some residential doorways.

A weather observer at Crete in the southeast said that town received 3.16 inches of rain from 9:30 a.m. Tuesday to 12:20 p.m.

Some of the other heavier precipitation reports included 1.20 inches of rainfall in Garland, 1.36 inches at Hickman and 1.72 inches at Nebraska City.

Nebraska City received 1.40 inches of that total in a 40-minute period. Other rainfall reports showed 1.50 inches at Nelson, giving the town a total of 2.81 inches since midnight, and 1.26 inches at Roca.

University of Nebraska at Lincoln agriculture engineering Professor William Splinter said the rain "really takes the pressure" off farmers who irrigate and will probably delay the need for irrigation until about July 4, the normal starting date.

He added though, that farmers preparing to harvest wheat next week probably weren't too pleased by the downpour.

Lincoln received .76 inches of precipitation. Temperatures in the Capital City ranged from a high of 73 to a low reading of 61.

Professor Don Hanway of the UNL agronomy department said the rains were especially welcome in the southeast area of the state where they were needed the most.

He said there had been little carryover of moisture and that the area around Lincoln had been up to an inch and a half behind for the year in precipitation.

The heaviest rain fell on a 35-mile stretch from east of Lincoln to northeast Kansas near Manhattan.

Storms in the central and eastern parts of the state cleared out in the evening hours but a heavy line of thunderstorms moved into the Panhandle area southeast of Crawford and west of Gordon. Another heavy thunderstorm was reported along the Nebraska-Wyoming border northwest of Scottsbluff.

The weather service at Scottsbluff issued a severe thunderstorm warning for Dawes and northern Sheridan Counties after thunderstorms were spotted near Chadron in the evening. Scattered spreading thunderstorms were expected to move east.

Evening temperatures across the state were in the 70s. The high temperature for the day was 85 at Chadron. The high in Omaha was 69, with a low of 59. Grand Island reported extremes of 74 degrees high and 60 degrees low temperatures.

Winds were generally southeasterly at 10 to 15 miles per hour, except in the Panhandle where they were northeasterly at 5 to 10 m.p.h.

The Associated Press reported that a teen-aged couple watching overnight rains late Monday night in a field near Scottsbluff were alarmed when the boy put his hand outside the window of his pickup and felt water.

The level of water in the field had nearly reached the window of the truck. Climbing to the roof of the cab, the youths called for help and were rescued by the Scotts Bluff County sheriff.

Bill introduced to aid rural power districts

Omaha (AP) — Sen. Carl Curtis of Nebraska Tuesday introduced a bill which would have the effect of helping rural power districts in time of disaster.

The bill gives the administrator of the Rural Electrification Administration the authority to use assets of the REA revolving fund for emergency repairs of rural utility and telephone facilities when normal federal disaster aid is unavailable.

Acting at the state governor's request, the administrator would decide whether to lend REA assistance.

The fund would be reimbursed by Congress.

The Curtis staff said the bill was prompted by the Carter administration's refusal to provide federal disaster relief for several rural electric systems in Nebraska, Kansas and Colorado, which were severely damaged by snow storms last March.

7 women, 5 men sit on jury of York youth's murder trial

By Michael Holmes
Outstate Nebraska Bureau

York — Seven women and five men were selected Tuesday afternoon to serve as the jury in the murder trial of 17-year-old Ricky A. Johnson.

Johnson is charged with first degree murder in the fatal shooting of a York police officer the night of April 22

The jurors were sworn in after two days of questioning by District Court Judge William Norton, Deputy County Atty. Vince Valentino and defense attorney John R. Brogan.

Nine of 43 prospective jurors questioned were dismissed by the judge, most because they said they held personal opinions that would make it difficult for them to be impartial during the trial.

One prospective juror, a Nebraska Public Power District employe, was dismissed after he noted that Brogan is a member of the NPPD board of directors.

Valentino asked the man if he would be influenced by Brogan's presence as defense attorney. "Naturally, I might be more receptive to what he says than what you say," the man replied to laughter in the courtroom.

James M. Richardson, 24, was responding to a disturbance call at the Johnson home when shot and killed.

Brogan's questioning of jurors Monday and Tuesday centered on their feelings about ownership of rifles and shotguns, use of alcoholic beverages and any acquaintences they might have who are law enforcement officers.

However, he added a new question for prospective jurors interviewed Tuesday. Several times, Brogan asked if the jurors would be influenced because of "coarse language or epithets" the defendant might have used in referring to police officers.

Johnson, then a York High School junior, was arrested about an hour after Richardson was killed. The youth's mother, Mrs. Gayle Johnson, testified at a preliminary hearing that the shooting followed a quarrel between her and her son.

After the quarrel, she said, Ricky left the house carrying his .22 caliber rifle. Several shots were fired at the Johnson home before Richardson arrived on the scene, she said.

Opening arguments are expected to begin Wednesday morning.

Taxi driver piles into pole, dies in Omaha

Omaha (AP) — An Omaha taxi driver who died shortly after his cab struck a power pole early Tuesday is Nebraska's latest traffic fatality.

Police said George W. Hickman, 49, was southbound on an Omaha street when his cab spun out of control and struck the pole about 6 a.m. The Street was wet and the tires of Hickman's cab were bald, according to accident investigators.

Brother finds 14-year-old boy dead on farm

Central City (AP) — A 14-year-old boy died Monday on a farm where he and his brother were doing irrigation work.

Authorities said Scott Pullen, 14, of Central City was found dead by his older brother, Mitch. The two had been working on the Don Erickson farm north of here, and the boys had separated briefly.

When Mitch returned, he found his brother dead, authorities said.

The cause of the youth's death was not known. An autopsy was scheduled at a Grand Island hospital.

The boy was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Pullen of Central City and the brother of Jeff Pullen, starting middle guard for the University of Nebraska football team last year.

Omahan's truck hits pole

Omaha (AP) — A Department of Roads vehicle pulling into traffic may have led to an accident Monday afternoon that sent a semi-trailer truck down an embankment of Interstate 480 in Omaha, police said.

The truck, driven by Harry Ellis Jr. of Omaha, hit a light pole and went off the northbound Interstate after hitting the rear of a suddenly slowing truck, police said.

Ellis, who compalined of a hip injury, was in fair condition at Lutheran Hospital.

The other driver, Gary Smith, 32 of Council Bluffs, told police his truck was hit when he had to brake for a Roads Department vehicle pulling off the shoulder onto the road.

Nebraska man critically hurt in Rapid City

Rapid City, S.D. (UPI) — A 30-foot fall onto a concrete floor has left a Nebraska man in critical condition in a local hospital

John Bartak, 31, a working foreman with a Norfolk, Neb., construction firm, fell while working in the symnasium at the new Rapid City Central High School.

Bartak is employed by Kenney and Reel Construction Co.

Train derails; no injuries

Brule (AP) — Union Pacific Railroad crews cleared the westbound main line track Tuesday afternoon, and were expected to have the eastbound track cleared by 8 p.m. Mountain Time.

The tracks were blocked early Tuesday morning when seven cars and the caboose of an empty, eastbound freight train derailed about four miles west of here.

A conductor and brakeman were reported shaken up but not injured in the derailment.

Buffalo Bill's image hurt by 'crazy films'

North Platte (UPI) — The image of William F. "Buffalo Bill" Cody has suffered from "some of these crazy films that have been made about him," the recipient of this year's Buffalo Bill Award said Tuesday.

"People prefer tearing a man down, rather than building him up," said Col. Tim McCoy, 86, the veteran of nearly 100 Western movies

"My impression of Cody was that he was probably the most fantastic showman we have ever put out," McCoy said at a news conference.

"I always admired him. I thought he was terrific," said McCoy, his blue eyes shining from below his broad brim Stetson set at an angle that was his trademark

The award, which honors McCoy for "outstanding contributions to quality family entertainment in the Cody tradition," will be presented Wednesday at the opening performance of the Buffalo Bill Rodeo.

McCoy's career began in the 1920s, when he served as a technical advisor for the movie, "The Wagon Train." He was an Army adjutant general in Wyoming, and, because he knew sign language, the movie company asked him to provide the Indians. McCoy brought 500.

Even then, authenticity was difficult. "They wanted to do a council scene out in the open and they wanted the tepees put in a circle with the doors all opening onto the center.

"I said, 'You can't do it that way. They only pitch a tepee one way.' The door must face the east so that when the Indian comes out of there in the morning, he sees the sun, his father, come up to greet him.

"Through another interpreter, the Indians were told to pitch their tents with the doors facing in.

"When they came out the next morning, the Indians had all the doors facing east," McCoy said.

McCoy resigned his commission in the Army and spent two years promoting "The Wagon Train," appearing on stage with about 50 Indians.

In 1926, McCoy signed with MGM, and within three years he had made 16 films. The first, "War Paint," was shot on location in Wyoming where McCoy played a role he was already familiar with — a cavalry officer.

Some of the current Westerns make no pretense at being authentic, he said. "Fiction most always has to be more heroic than the real thing, but when I look at Westerns today and Westerns made when I was in the business, there is no comparison whatsoever.

"In our day, the hero had to be an outstanding, clean-cut fellow that the kids all looked up to and said, 'Oh, I want to be like him' when they left the movie picture house. Today, they look like bums," McCoy said.

Minnesota firm buys Pamida service operation

Omaha (AP) — Marshall Foods Inc. of Marshall, Minn., has announced purchase of the service merchandising operations of Pamida Inc., an Omaha-based retail firm.

David J. Weiner, president of Marshall Foods, announced the purchase price will be in the range of $2.5 million.

Pamida Board Chairman D. J. Witherspoon said the division purchased by Marshall distributes nonfood items such as health and beauty aids, primarily to supermarkets.

He said the division accounted for only four per cent of Pamida's annual business and was sold "to put all our effort behind our retail discount business."

Witherspoon said Pamida owns 193 Gibson's discount stores throughout the Midwest.

Marshall Foods, through its Groves-Kelco Division and other operations, also is in the service merchandising business.

The Groves-Kelco Division also obtained Pamida's service merchandising warehouse facilities in South Sioux City, Neb.

No one wants blame for $1 million mistake

Omaha (AP) — A $1 million "mistake" six years ago is going to cost Omaha dearly.

In 1971, $1 million was spent to pave a two-mile stretch of Pacific St. and it was supposed to last 25 years, officials said.

The pavement is shot. Another $1.2 million will have to be spent.

"I'm afraid we all make mistakes, and this was a big one," City Construction Engineer Roy Sides said.

"You strive for 100% performance, but you don't always get it. Unfortunately, the taxpayer ends up paying for it.

"I don't want to point fingers, but let's face it. The contractor did the job and it's up to him to get the job done."

The pavement was installed by Charles Vrana and Son Construction Co., which said it was not at fault.

Richard Coleman, vice president of Vrana, said Monday that Omaha had a bad winter starting a month or two after the work was completed.

"The city dumped tons and tons of salt on it, and we had just finished," Coleman said. "That's the worst possible thing you can do to new concrete. It just takes the top off."

Sides said many tests have been run on the concrete and they don't pinpoint the contractor.

Bluffs to ban topless massages

Council Bluffs, Iowa (AP) — Women may continue giving professional massages to men in Council Bluffs, but topless massages soon will be prohibited.

A week ago, on a motion by city council member Dorothy Strohbehn, the council directed the city attorney to draw up a massage parlor ordinance amendment prohibiting females from massaging males and vice versa.

Explaining that this might damage business for legitimate massage parlors, Mrs. Strohbehn asked the council Monday to change that amendment to prohibit topless massages. The motion passed unanimously.

A second motion requiring for Council Bluffs masseurs and masseuses 150 hours of training at an accredited school passed 3-2.

Nightclub operator's trial reset

Council Bluffs, Iowa (AP) — Pottawattamie County District Judge E.F. Hansen Tuesday postponed the trial of a Carter Lake nightclub operator accused of wounding two men outside another lounge May 1.

Richard McWilliams, 28, operator of the Nite Life Lounge, faces two counts of assault with intent to commit murder stemming from the incident at the Hi Baby Lounge.

McWilliams' trial was scheduled to begin Tuesday, but his attorney requested a delay.

Tiemann again targets GOP 'declining fortunes'

By Don Walton
Star Staff Writer

Former Gov. Norbert Tiemann Tuesday directed more criticism at Nebraska Republican Party leadership after GOP National Committeeman William Morrow described his earlier remarks as "grossly erroneous and grossly unfair."

The former (1967-71) Republican governor said "declining fortunes" of the GOP in Nebraska can be traced to the fact that the GOP has been "outgunned, outmanned, outfought and out-talented" by Nebraska Democrats.

And the likely result will be the loss of the remaining Republican Senate seat next year and Democratic retention of the governorship and lieutenant governor's office, he said.

"The majority party (Republican) continually loses important elections" in Nebraska, Tiemann said.

Not only did it lose the governorship in 1970 (when Tiemann's reelection bid was rejected) and 1974, but it lost a Senate race in 1976, he noted.

"Where are the bright young faces?" he asked.

One reason they may not be rising in Republican ranks, he suggested, is that they are often discouraged by GOP party leaders.

"I know who said no to me" in 1966, he said. That's when Tiemann made his first successful run at the governorship.

"The leadership told me to run for state treasurer or the Legislature and work my way up. I was given to understand that I was not their boy."

Tiemann subsequently won a primary battle with former Gov. Val Peterson and was elected that November.

Tiemann Monday had suggested that the GOP needed fresh new leadership and "new blood" if it is going to successfully meet Democratic challenges.

Morrow offered his brief critique of those remarks in answer to a question during a panel discussion at the Robert A. Taft Institute of Government on the University of Nebraska campus

Tiemann promptly replied that he would "stick by the comments I made. The party is in a shambles and I don't see any resurrection coming."

Now living in Virginia, Tiemann said he believes he can look at Nebraska's political scene objectively.

As for fresh blood and fresh faces, the Republic Party "ain't got none," he declared. "The party is in a shmables and a mess."

Morrow said Republican leaders remain impartial in primary battles.

"We can't grant a nomination," only the GOP voters can, he noted.

As for new blood, he said he believes both of the two announced Republican gubernatorial candidates (Vance Rogers of Lincoln and Robert Phares of North Platte) would fit that description.

Within the party structure, Morrow said, he believes "Nobby would not know half the people on the state central committee" since they have landed there since he left office.

Democratic National Committeeman Allen O'Donnell also participated in the panel.

"I don't think the Republican Party is in a shambles," he said, "but I wouldn't mind."

On other matters, all three panelists urged support for a partisan Unicameral.

O'Donnell said he believes partisan organization of the Legislature would dilute the power of special interests.

Morrow said such a system would result in "more efficient and effective" organization of the Unicameral.

Tiemann suggested that the lieutenant governor also be removed as presiding officer of the Legislature and simply assigned the role of "assistant governor."

Interchange is given first OK

Omaha (AP) — Nebraska has been notified by the Federal Highway Administration that it approves of an Interstate 80 interchange near the southwest edge of Omaha.

Lou Lamberty, Douglas County surveyor, said the interchange could be built just south of Harrison Street at about 126th Street.

He said an engineer now must be employed to prepare specific plans, and it may be several years before such a road is built.

Sciences grant aids Bellevue College plans

Omaha (UPI) — Sen. Edward Zorinsky, D-Neb., said Tuesday the National Science Foundation has approved a $100,000 grant for Bellevue College.

In a statement released by his Omaha office, Zorinsky said the funds would be used for a science development project involving natural science and psychology.

Zorinsky said the project involves the subjects of biology, chemistry, physics and social sciences.

The grant will allow Bellevue College to further develop intercooperation among the various natural sciences and psychology, Zorinsky said, "and at the same time aid in providing quality higher education for the Bellevue area."

Zorinsky said the grant was one of 68 awarded through the National Science Foundation's Comprehensive Assistance to Undergraduate Sciences program.

Stocks score broad advance

Dow Ind. +4.33

NewYork (AP) — Stock prices scored a broad advance Tuesday as the inflation-sensitive market responded to a government report showing a slowdown in the rate of consumer price increases.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up more than 10 points during the day, gave some of that up near the close to finish with a 4.33 point gain at 928.60.

The strength was widespread. For every two issues that lost in value on the New York Stock Exchange, more than three gained.

Brokers said the Labor Department's report on the consumer price index in May helped dampen worries over the rate of inflation.

The government reported Tuesday that consumer prices rose at an annual rate of 7.2 per cent in May, a reduction from the 9.6 per cent level reported in April.

In a separate report, the Commerce Department said that factory orders for durable goods increased a half per cent in May after a drop of seven-tenths of a per cent in April.

Both reports apparently added to investor confidence in the direction of the economy. The Dow average, which rose in a mild rally late Monday, has gained more than 8 points in two days.

Standard & Poor's index of 400 industrial stocks gained .33 to 110.05. The S&P 500-stock composite index rose .32 to 100.74.

Sony Corp., off ¼ to 9¼, led the active list as of the 4 p.m. close of the NYSE. Trading included a 242,700-share block traded at 9⅛.

Twentieth Century Fox, second most active, came in for some apparent profit taking after posting recent strong advances on the strength of its new film "Star Wars." The stock slipped one point to 22¼.

Pan American, up ¼ to 6, also was active. Trading included a 100,000-share block at 5⅞.

Among the largest net gainers was Coca-Cola Bottling Co. of New York, up ⅝ to 8⅞. Trading included a 50,000-share lock at 8⅝.

Fremont beef plant planned

Omaha (AP) — A firm headed by a retired Air Force major general plans to build a beef-processing plant in Fremont to prepare beef for export.

The firm plans to market other agricultural commodities, such as soybeans, wheat and corn, a spokesman said.

Pete C. Sianis, deputy chief of staff for operations at Strategic Air Command Headquarters until his retirement in 1973, said Prime-X International has 14 stockholders. He said many of them are "prominent Omaha-area businessmen."

Sianis said the firm has selected a tentative site in Fremont, where it has an office, for construction of a beef processing plant, probably within the next six months.

Sianis and the firm's secretary-treasurer, Lyle Bonn, declined to list stockholders until plans for the firm are formally announced later.

Bonn is a former West Coast meat processor. He said Prime-X has hired State Sen. Walter George of Blair as an export marketing executive.

George is attending a trade show in Frankfurt, Germany, where meat processing equipment is being displayed, Bonn said.

Bonn said the idea for the firm originated last year when George and four other state senators formed Midwest Task Force for Beef Exports.

None of the other task force organizers are involved in Prime-X, Bonn said. They are Sens. Loran Schmit of Bellwood, Cal Carsten of Avoca and former Sens. Leslie Stull of Alliance and Jules Burbach of Hartington.

The task force was established to expand and stabilize foreign markets for midwestern beef and beef products.

Bonn said he merged a beef processing firm he headed in San Diego, Ibex Inc., with Prime-X and plans are to build a plant employing about 50 persons in Fremont.

"We should expand rapidly after we get started," he said. "There is a market of 360 million people in Europe. It has been barely tapped."

Bonn, a mechanical engineer, said beef produced by Prime-X would be similar to beef cuts produced by Iowa Beef Processors, in that the cuts would be boxed and vacuum-packed.

"We plan some departures from traditional meat-cutting techniques," he said.

Processing by Prime-X will include providing individual steaks "ready to throw on the stove," Bonn said.

He said the firm also hopes to market the products of other meat processors in Nebraska.

Soybeans fall to daily limits

Chicago (AP) — Soybean, soybean meal and oil futures in old crop deliveries fell to allowable daily limits on the Chicago Board of Trade Tuesday.

Wheat, oats and corn were down 4½ to nearly 6 cents. Iced broilers lost more than ¼ cent a pound on selling influenced by lower grain and meal prices.

The decline over the entire board was blamed on a slowdown in exports, a lack of buyers and a generally bearish mood, and generally beneficial weather for crop growth.

Petition against school aid increase seen

United Press International

A petition campaign to block the $20 million increase in state aid to schools and to roll back a sales tax increase is virtually assured, says S.H. (Zeke) Brauer Jr

Brauer, secretary of the Nebraska School Improvement Association, said a final decision will be made next week.

"I feel it will be done," he said. "The people expect it."

If the effort is made, opponents of the new state aid program will have until Sept 2 to reach their goal of 54,000 signatures on the referendum petitions.

Brauer has been polling nearly 1,500 activists from the successful 1974 state aid repeal referendum campaign for pledges of support. He will leave the final determination to former state Sen. Ramey Whitney, Chappell, he said.

Whitney will be responsible for gathering support from present and former state senators, Brauer said. Brauer would act as coordinator.

If the signature goal is reached, the 1977 state aid law would be suspended until a 1978 referendum election. That would also remove the need for the half-point increase in the state sales tax rate, Hrauer said.

The jump from 3% to 3.5%, scheduled to take effect July 1, has been blamed on the need for state school aid funds

The 1977 Nebraska Legislature enacted the state aid bill over Gov. J. James Exon's veto. It calls for an increase from the present $55 million in three, $20 million annual boosts to $115 million.

Brauer said the petition drive will concentrate on urban areas because this is a critical period for farmers, who must be in their fields with the hay and wheat harvest and the laying of irrigation pipe.

"We expect a heavier volume of signatures in Douglas County (than during the 1974 drive)", he said. "The people I talk to there are absolutely irate."

In 1974, the association's primary partner was the AFL-CIO. This year, he said, union members are being polled but the leadership has not been consulted. Sen. Bill Brennan, Omaha, state AFL-CIO president, may not support the anti-state aid forces, Brauer said.

Brauer said he thinks Brennan may not be a staunch opponent this year because the senator received a campaign contribution from the Nebraska State Education Association, which represents the teachers and is a state aid backer.

The suspension of the state aid law would create problems for school districts, Brauer said. For that reason, he hopes to file the petitions before the Aug. 15 deadline for approving local school budgets."

Congressmen and 19 states support Curtis' balanced budget amendment

Washington (AP) — A bipartisan group of members of Congress are pressing for a constitutional amendment that would require the balancing of the federal budget.

Sen. Carl T. Curtis, R-Neb., who has filed such an amendment in the past several Congresses, told a news conference that 19 states have petitioned Congress to submit the proposal for ratification.

Under the amendment proposed by Curtis the President would determine within 20 days after the close of the fiscal year whether there was a deficit.

"If there is a deficit," reads the Curtis amendment, "the President shall determine the percentage rate of income tax surtax needed to recoup the deficit in the following calendar year."

The amendment also would provide that "in the case of a grave national emergency, including a war formally declared by Congress," the statistics could be set aside for one year by vote of a three-fourths majority of the House and Senate.

Sen. Harry F. Byrd Jr., Ind.-Va., told the news conference that in the last 10 years that national debt has increased from $341 billion to an estimated $700 billion at the end of this year.

"I believe in the long run, only a legal mandate will curb the politician's urge to spend," said Byrd.

A proposed constitutional amendment requires approval by two-thirds of the House and Senate and then ratification by the legislatures of three-fourths of the states.

Nominee to school unit voted down

Omaha (AP) -- The Omaha School Board voted 5-4 Monday night to ignore the nomination of Edward L. Lacrosse for a board vacancy and start the selection over again

The vote continued a rift along board members that prompted the Omaha Council of Parent Teacher Associations to express "grave concern" in a statement to the board

Mrs Judy Marx council president said the division "can only impede the policy-making process which is the responsibility of the board "

LaCrosse, a Boys Town administrator, still could be nominated in the next round

Board member Don Cunningham last week accused five others of breaking the law by nominating LaCrosse June 8 to succeed Tim Rouse. Rouse resigned to join the Omaha City Council

Cunningham named Paul Kennedy the board's president and members Dorothy Beavers Mrs Maurice Frank, Leo Hoffman and Gaynelle Goodrich as the violators

James Monaghan said he considered the June 8 action "null and void," because the committee hadn't given enough notice that it would nominate someone.

He said the board's policies require five days advance notice of a meeting agenda

Frand Stanek, who was out of town, said he reviewed qualifications of prospective appointees for 1½ hours in the board secretary's office before he left town He said he told the search committee chairman Mrs Ruth Thomas to "go ahead and name someone "

Hoffman challenged Monaghan's allegation of improper notice

But Monaghan said the intent of the June 8 meeting was "not to take action but to establish procedures" for selecting a board member

Ronald Magruder, who also missed the June 8 session said he was disturbed the committee nominated a candidate. He said he also understood that the meeting was called to establish procedures.

Summer school won't be hiked for handicapped

Lincoln Public Schools have not budged an inch from their policy not to provide special education for any more hours per year than schooling provided for normal students

In answer to a request by the Lancaster County Board to fund a special program for 6 severely handicapped youths under the LOMR (Lancaster Office of Mental Retardation) program, Supt John Prasch reiterated that the school system will only pay for half-day sessions for six weeks this summer or a total of 90 hours of instruction

The County's problem is what to do with these youngsters for the rest of the summer until Lincoln Public Schools take over their education full time next fall

The youths need an intensive full-time educational program year-round according to LOMR Director Bill [illegible]plemeyer

The County Board has not yet decided whether to fund the program to expand it to full days until July 22, then continue full-day instruction until the fall term starts

Full funding for this period would cost $6,000 according to [illegible]meyer The school system was asked to contribute half this amount, but has refused to do so

Boo-birds don't ruffle Connors' feathers; Evert wins

Wimbledon (UPI) — Jimmy Connors, shrugging off the unprecedented boos and hisses of a normally staid center court crowd, Tuesday defeated Briton Richard Lewis, 6-3, 6-2, 6-4, in his opening match of the $373,440 Wimbledon Centennial Championships.

The Royal box was pointedly empty when Connors took to the center court, and the crowd of 15,000 began booing, hissing and catcalling in a display of displeasure never before given a former champion.

The reason was Connors' decision Monday not to attend the opening parade of past champions and not to collect his commemorative medal, an action which the British press called a snub to the Duke of Kent, who was handing them out.

But Connors' career is a record of thriving on adversity and he has often appeared at his best when battling the establishment, be it American or British.

"I expected the reception I got," said Connors afterwards. "It made me play better."

The top seed and 9-4 favorite was seldom tested by the left-hander who looks a little like Stan Smith but has none of the Californian's armory of shots. Connors played with his right thumb bandaged in a small steel splint but the injury didn't affect his game.

"I can't come all the way around with my swing," he said. "Perhaps it even helps my game."

The second day's play was evenly balanced between men's and women's first round singles. The only upset was not really even that. Harold Solomon, the 16th and last seed, was dumped by fellow American Steve Docherty, 6-4, 4-6, 7-5, 7-5.

Solomon's baseline game, all-powerful on slow courts, was hopelessly at sea on Wimbledon's fast grass and critics who were surprised that Solomon should be seeded at all were justified.

Docherty, of Portland, Ore., used his booming first serve and good volleying to the maximum, leaving Solomon no time for passing shots, and the Silver Spring, Md., player was soon showing his frustration by throwing his racket at the back fence and slugging balls into the next court.

Defending champion Chris Evert was in a calmer mood on center court, demolishing fellow American Ruta Gerulaitis, her first round opponent, 6-0, 6-3, with her usual cool approach.

Her tennis varied from the baseline and her drop shots frequently caught the New Yorker flat-footed. She disposed of the first set in just 18 minutes and when Gerulaitis finally won a game, she received an ovation from the crowd for the feat.

On the next-door court, Martina Navratilova, the player seeded to meet Evert in the final, was giving a much less convincing display against Briton Glynis Coles. The score of 6-3, 6-0 was almost the same but the Czech-born player was horribly out of touch and was lucky to meet somebody in worse form than herself.

Rosie Casals, the sixth seed, downed Tanya Harford of South Africa, 6-3, 6-1, while both Billie Jean King and 14-year-old Tracy Austin received first round byes.

Twelfth-seeded Kathy May, the other U.S. seed in action, recovered from 0-3 in her first appearance on center court to defeat Britain's Linda Mottram, 6-3, 6-1.

In other women's matches involving Americans, Janet Newberry downed Raquel Giscafre of Argentina, 6-4, 6-2, Julie Anthony stopped Naoko Sato of Japan, 6-1, 6-3, and JoAnn Russell ousted Briton Sue Mappin, 8-6, 6-2.

In men's opening round clashes, Tim Gullikson succeeded where his left-handed twin brother had failed Monday, reaching the second round with a 6-2, 6-4, 6-3 win over fellow American Steve Krulevitz.

Other American wins went to John McEnroe, who sidelined Ismail El Shafei of Egypt, 6-0, 7-5, 6-4, and veteran Dennis Ralston, finalist here 11 years ago, who disposed of Trey Waltke, St. Louis, Mo., 5-7, 6-4, 6-2, 9-8.

'The Bear' moans

An esteemed football expert from the Southeastern Conference says Alabama will be woeful this fall. He says the Tide will stink up the gridiron, embarrass its fans, shame parents and coaches — possibly beat Vanderbilt and finish No. 4 in the Bottom Ten poll.

But, before you bet the mortgage on Nebraska's Sept. 18 meeting with Alabama in the second game of the season, read on.

The "expert" is Paul 'Bear' Bryant, whom the Atlanta Constitution calls the original "Bad News Bear."

The Georgia paper recently talked to the Alabama coach about the upcoming season, now that spring practice is out of the way and he's able to take a realistic look during the summer about the upcoming campaign.

Bryant made a big deal out of the fact that The Tide lost its entire front five defensively. The two ends, tackles and middle guard are gone.

The paper says he conveniently forgot to mention that the other six defensive starters are back, as well as seven starters from an offensive unit that humiliated a fine UCLA team in the Liberty Bowl last December.

"We have probably the toughest schedule we've ever had," Bryant insists, pointing to both Nebraska and Southern California on the road.

The Bear denies he scheduled USC and Nebraska to quiet critics of past soft schedules. "The schedule was made 10 years ago. Southern Cal and Nebraska are both great teams," Bryant told the Constitution. "It's an honor to play them."

Sounds like a little Southern Gentleman 'Gamesmanship' is already at work. And the game is still three months away.

Arizona State

Reviewing the record book after the conclusion of another exciting and highly successful College World Series in Omaha, brought out an interesting sidelight.

Arizona State won the title — its fourth — by a 2-1 score over South Carolina when catcher Chris Bando broke a 1-1 tie with a home run.

The Sun Devils first championship came in 1965. The score was the same, 2-1, over Ohio State.

And who broke the 1-1 tie in that one to win the game for ASU? Sal Bando.

Speaking of Arizona State, and going back to football, many Sun Devil fans tried to make a perpetual national ranking out of ASU's Fiesta Bowl win over Nebraska two years ago.

The bubble soon burst. Arizona State couldn't keep pace in the WAC last fall, let alone against stronger outside competition. Now the Sun Devils are set to move into the Pac-8 Conference, which most folks presume will become the Pac 10 with the addition of the two Arizona schools.

Kush is quick to admit, "We're going out of the bass pond and into the ocean to fight the sharks."

Other notes

Clearing the desk before heading for the men's state amateur match play golf championships.

Randy York chastised the local radio folks for not broadcasting the Kansas City Royals' baseball games. Many complain that the only area station carrying the games KTAP-FM in Crete, is hard — if not impossible — to find.

A caller says he has the solution. Turn your radio to AM and tune in Lincoln's KFOR. Now switch the set over to FM and there's the ball game.

"On some sets, where the calibration is different," he adds, "you have to start with Omaha's KFAB. But, in one of the two systems, you can find the game easily."

A note of interest for oldtime Capital City baseball fans comes from Jim Miller of the Ralston Recorder. He says the recent death of John Kucab slipped by unnoticed by all the newspapers.

Kucab, who pitched for the old Philadelphia A's in the early 1950s, was a mainstay on the mound for several years for Lincoln's entry in the Class A Western League in the late '40s. He was only 57 years of age at the time of his death.

Trainers say Lively right in decisions

By Mark Gordon
Staff Sports Writer

Omaha — Take it from veteran horse trainers W. R. Morse and Louie Brandt — John Lively was absolutely correct in easing horses he thought were hurt.

"Absolutely, he was right," said Morse here Tuesday at Ak-Sar-Ben. "Anytime the rider doesn't feel the horse is 100 per cent sound, he should stop him. I wish he could have stopped him right in his tracks."

Morse and Brandt each trained a horse Lively eased recently.

Morse trained J.W. Chesnut's J.J. Battle who was eased the eighth race on June 8.

Brandt, Ak-Sar-Ben's leading trainer, trained the Dazoc Stables' Son Gary, who was eased during Saturday's 4-H Handicap.

The Saturday crowd booed Lively considerably after the race — something both trainers adamently felt was unjustified.

"I'm sure the fans just didn't understand what was really happening," Brandt said.

"Anytime anybody rides for me, I'd much rather have them pull the horse off rather than risk a serious injury. Lively did the right thing taking care of the horse first and then worrying about winning," Brandt said.

"He didn't know how badly the house was hurt," Brandt said.

Son Gary was believed to have pulled a leg muscle. He will probably return to competition here July 9 in the $100,000-added Omaha Gold Cup Stakes, the meet's featured attraction for 3-year-olds.

J.J. Battle, meanwhile, pulled a muscle over his right front knee. He will be out of action for about four months, Morse said.

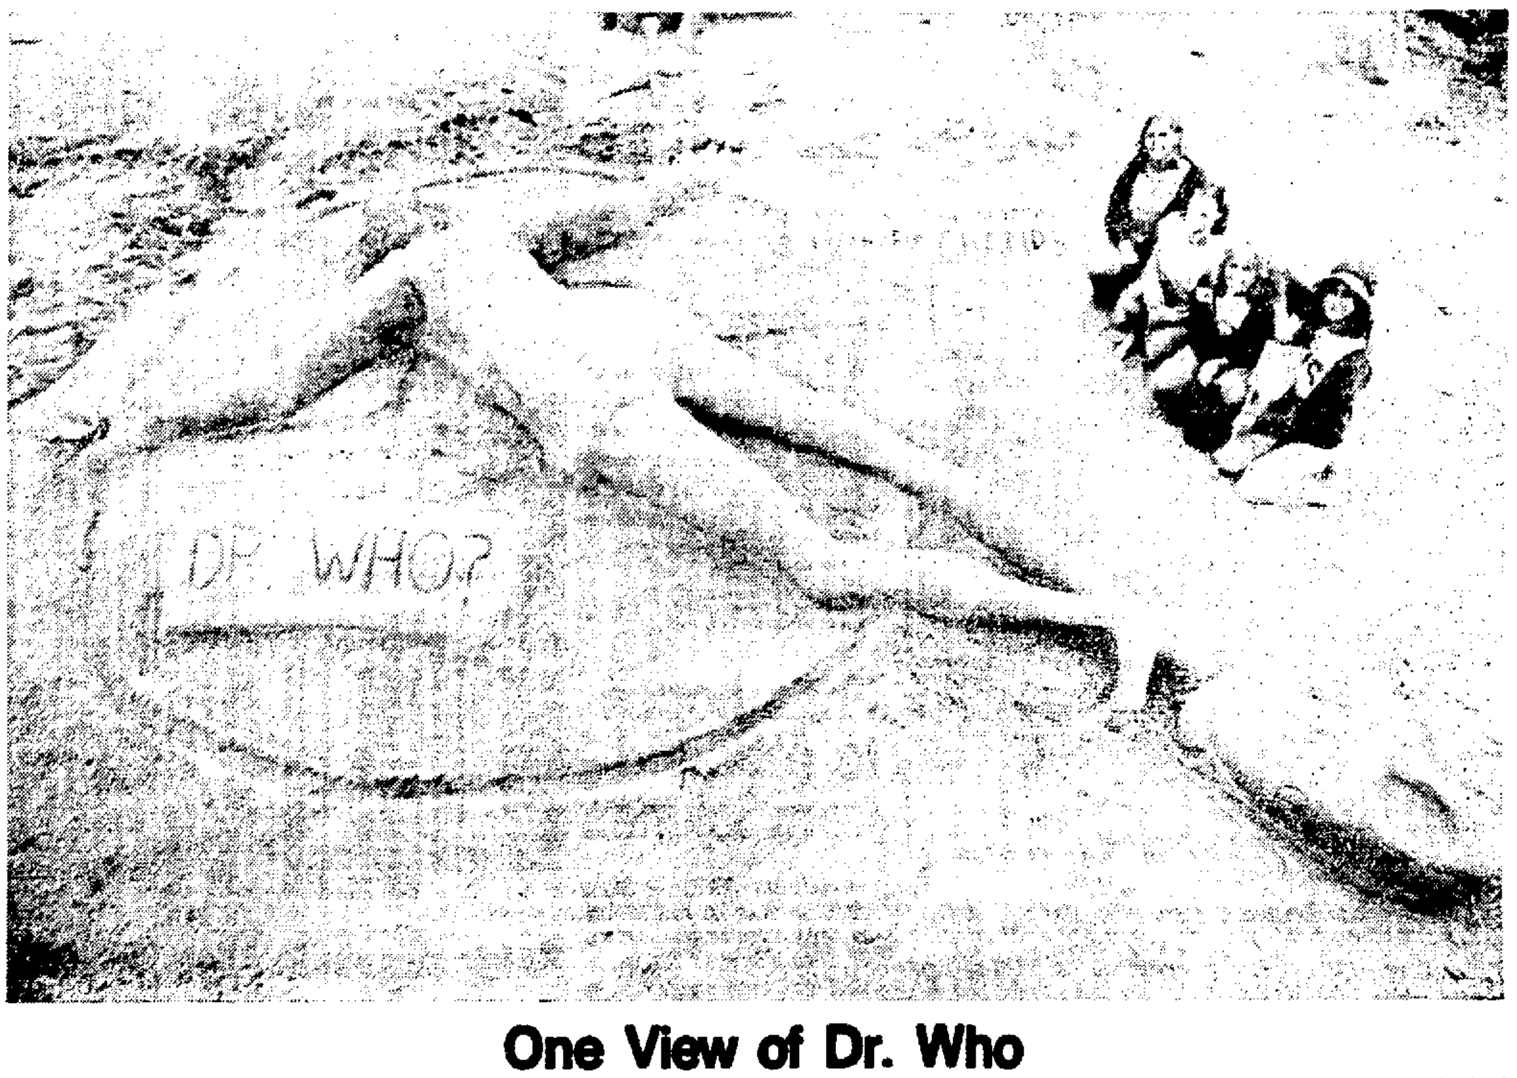
Morse said J.J. will stay here in Omaha until the Ak met ends on July 23 and then will be turned out in El Paso, Tex., for a rest before resuming his career.

While the injuries to Son Gary and J. J. Battle apparently were not that serious, Brandt revealed that the Dazoc Stables' Roger's Choice was found dead in her stall Tuesday morning at the Delta Farm in Arkadelphia, Ark.

"I got a telephone call this morning. It was really a shock," Brandt said of the 4-year-old filly.

Roger's Choice, voted Ak-Sar-Ben's top 3-year-old filly last year by newsmen, won five races and finished third in another here last year. She earned $73,625.

The Dazoc Stable is owned by Bill Rice of Cozad.



One View of Dr. Who

Rangers' Lucchesi apparently on way out

Dallas (AP) — Frank Lucchesi, the 48-year-old manger of the Texas Rangers, will be fired this week probably in the next two days — an unimpeachable Rangers source told The Associated Press by telephone from Minneapolis Tuesday.

The source was the same one who said Billy Martin wouldn't last out the week with the Rangers in July 1975. Martin didn't and Lucchesi replaced him on July 21, 1975.

Texas is in Minneapolis for a four-game series with the Twins.

The Rangers are close to the top in American League West but are some 100,000 behind in attendance from last season. Majority owner Brad Corbett, who had been a staunch backer of Lucchesi, now says "This road trip is crucial."

The Rangers have talked to Eddie Stanky, former Chicago White Sox and St. Louis Cardinals manager and now head baseball coach at the University of South Alabama. The job is apparently Stanky's if he wants it.

The Ranger source said Lucchesi would be offered a spot in the organization. Lucchesi has a year to go on his contract.

Fort Worth, Tex., radio station KRXV contacted Lucchesi in a Minneapolis hotel and he said: "I'm a little shocked and surprised but it sounds like to me there could be some panic in the upper levels of the Ranger organization."

Asked to be more specific, Lucchesi added: "I can't get into that right now. It's absolutely ridiculous to have all this talk going on while we are a contending team."

It's been a tough year for Lucchesi. The Rangers' skipper was beaten up in spring training camp by Lenny Randle, who thought he wasn't getting a fair shot at second base. Randle was sold to the New York Mets and has a threat of a suit hanging over his head.

Only two weeks ago, Lucchesi became dizzy at a game and was rushed to the hospital. He missed a series with the Boston Red Sox while he recuperated. Doctors said Lucchesi apparently was just suffering from heat exhaustion.

Some players on the team have been reluctant to go on record about Lucchesi. But several times during recent home games players were overheard at the batting cage making jokes about him.

Corbett has been receiving steam from the board of directors. William Seay, secretary of the board of directors, said he is "concerned" about the slumping attendance figures. The Rangers have projected they will be at least 300,000 fans below the estimated break-even point of 1.4 million.

"That's the big thing that killed Frank," said the source. "The fans were becoming disenchanted."

Rangers officials wouldn't comment on the possibility of Lucchesi's dismissal. Corbett's mother died Monday night and he was busy making funeral arrangements.

Both Rangers executive vice president Eddie Robinson and General Manager Danny O'Brien flew to Mobile, Ala., and talked to Stanky Monday night.

Lucchesi was third base coach under Martin before he was named Rangers manager. The San Francisco native coached 20 years in the minors before he was given a shot with the Philadelphia Phillies in 1970-71. He had records of 73-88 and 67-95.

The Rangers were fourth in the AL West last year but had climbed close to Minnesota in the wild 1977 scramble with Minnesota in the lead.

Defending champion Olson heads amateur field

Omaha — Defending champion Tom Olson of Omaha heads a field of 32 golfers into the Nebraska Amateur Men's Match Play Championships which open at the Omaha Country Club here Thursday morning.

Olsen, who won the crown at Lincoln's Hillcrest Country Club last summer, and Dan Bahensky of Kearney, who edged Olson for the title in 1975, are the only ex-champs who qualified for this year's tourney.

Stamina as well as good golf will be required. Morning and afternoon 18-hole matches are scheduled both Thursday and Friday to reduce the field for Saturday's 36-hole finals.

The eventual winner, if all matches were to go the distance, will be required to play 108 holes of golf in three days.

Four Lincolnites qualified for the tourney, but all drew spots in the same bracket. Rennie Sasse faces Omaha's Lee Tate in his first test, while Doug Smith will meet Stewart Grashoff of Omaha.

The other two Capital City golfers entered are Rick Reynolds and Mike Hughett. Reynolds meet Ken Dahl of Beemer in his opeing match, while Hughett will face Omaha's Ed Placek.

Other matches in that bracket for Thursday morning are: Olson vs. Dave Budd, Grand Island; Dave Williams, Omaha, vs. Dave Gross, Omaha; Randy Sock, Norfolk, vs. Mike Klein, Scottsbluff; and Matt McConnell, Norfolk, vs. Mark Winstrom, Omaha.

The eight first-round matches in the other bracket are: Bahensky vs. Jim Meehan, York; Gary Teel, Omaha, vs. Steve Stewart, Hastings; Dan Zadalis, Omaha, vs. Dave Hellbusch, Albion; Dick Bolin, Gering, vs. Gary Burton, Omaha; Jim Daley, Omaha, vs. Scott Fredstrom, Omaha; Steve Sergeant, Omaha, vs. Craig Moyer, Wood River; Kevin Chesnut, Omaha, vs. Steve Franke, Grand Island; and Jeff Haskins, Hastings, vs. Larry Sock, Norfolk.

Caddy tells of his start as Nicklaus' No. 1 bag-toter

By Chuck Sinclair
Staff Sports Writer

Omaha — While Jack Nicklaus captured the hearts of the vast majority of 6,000 spectators in the gallery Monday during the Nebraska Heart Assn. benefit, Angelo Argeo was doing some captivating of his own.

Argeo, the bushy gray-haired, mustachioed fellow who sports a deep tan, earns his living toting Nicklaus' golf clubs around the finest courses in the world.

But Monday, Angelo took advantage of a day off as Omahan Tony Pessavento carried the clubs and Argeo followed with a gallery of his own, moving in a little group from tee to green.

For the spectators who had paid $10 a ticket to see the match, being in the caddy's small group was worth the price of admission.

Carrying the clubs for the greatest golfer in the world is a far cry from being a cab driver and part-time caddy in Las Vegas.

"The first time I ever caddied for Jack was in Palm Springs back in 1963," Angelo said. "I was assigned to carry for Jack, and he won the tournament.

"There was the Tournament of Champions coming up in Las Vegas, so I asked him if I could caddy for him again," he added. "He said yes, and he won that one too.

"Every chance I could, I'd caddy for Jack," he said. "Through the next year, I caddied for him six times, and he won five of those tournaments."

Nicklaus had found himself a caddy he wanted to keep, but a rule that limited caddies to working for the same player no more than two weeks in a row kept Argeo from traveling with Nicklaus at that time.

Now, since that rule has been dropped, Angelo is employed full-time on salary, with a bonus for every win.

"I really love it," Argeo said. "The Nicklaus' are a great family. I almost feel like a part of it."

Being a caddy for someone like Nicklaus, you wouldn't think Angelo would have much time to enjoy the game himself.

"I haven't got to play very much in the past, but that is going to change," he said. "I shoot between 90 and 100, but it's getting better. And that's on some of the toughest golf courses around. I was really starting to hit it good at Muirfield when we had to leave for the U.S. Open."

With the name Angelo Argeo, be admits everyine thinks he's Italian.

"Actually, I'm Greek," he said. "I changed my name from Argeopolous. People are always speaking Italian to me. I just let them think what they want."

Argeo also admits that Nicklaus takes pretty good care of him financially, and has no plans of doing anything besides continuing his current employment.

"I'll caddy as long as Jack will have me," he said. "After that, who knows. Maybe I'll carry for the boy (Jack Jr.). He's a great kid and a pretty good golfer himself. I'd like to stay in the family."

Angelo's pride for Nicklaus was evident during a noon luncheon when Nebraska Lt. Governor Jerry Whelan presented Jack with a water color of the state capital signed by Gov. J. J. Exon with a note saying, "I bet you can't hit a nine-iron over this."

Angelo responded "oh, I don't know."

Nicklaus had his own retort for Exon.

"You can tell Gov. Exon that I'll have Angelo go over and stop off the yardage to the building right away," he said.

"If it's only 400 feet, Jack can do it," Angelo said.

Randy Jones on disabled list

San Diego (UPI) — Randy Jones, the 1976 National League Cy Young Award winner who has been bothered by recurrent arm problems following an off-season operation for a severed nerve, Tuesday night was placed on the 21-day disabled list by the San Diego Padres.

The 27-year-old left-hander, who posted a 22-14 record last year, has been ordered by doctors to rest his left arm and carry out a rehabilitation program. His spot on the roster will be filled by righthander Dave Freisleben, who was recalled from Hawaii of the Pacific Coast league. Freisleben was sent down to Hawaii on May 1 with a 0-4 record. With Hawaii he was 4-4.

A year ago at this time Jones had a 13-3 record and was on his way toward becoming the starting pitcher for the NL in the all-star game. He currently has a 4-7 record and an earned run average of 4.61 in 84 1-3 innings.

Fritts hopes to rebound from injuries

Cincinnati (AP) — Stan Fritts admits he has to try harder to keep his place on the Cincinnati Bengals' roster.

He had knee surgery as a sophomore at North Carolina State in 1972 and then operated on again in February 1976.

Because his condition has been unpredictable, Fritts has often had to sit on the sidelines. Last year, he managed 200 yards in 47 tries and three touchdowns.

Two years ago, as a National Football League rookie, he carried twice as much and scored 10 times.

Fritts believes he will come to training camp this year in 100 per cent condition. He vows that his knee won't swell up like it did last year at this time.

"I want to become a football player again," said Fritts, in a telephone interview from his home in Oak Ridge, Tenn., near Knoxville, "one that doesn't have anything wrong holding him back. If not here, then somewhere else."

At the Bengals' request, Fritts was examined a week ago by orthopedic surgeon Donald O'Donoghue in Oklahoma City.

"He explained that the patella (kneecap) was a little loose and there's still some scraping inside," Fritts said. "But that happens to every knee following surgery. There's no cartilage left.

"The doctor just said he was pretty pleased with it and that he couldn't see any reason why I couldn't play this year and play effectively."

Finley suspends Allen for week

Chicago (AP) — Dick Allen has been suspended for a week without pay by owner Charlie Finley of the Oakland A's for leaving a game.

Finley announced the suspension Monday night after the A's had defeated the Chicago White Sox 7-1. Finley said Allen decided to take a shower and left the clubhouse while the game still was going on.

"I saw Dick Allen in the shower in the sixth inning and that was all I wanted to see of Dick Allen," said Finley. "I didn't say anything to him. I called the manager, Bobby Winkles. He's his man. It's beneath my dignity to say anything to him."

Finley said that if his slumping slugger "doesn't like it, he can take a hike."

"I don't care if he ever shows up again," added Finley. "I was trying to show the world I could work with him, but I found out I was like the rest of the suckers. I hope he never shows up again."

Allen was the American League's Most Valuable Player in 1972 when he was with the White Sox. Prior to that he played for Philadelphia, St. Louis and Los Angeles. In the final two weeks of the 1974 campaign, Allen announced his "retirement" from baseball and left the White Sox.

U.S. wins track triangular

Turin, Italy (AP) — The Americans scored a one-two sweep in the pole vault-with Larry Jesse winning at 17 feet, 8½ inches-and a young American track and field team dominated the men's triangular meet with Britain and Italy which ended Tuesday night.

Doug Laz was second at 17-4¾ as the U. S. team won seven of the second night's 11 events but failed to dominate as expected in some of them.

The Americans beat Italy 127-94 and Britain 135-86. The team continues its European tour against West Germany and the Soviet Union in the following weeks.

The American women's team, winning four of Tuesday's six events, beat Italy 85-61 in their two-day meet.

Ron Livers won the triple jump Tuesday with a leap of 54-10, clearly beating fellow Americans Milan Tiff, 54-4½, and Olympic silver medalist James Butts, 53-3.

Steinbrenner takes charge of his Yanks

New York (AP) — Owner George Steinbrenner has stepped in to take complete charge of the turmoil-wracked New York Yankees.

Asked repeatedly who made the decision to retain Billy Martin as manager, the Tampa shipbuilder responded: "I did. It was my decision entirely."

Steinbrenner and President Gabe Paul flew to Detroit Monday to meet with players and try to clear the atmosphere before the Yankees took the field before the Monday night game against the Tigers, won by Detroit 2-1.

The meeting took place amid rumors that Martin was going to be sacked and possibly replaced by coach Yogi Berra because of his dugout yelling and attempts to fight outfielder Reggie Jackson Saturday.

"We were headed for complete collapse," Steinbrenner said. "Dissension on the team was terrible. We were getting no leadership and no fire. Something had to be done quickly."

Steinbrenner insisted that he had no intention of firing Martin, whom he regards as an outstanding manager, but he added that Martin, along with some others, had been derelict in carrying out his responsibilities.

"I told Billy he had to shape up, that he had to pay more attention to his responsibilities off the field as well as on the field, and do it immediately. He was very subdued and he has promised to contact me every day.

"I plan to keep in daily contact with the progress of the team."

Steinbrenner, who had been pictured as favoring Jackson in clashes with his manager, said this was absolutely not true.

The owner said he upbraided his $2.9 million outfielder for recent remarks on racism and told him that if he brought up the subject again "I will beat your head off."

"Jackson listened and took it," Steinbrenner said. Jackson had been quoted as saying, "I'm a black man with an IQ of 160 making $700,000 a year and they treat me like dirt. The Yankee pinstripes are Ruth and Gehrig and DiMaggio and Mantle. I'm just a black man to them who doesn't know how to be subservient."

At the Detroit meeting, the owner also sought out Thurman Munson, the team's most valuable player in 1976 and captain, and told him he thought he was shirking his captain's duties.

"I thought Jackson was the captain," Munson told Steinbrenner.

"You're the captain," Steinbrenner replied. "When I want Jackson to be my captain, I'll tell him and you too. You're the captain. Now be the captain."

Jackson and Munson had been involved in personal feuds growing out of a derogatory remark about Munson in a magazine article, in which the outfielder said: "This team. . . it all flows from me. I am the straw that stirs the drink."

Several players contacted Steinbrenner afterward and said that they thought the stern dressing down would prove to be what the team needed.

"The bickering had caused the morale to go down a great deal," Steinbrenner said.

Lincoln Swim Club does well

At 50-meters, Miss Graves won the backstroke and freestyle races in addition to winning the 100-meter freestyle and 200-meter individual medley.

Cox next Yank boss, not Berra or Howard?

By Bill Gleason
(c) Chicago Sun-Times

Chicago — As of Monday night, Billy Martin's sentence as manager and disciplinarian of the New York Yankees was extended by Gabe Paul, head of the Yankee parole board.

Martin was given extra time for bad behavior. It seems inevitable, however, that Martin soon would be freed of association with Reggie Jackson and others who are doing time in Yankee uniforms.

Almost everyone thinks the Yankees will give the job to Yogi Berra. They'll probably give it to coach Bobby Cox. They should give it to Elston Howard.

When Howard was reached yesterday at the Hotel Pontchartrain in Detroit where the fratricidal Yankees were awaiting a night game with the Tigers, Elston was not optimistic. He did not think that the opportunity he has awaited so patiently, the chance to manager in the major leagues, would be offered to him if or when Billy Martin was fired as manager of the Yankees.

Earlier in the day a close friend of Howard put Elston's chance of succeeding Martin in a word: "Impossible".

Why impossible?

"Because of the power structure," the friend said.

The baseball power structure?

"No, no, the Yankees power structure," the friend said. "I just don't think George Steinbrenner wants Elston as manager of the Yankees. Elston may manage a team in the majors, but it won't be the Yankees."

Howard did not argue against his friend's gloomy analysis. Elston the consummate catcher and sometimes outfielder was the first black to play for the Yankees and the first black coach in the American League. Those "firsts" had not helped his cause in the past and he wasn't hopeful that they would help him in the present.

"I think something is going to happen soon," Elston said, "But I don't know what. I saw George Steinbrenner come in here to the hotel last night."

Steinbrenner, tempestuous, garrulous and combative, is the owner of the Yankees. George is to baseball what Bob Irsay, owner of the Baltimore Colts, is to pro football. George is to ownership what Martin is to managing. At times Steinbrenner's strange conduct makes Charlie Finley seem calm and reasonable by comparison.

"Nobody in the front office has said anything to me," said Howard, who has grown accustomed to hearing nothing from any front office after a manager has been pushed out of his chair. "And I haven't told anybody I want the job."

Howard, who would have been a memorable Yankee if he were white or Latino, is a proud man. After a baseball lifetime with the Yankees, he didn't think it necessary to remind his bosses that he was a managerial condidate. Elston also is a nice guy. The second characteristic was the only clue that could be offered in the continuing mystery titled "The Passing Over of Elston Howard."

If "niceness" was the reason for Howard's rejection, that deserves a one-word reaction: Stupid. Elston is a very tough man. He was an amateur boxer in his youth and he probably can be as dynamic with his fists as Martin thinks he is.

"When the job was open last time, after Bill Virdon was fired, nobody in the front office said anything at all to me," Howard recalled.

That was on Aug. 2, 1975, Martin got the job the next day, on Oct. 1, 1973, the day after Ralph Houk resigned as manager, Howard was asked to come to Yankee Stadium. He thought he might be offered the job then. General manager Gabe Paul told Elston, instead, that the club was looking for someone with experience. The person chosen was Virdon, who had managed Pittsburgh of the National League through two seasons.

If there is such a thing as a career manager in the Yankee organization, which swings with the windmilling whims of Steinbrenner that man is Bobby Cox.

Often confused with famous Dodger Billy Cox, Bobby had only one thing in common with the other fellow. Bobby was a third baseman. He played two seasons with the Yankees, had a batting average of 225

Cox started managing in the Yankee chain at Ft. Lauderdale in 1971.

Tiant gem peps Boston

Baltimore (UPI) — Luis Tiant fired a two-hitter while George Scott and Jim Rice, Boston's 1-2 home run punch, blasted their 19th and 17th respectively in the fourth inning Tuesday night to power a 7-0 victory by the Red Sox over the Baltimore Orioles.

Tiant, 5-5, struck out five and walked three. He did not allow a batter to reach third base as he extended Baltimore's scoreless inning streak to 23. Lee May's infield single in the fourth inning and Pat Kelly's two-out double in the ninth were the only hits for Baltimore. It was Tiant's second shutout but only his second complete game in 14 starts.

Rice hit a solo homer off rookie Dennis Martinez with one out in the fourth. After Carlton Fisk coaxed a two-out walk, Scott took over the American League lead in homers with a shot into the right field bleachers.

Enterprise wins twice

Newport, R.I. (AP) — Enterprise, skippered by Lowell North, pulled off a pair of victories over Independence on Tuesday by surprising margins in preliminary trials for America's Cup defense candidates.

The America's Cup Committee shortened the second race to 7½ miles and ended the contest as the two 12-meter yachts rounded the third mark with Enterprise winning by 2 minutes and 41 seconds.

It was by far the biggest winning margin of the preliminary trials. The second widest margin came in Tuesday's first race when Enterprise took Independence by almost 2 minutes on a 13½-mile course.

The pair of victories for Enterprise gave North a 3-1 record against Independence going into Wednesday's Enterprise-Courageous matchup with Courageous holding a 2-0 lead in that series.

On Saturday, Enterprise and Independence traded victories in a two-race match.

Winds off Newport in Rhode Island Sound were light Tuesday, ranging from six to 10 miles per hour. Enterprise made her best showing on the windward legs of the course.

Rain washes out golf round

The heavy rains that drenched the Lincoln area Tuesday morning washed out the second round of the junior city boys golf tournament at Hillcrest Country Club.

A decision will be made Wednesday as the tournament moves to Pioneers Park as to whether the Hillcrest round will be replayed Friday as the final round or cancelled completely.

Pat Higgins and Craig Sundberg shared the first round lead as both fired 78s at the Country Club of Lincoln Monday.

Husker crew members win

Philadelphia, Pa. — Two University of Nebraska women crew members won silver medals here last weekend at the national championships.

Lisa Rhode, Hubbard, won her silver in the pair without coxswain event while Ann Rains, a native of Franklin, Ohio, was second in the quad event.

Nebraska women's coach Mark Stormberg was selected to compete on the United States crew team this summer in meets in Europe. Stormberg will row single scull and also eights.

Cauthen anxious to get back

New York (AP) — "I just want to get back riding," Steve Cauthen said Tuesday on a visit to the jockeys room at Belmont Park, the track where he was injured in a spill May 23.

The 17-year-old Kentuckian, who led the nation with 276 winners when he was hurt, exercised horses Tuesday morning. He will exercise some more Wednesday and is scheduled to ride seven mounts in a return to action Thursday.

A Tiger on his tail

Tiger Campbell of Vinton, Iowa, prepares to dismount as his noose tightens around the neck of the calf in the calf-roping event of the Iowa High School Rodeo Finals at Albia.

Football Cardinals lose charity softball game

New York (AP) — So there was Dan Dierdorf, this rough, tough National Football League offensive guard, standing there on the pitching mound, looking mean.

He peered in for the sign, swung into the windup and threw the ball. Then he ducked as it zipped past him for another hit and these pretty girls in short pants kept running around the bases.

Dierdorf, who usually spends his autumn Sundays bumping heads with defensive linemen, handled the embarrassment nicely. His NFL St. Louis Cardinals were playing a charity softball game against the ladies and were getting their collective ears pinned back.

"We beat them 14-3," smiled Pat Guenzler. "They kept hitting long fly balls but they couldn't handle the fast pitch at all."

In deference to the football players, the women—who play this game for a living—agreed to divide the game, half slow pitch, half fast pitch. It made no difference to Miss Guenzler. "I got a couple of hits," she said, "one against (defensive back) Tim Van Gelder and the other against Dierdorf."

That was Pat's normal production. She may be the very best hitter in the International Women's Professional Softball Association.

"Oh . . . I'm really just a singles hitter," she said, blushing a bit so her complexion matched her flaming red hair.

Last year, she led the league with a .395 average which included a league-leading eight triples and 22 doubles. "But no homers," she said, a little wistfully.

Miss Guenzler, the center fielder for the St. Louis Hummers in the six-team league, is hitting .323 this season. She said the football players shouldn't feel bad about the way they lost to the ladies.

"There's no way a major league baseball player could hit fast pitch softball the first time, either," she said. "They'd need some time to get used to it."

On the other hand, Pat would love a chance to swing against a Tom Seaver or Nolan Ryan. "I'd go up there and relax and just try to hit the ball where it's pitched, just like I do in our league."

Besides Miss Guenzler's St. Louis team, the women's softball league has franchises in Buffalo, Connecticut and three in California—Bakersfield, San Jose and Santa Ana. The annual All-Star game will be played at Buffalo Tuesday, July 26.

Pat is a Pete Rose type. "I like the way he plays . . . the head-first slide and all that." Often the fans react to her the way fans react to Rose when the Cincinnati Reds play on the road. "Yeah, they boo me sometime," she said.

She has never been thrown out of a game but thought she would be once when she had a knockdown, drag-out debate with an umpire. "I can't repeat the worst thing I ever said to an umpire," she smiled. "But he didn't throw me out, so I guess it wasn't so bad."

The short shorts worn by players give a sexy look to the league. Pat, however, does not wear makeup when she's playing.

"I wouldn't want to have to worry about an eyelash falling off when I slide into a base," she said.

Knepper got his chance

San Francisco (AP) — The cry is heard throughout the minor leagues: "If they'd just give me a chance in the majors, I'd show them I belong up there."

The guys with miniscule batting averages or mammoth earned-run averages all feel that, put into a big-league uniform, they'd again be the world-beaters they were before taking the big step into professional baseball.

Judging from the record of San Francisco's Bob Knepper, maybe there's something to the theory.

Three weeks ago, the 23-year-old left-hander was the guy with the 7.41 ERA for Phoenix of the Pacific Coast League. His five-hit shutout Sunday against the Pittsburgh Pirates, one of baseball's hardest hitting teams, put his National League ERA at 3.82 through 33 innings.

"At the start of the season, I was throwing pretty well. I won my first two games. Then I went out and gave up five runs in the first inning of my next game without getting anyone out. I lost six straight," he recalled. "At that point, I figured I wouldn't get a chance to pitch up here until maybe September."

But on May 26, Giants pitcher John Montefusco suffered a badly sprained ankle and the team summoned Knepper and his 3-6 PCL record.

"I said to myself, 'Here's the chance.' It was my lucky break, John's bad break," said Knepper.

Giants Manager Joe Altobelli says, "We knew he still had the arm. At Phoenix, he might have been pitching half-heartedly. I think he has more confidence now in the organization, which he thought might have given up on him."

Knepper pitched in four games—25 innings—with the Giants last September, posting a 1-2 record and a 3.24 ERA, after ending the PCL season with marks of 14-10 and 4.30. But this year he was back in Phoenix.

"It didn't look like he'd make our starting rotation, and we wanted him to pitch, not sit around," said Altobelli. "I hope he's learned something now; if we feel a player has talent, we're not going to hold him down."

Thin man looks to gain

New York (AP) — "Flaco Explosive" — the explosive thin man to English-speaking fight fans — is a 5-foot-9, 133-pounder named Alexis Arguello. He would like to fatten his reputation by winning two more world championships.

He already has held the featherweight title, which he had to give up because he was having trouble making the weight limit of 128 pounds.

Arguello will weigh about 133 Wednesday night when he fights Juan "Cocoa" Sanchez in Madison Square Garden, the arena called "the Cathedral of Boxing" by Arguello's manager, Dr. Eduardo Roman and referred to as "the Big House" by Arguello.

Even though he has put on some weight, Arguello's height still makes him flaco (skinny) as the title of a book about his life published in his native Nicaragua proclaims.

He doesn't look the "explosive" part, but his record shows 41 knockouts in 50 victories against just three losses.

"Arguello is a better puncher than Roberto Duran," says Teddy Brenner.

Duran, the lightweight champion called "Hands of Stone" because of his punching power, figures in Arguello's plans.

"I would like to win three title," said the first Nicaraguan to become a world boxing champion. Another native of the little Central American nation, Eddie Gazo, currently is the WBA junior middlweight champion.

Amphetamines 'work drug'

San Diego (UPI) — Amphetamines were thought of as a work-related drug by professional football players in the early 1970s, a psychiatrist testified Monday in the 12th day of hearings on whether his medical license should be revoked for gross negligence as psychiatrist for the San Diego Chargers.

Dr. Arnold J. Mandell, cochairman of the Department of Psychiatry at the UCSD Medical School, told a hearing officer that the Chargers thought use of drugs was "a matter of hanging on the edge of survival."

Mandell was a team psychiatrist for the Chargers during the 1972-73 seasons, and is being charged with gross negligence and excessively prescribing amphetamines to players.

A hearings officer is assembling evidence for presentation to the California Board of Quality Assurance, which has the power to revoke Mandell's license.

Mandell's attorney, Robert Baxley, earlier told the hearings officer that the Chargers' pharmacy was "the equivalent of a combat medical kit." And in testimony Monday Mandell said the club's pill purchases in 1968 and 1969 totalled 63,200, including 20,800 amphetamines.

"It was difficult to believe the pain involved with this profession," Mandell testified. "Players suffered periods of amnesia. Whole sides would be blue. Joints were swollen. Ankles were badly twisted."

And the pressure to play — from coach, management, and fans, forced the players to ask for the drugs, Mandell said. "The football player does not think amphetamine use is drug abuse. It's a work drug. The player associates it with survival. He has children to support, a mortgage to pay. He has no other way to make a living."

NHL set to officially elect president today

Chicago (UPI) — National Hockey League governors are expected to take routine action to amend their constitution and elect a new president Wednesday before considering a possible merger with the World Hockey Association.

The league virtually settled upon John Ziegler, counsel and alternate governor for the Detroit Red Wings, as president succeeding Clarence Campbell, who is giving up the post by his own choice after 31 years.

Election of Ziegler had been deferred in order to give the Governors time to meet the mandatory 10 day notice of proposed constitutional changes so that they could vote the proposals into the book before Ziegler takes office.

The proposed changes generally are routine and designed to clarify the position of the president in league meetings.

There was some speculation the merger talks would be short, but there also was a possibility they could be so prolonged the meeting would run for two days.

In order for the leagues to merge, not only would both have to accept the proposition but the Players' Association of both leagues also would be involved and have the legal backing through previous court suits to give the players a voice in any decision.

Catching up on dogs

Dog control has been a problem in my neighborhood since moving to Lincoln five years ago. I've made a semiannual census on dogs, what with a semiannual female in season.

I've written a lot of bad words about Lincoln's dog control services. What can you expect with five dogs panting at your fenced-in backyard door? Now things are different. I counted two dogs this last time around. My hat goes off to the Lincoln City Health Dept's Animal Control personnel.

Craig Schainost and his people have been working with a difficult problem in Lincoln. Stray dogs are commonplace. It's a fulltime, seven-day-a-week job. Some 200-250 calls per week come into the office. Four vans with six animal control officers (ACO's) have racked up a lot of miles for the infant operation.

"We've had a pretty good response from the public," Schainost said. "Of the over 200 calls last week, we had 41 calls where we found no animal. That means there were over 160 where we did."

Animals found are either delivered back to the owners, if the animals are tagged or licensed, or they are taken to the Humane Society. At the Humane Society, they await a 72-hour claiming period. If unclaimed by that time, the animals are put to sleep and disposed of.

Lots of dogs

"The stray dog population in Lincoln is apparently very high," according to Schainost. "We're mainly concerned with the dog problem. We don't go so far as to be fully equipped to handle every situation, like getting animals out of culverts or well up into trees. We try but the dogs are a fulltime job."

The service may be taking a little cut in availability in the coming months, however. A sizable chunk of its budget was taken away recently.

"We're still going to try to give seven-day service," Schainost said, "but we'll go from two ACO's on weekends to one and we had to let our weekend dispatcher go. We'll also operate on eight-hour days instead of 10. We've worked out arrangements to dispatch from the Police Dept. after hours."

The peak period of complaints concerning stray dogs arose through the months of April and May, then slacked off a little, according to Schainost He said the number of callers has come back up recently and has maintained a steady level in the past several weeks.

Problems of care

Schainost indicated the care of unidentified or untagged dogs is a problem, particularly if found dead.

"The Humane Society puts the unclaimed dogs to sleep and has incinerated them," he said. "This is a very costly method. Dead animals we cannot find the owners for are now being taken to the landfill site and buried. We're not being heartless. We're just trying to be practical. Omaha has done that for the past 10 years.

"Animals we can identify, we contact the owners and ask them what they want done with their dead animals. About half want to dispose of it themselves and half say take it to the landfill."

The live animals caught and identified are apparently getting the message back to their owners. Only about five percent of the dogs caught are repeat offenders.

Fine rates vary from $10-25 plus court costs, according to Schainost, so the lessons can be a little costly.

As a whole, the public response to the Animal Control Service has been good. With my neighborly dog census down from 16-20 to only two, I'd have to say someone merits a pat on the back for a job well done.

Trade rescues Reds' Auerbach

Philadelphia (AP) — Last Wednesday night, Rick Auerbach's baseball career was in a shambles. It has since been reborn.

The 27-year-old Auerbach, who went home rather than report to the minor leagues, was traded by the Texas Rangers to the Cincinnati Reds.

The Reds made the deal to fill the void left by utility infielder Doug Flynn's departure for the New York Mets.

When the Reds called Auerbach to tell him about the trade, he wasn't home. He was at a friend's house in Los Angeles.

"About midnight in Los Angeles, I got a call from my mother and she said (Reds Vice President) Dick Wagner was trying to get ahold of me," Auerbach said. "I told her, 'Don't be kidding me.' She wasn't. The Reds gave me a new life."

In 1976, Auerbach completed his third season as a member of the Los Angeles Dodgers, hitting .128.

Unhappy because he wasn't playing, he asked to be traded, and was, to the New York Mets.

"From the way the New York people talked I figured I had a pretty good chance to play," said Auerbach.

The infielder didn't figure on a spring filled with injuries. He wound up with a knot in his shoulder and then he pulled a hamstring muscle.

"I spent the whole spring on the trainer's table," he said.

The Mets sent him to Tidewater in the minors, but he was then sent along as the "player to be named later" in a trade with Texas.

Auerbach said he talked to the Rangers' front office and they assured him he shouldn't worry, they would eventually make room for him on their roster.

That meant, he worked out with the team, then sat in the stands to watch the games. Finally, Auerbach was informed he was being optioned to New Orleans, a St. Louis farm club.

"That's when I couldn't handle it any more. I'd been pushed around enough. I couldn't take it," he said.

He took the check given him for fare to New Orleans and used it to buy a ticket home.

He did not balk when the Rangers threatened to put him on the inactive list, then the disqualified list.

What Auerbach did was go fishing every day for two weeks. He was inactive for a month.

"The Rangers told me they'd asked waivers on me in both leagues and nobody wanted me. I didn't care," Auerbach said. "I was getting a little peace of mind. No money, but peace of mind."

Now, Auerbach has got money as the result of a trade he never thought would happen.

"I was not thinking about getting traded," he admitted.

Lincolnites sign for races

Des Moines, Iowa — Two veteran campaigners from Lincoln, Neb., have inked contracts for the running of the eight event racing program at the Iowa State Fairgrounds track here in Des Moines, June 29

Lonnie Jensen and Lloyd Reckman are both seasoned drivers with an enviable list of racing credentials. Together they mass a total of more than 40 years of speedway competition many of which were spent in the tough midwest and southwest.

The $6,000 racing feature has drawn the top entries from throughout the midwest.

Cornbelt Racing promoter, Dave Van Patten, expects a full field of entries and a torrid night of racing "The lineup for this special sprint program will be loaded with talented drivers and some of the best racing equipment in the nation," he said.

Qualification runs will start the evening off at 8 P M. The Fairgrounds half mile track has a slight bank and is ideal for evening sprint car racing.

Franco Harris puts faith in 'pyramid power'

New York (UPI) — Oakland Raiders beware!

"Pyramid power," that 3,000-year-old mystery that may perform miracles, has a new sports star believer, Franco Harris of the former super bowl champion Pittsburgh Steelers. And Harris says he's eager to turn the power on full force for some "payback" when the Steelers host the Raiders on sept. 25.

Kansas City pitcher Jim Colborn and his teammates George Brett and Darrell Porter wore plastic pyramids on top of their heads on Friday the 13th in May and the next day Colborn fired his first no-hitter. Red Kelly, ex-coach of the Toronto Maple Leafs, used to have his players sit on top of pyramids during games.

Harris, like all athletes, is hoping Pyramid Power will give him that little extra edge in a ballgame. Some try transcendental meditation (TM), others are into hypnosis.

Harris suffered through a player's nightmare last December when he was forced to watch helplessly on the sidelines, clutching his battered ribs, while his teammates were stomped by the Oakland Raiders 24-7 for a Super Bowl berth. Oakland went on to win the Super Bowl.

"It was probably one of the most helpless times in my life," Harris said. "I'd have to say it was the biggest game of my career and I just feel bad that I missed it. It was a championship game, a chance to go into a third Super Bowl. That's never really been done before, to win it three times."

Harris, a bruising running back at 6-foot-2, 225-pounds, wishes he had known about Pyramid Power sooner.

"It was about four weeks after the season before I recuperated from my rib injury," said Harris, who hurt his ribs in the 40-14 divisional playoff victory against Baltimore the week before Oakland. "Maybe if I was into it then, I would have went under a pyramid because it's supposed to have just tremendous healing powers. It's supposed to make the recuperating period just so much faster on that sort of thing. Maybe I could have played in the Oakland game.

"You know, we just got a big new whirlpool last year, now maybe we should get a big new pyramid and see what happens."

Stressing that he didn't know why or how Pyramid Power supposedly works or even what exactly it is capable of doing, Harris was careful not to make any hard claims for the mysterious force. It may do this or it's supposed to do that. People say that such and such happens. Curiously, the outside package of a plastic pyramid selling as "Pyramid-Power," makes the following statements: "May improve sex, Reported to heighten your intelligence, May prolong razor blade life."

Harris, who doesn't need longer razor blade life, would be happy if it helps the Steelers win their second game of the year, the one against the Raiders.

"We have some payback to do," Harris said "I don't know how other people feel, but I don't feel we're second to anybody. In the last five years you've seen some moments of great ball by the Steelers, but I have to say the best is still yet to come."

Nuernberger wants share of permit take

By Bob Reeves
Star Staff Writer

The city of Lincoln is pocketing too much money collected for building permits from county residents County Engineer Marv Nuernberger said Tuesday Nuernberger indicated he would like a share of the take

Subdivision house inspection fees are far higher than inspection costs, he told the Lancaster County Board

But when a subdivision wants the county to take over its roads maintenance Nuernberger s office must inspect the roads to see that they meet county standards

Rather than doing this at county expense Nuernberger wants reimbursement from the city

We re dealing with apples and oranges said Commissioner Jan Gauger who said she could not see how building inspection fees are related to road maintenance

You earmark money for the city of Lincoln Nuernberger said The board could require that a portion of that money be turned over to the County engineer s office Nuernberger said

No we don t earmark funds, ' Mrs Gauger explained A building permit applicant pays for the inspection which is performed by the city The fee is supposed to cover only inspection costs, she said

Nuernberger turned his back while she spoke He then reiterated his argument

We have a problem, and I thought we d be big enough to solve it he said

Board Chairman Bruce Hamilton intervened He agreed with Nuernberger that there is a problem if the city is collecting more money that it needs for the inspections, but he agreed with Mrs Gauger that the building inspection money could not be used for roads

' Maybe we need a separate fee'' for road inspections Hamilton said

The board took no action on the matter

In other business, the board approved an assessment on county land in Interstate Park on which the Highlands development northwest of Lincoln wants to lay a storm sewer

A portion of the park is owned by the city No easement is required on that land, but to put the sewer on county land will require either an easement or outright sale of the county s property to the city according to the county attorney s office

In either case an assessment for sale value will be required at a cost of about $200 Nuernberger said

Until the easement was requested, members of the county board were not aware that the county owned this piece of property

There are many other small parcels of land in Lincoln owned by the county, Nuernberger noted

By board action Tuesday, eight square miles north and east of Lincoln which have lacked fire protection are now a part of the Waverly fire district

The board voted to expand the district to include an area east of Lincoln city limits from Leighton St to one half mile north of Interstate 80

There is still a small area north of Lincoln which is not in a rural fire protection district

Residents of such areas cannot be assured of complete fire protection because they are not supporting a fire department with tax monies Waverly fire chief Harold Nansel told the board

Manor raising money to buy another bus

This is "Help us buy a bus!" week for Lancaster Manor One of the nursing home's two buses is "totally shot," according to activity coordinator Bob Esquivil, so the Manor has launched a series of money-raising projects to buy a new one

Monday there was a car wash Tuesday was "Feed Your Face Day," with hamburgers and hot dogs donated by local merchants

There will be an all day rummage sale Thursday and to 5 p m Friday there will be a bake sale featuring goodies baked by manor residents and staff, beginning at 2 30 p m

In addition, raffle tickets are being sold for a quilt sewn by a Manor resident

Esquivil estimates approximately $500 toward the $8,000 needed for the bus will be collected this week

Monetary donations also will be accepted, Esquivil said

Lancaster Manor near limit

Lancaster Manor is operating at 98% capacity, according to Garrett Williams, director of the home

Of 283 beds in the home, 277 are filled During May, 27 patients were discharged and 27 admitted In April, there were no beds available for additional male patients, Williams said

"If discharges and admissions weren t equal, we'd be up to the limit," he said

"We are approaching a bed crunch," he noted, but added that other nursing home facilities also have welfare beds, so there is no unserved demand at present

Hampton gives up duties at airport

Joe Hampton
busy on council

City Councilman Airport Authority board member Joe Hampton has decided his dual identity is too much so he s resigned as of July 1 from the airport board

The sheer work load is more than I anticipated Hampton said If you do your homework and research on what s set in front of you (on the City Council) it s a tremendous amount of work

Hampton resigned at the airport board s June meeting Tuesday

His replacement hasn t been picked though a first choice is being considered for the job, said Mayor Helen Boosalis Names have been considered for about three weeks she said since Hampton told her he would step down from the board

Hampton who has been on the board more than a decade leaves with two more years of his term to go

In other business it was announced that a nonstop route between Denver and Sacramento Calif will open soon for Frontier Airlines pending approval by the federal Civil Aeronautics Board

The new route could mean one stop service from Lincoln to California via Frontier

Five jetliners were purchased by Frontier in anticipation of new business from the route coupled with the Lincoln Chicago route set to open in November

The board also approved $500 to bring the Nebraska Chamber Orchestra to the airport as part of the festivities surrounding the Aug 12 landing of antique Spirit of America a replica of Charles Lindbergh s airplane used for the first air crossing of the Atlantic Ocean

In other business the board

— Approved extension of leases for three occupant companies on airport properties

— Budgeted $15 000 to prepare a building for the Corrections Department s new work release facilities for an annual lease rate of $48 900

— Approved the lease for the new restuarant owners

— Authorized sale of a chapel located on airport property and the possible auction of it's facilities

Juvenile center annoyed by non-resident vandals

Vandals from outside have been causing more damage recently at the Juvenile Attention Center than has been caused by center residents director Jon Hill reported Tuesday

Damage in May totalled $195 mostly accounted for by a large picture window broken by a BB-gun fired from outside, Hill said

Prowlers have also attempted to break into windows in the girls wing of the detention facility he said, by unscrewing the window frames

An additional $400 fence requested in next fiscal year s budget would help solve this problem, Hill told the County Board

Rather than residents trying to escape, the center staff has had problems with teenagers from outside trying to break in, Hill said

The Freeway Station next door has also experienced increased vandalism recently, Hill reported

Elevator has fire with 75-foot flames

Emmetsburg Iowa (UPI) — Fire that apparently was touched off by an explosion destroyed part of the Cargill Co grain elevator, but no one was injured

Witnesses said flames shot 75 feet into the air from the top of the elevator located about a block from the downtown area Firemen from Mallard and Graettinger were called to help Emmetsburg firefighters and they were at the scene for most of the day

County boards limited on salaries

A county board can t deny a salary granted by another county official for one of his employes unless the pay proposed by the official as unreasonable capricious or arbitrary

That ruling was handed down by the attorney general s office at the request of Sherman County Atty Frederick King of Loup City King wanted to know to what extent the county board can regulate salaries of employes who work for another elected county official

Asst Atty Gen Gary Schneider cited a court decision in which a Saline County judge had set the salary of an employe at $225 a month The county board however rejected that wage and set the salary at $190, in accordance with a salary schedule already established

The court ruled the county board erred, however since it could only disapprove of the salary if it was fixed in an arbitrary capricious or unreasonable manner

King also asked whether a county official has recourse should the county board refuse to adopt the budget submitted regarding salaries in the official s office

Schneider admitted he couldn t answer that question with any degree of certainty

A county board may he said revise alter increase or decrease the items contained in the budget but not without first having a hearing with the office or department affected

The official could seek court relief if the county board didn t appropriate enough money to enable the hiring of necessary clerks and assistants at a reasonable salary But Schreider added the reasonableness of the salary necessary might be determined from the standpoint of the county board

The opinion dealt only with clerks and assistants employed by county officials since the authority to set the salaries of deputies is invested with the county board the opinion stated

Designers' fall clothing may be a health hazard

By Jeanne Lesem

New York (UPI) — Instead of designers' initials, fall clothing this year ought to carry this warning:

Wearing spike-heeled shoes with full skirts at mid-calf or lower can be hazardous to your health.

The tall, thin heels alone are hard enough to walk in, without the additional danger of catching them in hems going up and down stairs and bus steps.

But some slim and shorter skirts, pants and coats appeared in the collections of the four members of the American Designers group who kicked off the second and final week of fall and winter showings for 1977 for the nation's fashion reporters.

The colors and fabrics are lush and beautiful. Don Sayres for Gamut repeated the same designs in colors ranging from shockingly bright cerise to a silvery gray. The gray sometimes was paired with darker shades or contrasted with rich, periwinkle blue or other bright or dark colors in separates representing the strong trends for fall:

Paisley prints, big, fringed shawls, hoods, shirts belted to create peplums, gigantic turtlenecks and cowl tops, featherweight jerseys, flannels and challis, many with border prints.

Many shades of gray flannel are around, along with plaids ranging from big and bright to tiny and heathery.

Ultrasuede is often used along for coats, jackets or dresses, but it also appears as trimming, especially in Jerry Silverman's designs for Shannon Rodgers. Wool crepe de chine and silk are used for shirts and ruffled or lace-trimmed blouses. And there's enough gold lame around to outshine the lights on Broadway.

Most slim shapes are velvet theater suits with soft, silky, bow-tied blouses, or in Adele Simpson's daywear or Ralph Lauren's strapless, bias cut satin tunic in pastel pants outfits.

Simpson's slender costumes include a cocoa-colored ultrasuede suit with boxy, mole-lined jacket and narrow skirt and a slim, bright blue melton coat worn with a striped jersey dress.

Nostalgia notes: Miss Simpson's "Roaring '20s" black fringed disco dress with string straps and an optional sash and Sayres's below-calf-length fox and raccoon wrap coats with huge shawl collars, also reminiscent of the '20s.

Coty-award winner Ralph Lauren promised reporters a shock:

Classic tennis shorts and tops in black, bound or trimmed with bright, primary colors.

Lauren's jackets and skirts tend to be bulky, although made with lightweight tweeds and flannels.

Noting that we live in a porterless, self-service world, Silverman opted for tweeds and other normally bulky fabrics in weights so light many move like real silk. His colors: a rusty red called raisin, sage and forest green, ivory, cordovan brown, slate blue paired with pale blue, navy, beige, a bright red called paprika, purple, cocoa and, mainly for late afternoon into evening, black. "Dresses," he wound up, "really are here to stay."

Law enforcement said problem on federal land

Washington (UPI) — If you vacation on federal land this summer your chances of falling victim to crime are small but increasing. But if you are, investigators said Tuesday you may have trouble getting a qualified law enforcement officer to help.

A report by Congress' General Accounting Office said no single law gives police powers to employes of the National Park Service, the Bureau of Land Management, the Forest Service, the Fish and Wildlife Service, the Army Corps of Engineers and the Tennessee Valley Authority. The Army and the TVA permit boating at dam sites.

As a result, at least 178 federal employes carried guns and a number made basically citizens' arrests — without legal authority — the GAO said. In other cases, injured people were unable to get help from the employes, because agency rules specifically prohibited them from getting involved.

The GAO said it surveyed 1,216 enforcement agents and "about 85% . . . saw criminal activity as a problem." Park Service records say there were six murders, 15 rapes and 17 armed robbery cases — and a total of 5,200 serious crimes — among 226 million visits in 1973.

Administration officials were less worried. The Office of Management and Budget said a nationwide study found "the crime rate in the parks is one-fifth the nationwide rate."

The Justice Department said, "Crime in these areas is no more of a problem than it is in the rural United States generally, although visitors would do well to exercise extra care for their valuables when out sightseeing. In general, crime is less of a problem in recreation areas than it is elsewhere in the United States."

The GAO said a greater problem was that some agency employes overstepped their enforcement authority in order to provide visitors with police services and at some recreation areas "the prevailing practice was to shy away from law enforcement activities concerning visitors."

Gunman seizes cars at Gateway

Police are looking for a lone gunman who commandeered two cars during separate incidents Sunday afternoon at Lincoln's Gateway Shopping Center.

Steven Swartz, 26, of 5501 Adams, told police that the man pointed a gun at him, got in his car and forced him to drive a short distance before ordering him out of the car. The gunman attempted to drive the car away but was unable to do so, police said.

Apparently frustrated, he approached a couple in another car, forced them out of the vehicle at gunpoint, and drove off in the car which later was recovered. The second car was stolen from Norma Schulte, 18, 641 S. 49th, and Tim Sobotta, 17, of 5434 Lexington.

Astrological Forecast

By Sidney Omarr

Wednesday, June 22, 1977

Capricorn persists, responds well during times of crisis, is generally loyal, has long memory, works with time, blueprints destiny at an early age, suffers slings and arrows of shattered love affairs, coms back, eventually gains loyal followers and allies. Capricorn whispers confidences to Sagittarius, is drawn to Leo, talks money with Aquarius, is subject to nightmares, prefers cats to dogs, loves animals but is very selective when choosing a pet. There have been more heavyweight boxing champions born under Capricorn than any other zodiacal sign. In July, emphasis for many Capricorns will be on legal affairs, special documents, agreements, partnerships — and marital status.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Get affairs in order. Bring priorities into focus. Spotlight on practical matters, employment, services, health, co-workers, those who share special interests. Capricorn, Cancer persons figure prominently and so does the number "8."

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Good Moon aspect coincides now with change, variety, stimulation of creative abilities, urges. Member of opposite sex is in scenario. You get rid of burden, gain more recognition, find ways to obtain better display, distribution. Aries, Virgo are very much in picture.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You get support from established sources. You can take plunge in direction of more independent action. Stress creativity, get to heart of matters. Become thoroughly familiar with territory, land, property. Yes, love does figure into scheme of events.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Movement, social activity, versatility, relatives, short trips, [illegible] mail — these are accented. Aquarius, Leo individuals figure prominently. Another Cancer may want you to [illegible] an order. [illegible] balance — and to exhibit sense of humor, fitness.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Accent on payments, collections, protection of valuables, elevating personal possessions. Study Cancer message for valid hint. Gemini, Sagittarius persons help you to win major point. Expand horizons, but overcome tendency to be extravagant. Yes, social event could be exciting.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Lunar cycle high — take initiative. Make new starts, emphasize personal appearance. Judgment, intuition are on target. Accent details, fine points — build on solid base. Begin your climb to more elevated position. Aquarius, Scorpio and Taurus play key roles.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Communications open — what was a secret, restricted becomes available. Your ability to interpret, to solve puzzle is enhanced. One you "respond to" does share your feelings. Know it and cast aside fears, doubts.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Accent on friends, desires, fulfillment. Family member outlines plans, goals. Talk of redecorating, possible change of residence is in picture. Taurus, Libra persons figure prominently — and so does the number "6."

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Emphasis on reputation, achievement, relations with superiors. One in authority wants to be reassured. You may be "let in on" secrets. Key is to keep confidences, to see people as they are, to express feelings without becoming maudlin.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Moon aspect is favorable, depicts chance to communicate, to expand horizons, to travel, to elucidate philosophy. Another Capricorn figures prominently. More authority, responsibility and advancement are indicated.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You gain more than originally anticipated. Money, partner, could be affected by "unusual circumstances." Finish rather than initiate project. Deal with Aries, Libra persons. Concern with lost articles, hidden objects is evident. Yes, you'll succeed in ridding yourself of burden.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Lie low — deal with "legal entanglements." New approach brings best results. Love and marriage could be in picture. Accent on publicity, public relations, finding common meeting ground with those who oppose your views.

IF JUNE 22nd IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you were on your own early, perhaps separated physically or psychologically from one or both parents. You succeed by being stubbornly independent. You fail by following the crowd. Scorpio persons play important roles in your life. October could be one of your most significant months of 1977, a year which sees you rediscovering principles, motives and getting a handle on who you are and your ultimate goal.

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.
